BOSTON.

It does seem awfully dull; but a little calculation, I think will establish as a fact, the idea that there is a substantial gain in the amount of trade now going on over and above the previous year's work. The trouble is that there are many more growers now represented in the market than ever before and the smaller ones bring in as much material as the larger ones did. The competition is getting to be something terrific. There are also less customers in number than formerly, I believe, but the individual customer buys more goods.

An assistance to the existing condition of things is that the street fakirs are carrying on more business than has been usual at this time of year. Growers usually manage to move all the fairly good material and a huge amount of poorer grades.

Good white asters and good colored pinks have been a bit shy lately, but the arrival of later crops of asters has now fixed up their part of that difficulty.

There is nothing for news outside of the sale of stalls at the Columbus avenue market. This is advertised to come off at 9 p. m., Saturday, September 12.

T. C. Thurlow had a fine showing of phloxes at Horticultural hall last Saturday.

We are in receipt of the volume containing the proceedings of the twelfth annual meeting of the American Carnation Society, at Brooklyn, February 19 and 20, 1903. ST. PAUL.

August business has been better than July, and as September is now at hand we do not look for a "dull season" this year. Flowers are improving in quality and increasing in quantity, but there are no surpluses, not even in sweet peas.

Unfortunately I could not attend the convention but those who went from here are loud in their praises of the hospitality shown by the brethren in Milwaukee and Chicago. The following attended from St. Paul: Chris. Hansen, son and daughter, Chris. Bussjaeger, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Lemke, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Swanson, Aug. Vogt and Peter Holm. Mr. and Mrs. Lemke remained over to attend the Sons of Hermann meeting.

The growers are quite generally through planting. N. C. Hansen has broken ground for a new house for carnations. He had a fine lot of sweet peas but many of them have not bloomed, owing to the cool, wet summer. Holm & Olson have commenced the erection of a plant house.

Chris. Hansen has a fine lot of carnations benched. Guardian Angel is the leading variety and considered the most profitable sort grown here. A bench of 1,000 Enchantress is in fine shape, being very strong and stocky. A small batch of Piersoni ferns shows the possibilities of that grand variety. In roses he has planted Liberty very largely, as that variety has always done well at this place.

The Warrendale greenhouses are in first-class condition, and well filled with first-class stock. Daybreak carnation is cultivated here quite extensively and is still considered one of the best and most profitable. All of the roses at this place are grown on their own roots and are certainly in very fine condition. A bench of Wootton brought back pleasant memories of that one-time popular variety.

F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, N. Y., was a recent caller.

Cool, damp nights have necessitated firing to prevent mildew, which has appeared in many places. The best soft coal is now worth $5 per ton, with prospects of a rise in the near future.

X. Y. Z.

DAYTON, O.—The Dayton Floral Company is adding to its Lehman street establishment.

AMES, IA.—William E. Curtis gave the Agricultural College here a two-column write-up in the Chicago Record-Herald of August 13. He said that the graduates of the horticultural department are in great demand as managers of fruit farms, nurseries and greenhouses.

(REGISTERED)

Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories, being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

1 lb. Tin Can.....	$.25
5 lb. Tin Can.....	1.00
25 lb. Sealed Box.....	4.50

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

We are up against a hot spell, and "nothing doing" as far as florists are concerned. A walk around the stores makes one want to get out of town. Between the convention and other summer trips, everyone we know is away.

It is not necessary to mention the condition of the market; it is simply out of condition. There is lots of everything, but nothing to do with it. Our people seem to think this one of the worst seasons in years. People have too much money and go away to spend it. Allow me to mention a few who are in that class: Lincoln I. Neff and family, at Atlantic City; A. W. Smith, Jr., and wife, Chautauqua; T. P. Langhans and family; Walter Breitenstein is away canoeing; John Baldinger, of T. M. Ulam & Co., was seen at Wylie Heights.

E. C. Ludwig and family; Gustav Ludwig and wife; Julius Ludwig and wife; A. R. Reineman; Christ Reiger and wife; Henry and George Blind; William Loew, at the convention; Ed. McCallum, of the Cut Flower Co., Du Bois, Pa.; Will Fitzsimmons and Wood, of Randolph & McClements, are taking in Atlantic City and other eastern points.

Notes.

Last Wednesday we had a very heavy storm with large hail in some sections, but have heard of no losses, as it seemed to travel around the greenhouse sections and not over them.

Most all growers in this vicinity report all stock benched for this year.

Hoo-Hoo.

For gracious sake stop the chrysanthemum advertisement. I am having to return money for plants ordered every day. The first insertion cleaned out the entire lot, and we had a pretty good bunch of them.—B. P. CRITCHELL, Cincinnati, O.

KIND WORDS NEVER DIE.

Chas. T. Siebert:—Please book my order for 100 lbs. of Zinc Never Rust Glazing Points. I have used five different kinds in the past 12 years, and none of them gave me satisfaction like yours. They will stay in, are easy to drive, no rights or lefts, will hold the glass in place, and do not rust away like all others I have used. Your Zinc Points are easy to take out when making repairs. I have used about 100 lbs. of your Zinc Points in the last two years, and am perfectly satisfied with them.

Yours truly, F. BURKI,

Chas. T. Siebert:—In our 25 years' experience with glazing points of all kinds, I can say your zinc points are the best to date.

CHAS. H. WILSON,
Mgr. for Grant-Wilson Floral Co.

Chas. T. Siebert:—I must say the Zinc Points have given great satisfaction. I have over 100 lbs. on my houses, and feel justified in stating that they are the best point on the market.

Yours respectfully,
W. K. PARTRIDGE, Florist.

Chas. T. Siebert:—I take pleasure in expressing satisfaction in using your Zinc Glazing Points. They have outlasted all others used, therefore are better and cheaper. Their merit should result in extended sales. Sincerely yours, THEO. F. BECKERT, Florist.

Charles T. Siebert:—I can truthfully say your Zinc Points are the best I ever used. They are easily driven and withdrawn and are stiff. Being straight on one side they can be driven accurately; consequently the breakage of glass is very small. I have some in use four years and they are still in their place as good as new.

W. S. ROEBECK.

Chas. T. Siebert:—You no doubt know by the 229 lbs. of Zinc Points we have ordered from you that we consider them the best on the market. We have four new houses under way, each 255 feet in length, and will soon have to place an order with you for quite a lot of more glazing points. We are, very truly,

MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.

Yours very truly, ROBERT C. BANCROFT.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Fall Propagating.

An old reminder of this date is that in early September is a good time to put in all the cuttings of zonale geraniums that you can get. If you have an abundance of stock to take cuttings from, then you can defer operations until the end of the month, and the cuttings will root rather more surely, but if short of stock, these cuttings taken off now will allow the old plants to break and give you another lot of cuttings before frost kills them. Don't put the cuttings in the propagating bed in sand; it is waste of labor. Pot them firmly in 2 or 2½-inch pots and give them a light bench. This has been with us such a wet summer that the zonale geraniums have made a soft growth and there is growth without much flower; so look out that you don't overwater or they will rot. A good watering when first potted will do for several days. In fact, keep them rather on the dry side until they make roots. The scented-leaved, variegated and bronze section, and, of course, the ivy-leaved, we prefer to put in sand. No hurry about this, except that you can't do everything in one week, and toward the end of September we occasionally get a killing frost.

This is a month of important work to the man who caters to the bedding plant business, and several things must be propagated, perhaps not important plants, but to be without them would be annoying next May. The trailing vincas should be put in the sand this month. They don't root quickly, but you need not lose one. The long growth now spreading on the ground gives you any amount of cuttings without using the very tender tips of the growth or the hard, woody end near the base of the plant. The vinca is perhaps our most reliable "vine" or drooping plant for vases and veranda boxes. Another plant used as a drooper is Abutilon vexillarium. Take neither the very young growth nor the hard part of the stem, and with plenty of water and shading on bright days they root surely, if not quickly.

The Cutting Bench Fungus.

Sometimes during September we get a spell of weather as hot as any week of the year and the "fungus of the cutting bed" makes its appearance. If conditions are right for the life and growth of this minute fungus it will appear and reappear, no matter how often you renew the sand. It is most easy to realize that if a cutting bed has once been infested with it that clearing out the sand and painting the side boards or tile with kerosene, lime or sulphur will not kill all the germs in the house, and after such precautions with new washed lake sand I have seen it appear again in a week. There were plenty of the spores roosting around, ready to begin operations directly conditions were favorable, and it is where conditions are right for the life of the fungus and wrong for the health of the cuttings that we are vexed and losers by its ravages.

I don't know that there are any more correct conditions for a propagating bed than those described by Peter Henderson in his "Practical Floriculture," published thirty-six years ago. That chapter dispelled a lot of fog and myths and bell glasses. Let me just say here that large growers, either of roses, carnations or mixed plants, can and do have a propagating house especially adapted for the purpose, and there is no excuse then for failure, but with the thousands who grow a little of many things for the local trade the propagating bed is in most cases a bench in a house where other things are grown, and for those I am writing. So the temperature of the house should not be over 50 degrees at night. Whether a large or a the path side, so that on a cold night when hard firing is necessary, the hinged board can be opened, letting the heat into the house and preventing the sand from getting too warm. To go into the question of what is the best relative heat of atmosphere and sand would be a long chapter, but I can safely say that if the temperature of the house at night is 50 degrees and the sand 60 to 65 degrees, it will suit admirably a whole lot of our soft-wooded plants.

Governor Roosevelt will tell you that he does not believe in any bottom heat for carnations, while Governor Wolcott will tell you that he prefers to keep his propagating bench for carnations 10 degrees warmer than the temperature of the house. A coleus will certainly be longer rooting in the sand at 60 and top at 50 degrees than at 80 and 70 degrees, respectively, but what I quoted above, 60 degrees for sand and 50 degrees for atmosphere, will root almost anything. A low temperature, with pure air by ventilation, is what the fungus won't thrive in, so choose a house for propagating where you are sure you won't be putting lilies, Ramblers or azaleas in to force out for winter.

Formula for Copper Solution.

Several times last winter I was asked

Jno. Breitmeyer's Sons' New Pink Seedling Rose.

small house, there should be plenty of ventilation at the ridge in case you need it. The bottom of the bed should be tiles. Slates give a greater heat to the sand, but that is no advantage. Beneath the bed should be either one or two steam pipes or three or four hot water pipes, and if these pipes are controlled by valves, it is a great advantage. The bed should be boarded in at back and front, so that the heat is confined beneath the bed, with a hinged board on by correspondents to give the formula of a copper solution which is death or prevention to the cutting bed fungus, and as I don't answer any more personal correspondence, I will give it once more. I will only say that I am not sure that this is just as I got it from some learned professor, but in practice it works O. K. The trouble is that after we know these things we lack the energy to practice them—the best among you, present company not excepted. Two quarts liquid ammonia, one pound sulphate of copper. Dissolve the copper in the ammonia in an earthen jar or iron pot. It will eat through tin or galvanized iron. When dissolved put away in a jar and cork up. Half a pint of this in twenty-five or thirty gallons of water will kill the fungus, and if no fungus is seen it is well to water the sand before every batch of cuttings is put in. "He that puts in a fresh lot of sand for every batch of cuttings hath money to burn, and the end of him shall be without sand."—Revelations XIX., 23.

Seasonable Work in Plant Houses.

This is about as late as it is advisable to put in the last batch of poinsettias. They root easily now, still quicker if you had a little bottom heat. As I have remarked before, the single plant two or three feet high is no longer in favor. It is the pans or azalea pots with five or six plants that our patrons want. You can't take the plants from the cutting bed and put them in the pans, because they will be most unlikely to grow at all evenly. Choose them after they have got started in 2½-inch pots. They will show then about what their growth is going to be.

It will soon be time to sow cyclamen seed, at any rate to procure the seed. I am not at liberty to advertise any particular strain, but there is such a difference! And to buy cheap seed of cyclamen is such a terrible mistake, as it is with all florists' flowers. If the last shift is not given to your cyclamen, it should be. A few extra sized plants may be desirable in 7 or 8-inch pots, but a 6-inch pot plant is what sells best. A light bench planted in tobacco stems is the soil, but it needs frequent spraying and shading for the first week.

If you planted on a bench in the spring a lot of Boston ferns, or still better, Piersoni or Anna Foster, and they have grown to be fine plants, you should lift them now. Soon the demand will begin, and it is not fair to lift a plant from the bench today and sell it tomorrow. They need not stop growing on account of lifting. Lift and pot and replant the bed with young stock, unless you want it for some more important stock, but I think it will be a long day before this beautiful and useful class of ferns is overdone.

That was a very practical paper on violet culture, read by Mr. Crabb, at Milwaukee, but he did not touch on the greatest pest we know of in their culture, the little black or brown aphid. It is a miserable, greasy little devil, unlike either the common greenfly or the blackfly of the chrysanthemums. Perhaps there are as many species of aphid in the world as there are religions, anyway, this violet enemy is hard to kill. Fine tobacco dust sprinkled into the crown of the plant is the best preventive we have found. Put it on after you have watered and the leaves have become dry, as it can remain there until you water again. This is the time that the fly is getting in his best licks, if there at all. For other points read Mr. Crabb's paper carefully.

A year ago at this time and many weeks later many of us were on the anxious seat, hoping that every day would be the end of the coal strike. In the aggregate the loss and injury to stock and the extortionate price of coal or other

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Feeding the Plants.

With the advent of September and the taking of the buds comes the necessity of encouraging the plants by means of a liquid fertilizer, or in some other manner, to help finish off the crop in good shape. I am aware that some growers make the soil rich at planting time and, with the possible exception of a light mulch of rotten manure, the plants get nothing else. So treated the plants produce very medium-sized flowers as compared with plants that are encouraged with liquid fertilizer, because by the time the growth is completed the soil is exhausted. The chrysanthemum is a gross feeder when well rooted, and when the bud is swelling is the time that the drain on the plant is heaviest and the feeding most effective.

Liquid made from sheep or cow droppings is most generally used. I have found that about a bushel of sheep manure with a good shovelful of soot placed in a sack, and soaked in a barrel will make a satisfactory brew and if not allowed to stand too long before being used the first time can be used for two or three waterings. Cow manure does not soak so well through a sack and should be put right into the water. Soot, on the other hand, unless it is scattered over the surface of the bed, should always be enclosed in a sack or it will float on the water and not soak properly. The soot I am referring to is, of course, the imported article, called Scotch soot, which is obtained from burning soft coal. The native soot contains less ammonia and is not so beneficial, though I believe it is sometimes used. Soot has a wonderful effect on the foliage, making it dark and healthy, and has the advantage of being perfectly safe.

Nitrate of soda and sulphate of ammonia are two chemical fertilizers largely used in feeding chrysanthemums. A 4-inch potful in fifty gallons of water is a safe proportion to use of either of these, and their judicious use will greatly improve the quality of the flowers.

In feeding the plants some care must be exercised, as varieties differ radically in the quantity they need. A very strong, vigorous variety, like Eaton, or the new Mrs. Thurkell, will not stand such heavy feeding as a more delicate grower, because their stronger rooting system may pump up more nourishment than the bud can assimilate. You will occasionally notice, if you are feeding heavily, that on the more vigorous kinds a bud will here and there partially sever itself from the stem as though some one had cut the stem half way through with a knife. This is nature's method of checking the excessive flow of sap and is a strong hint to stop feeding that particular variety. Feeding to excess, however, is seldom practiced by the commercial grower, although once in a while a grower trying to get some exhibition flowers oversteps the mark.

New Varieties.

The new kinds mentioned so highly in these notes last year are all making splendid growth and many of them will undoubtedly become leaders. None of our American varieties approach them in vigor and ease of culture, Millicent Richardson, Mrs. Thurkell, Mrs. T. W. Pockett and C. J. Salter being especially the place for them now. Little, if any, more shade will now be needed. An ideal cyclamen is one with compact, spreading leaves and the flowers well above the foliage. When you fire, a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees is about right. Bouvardias should be lifted early in the month and planted on a bench in five or six inches of rather light, rich soil. They are slow to get started in cool weather. If all the roots and fibers are saved in lifting, the bouvardia soon takes hold of fuel must have amounted to many thousands of dollars. A few were wise virgins and had their lamps trimmed, but the majority did not. This year we have fuel. If not cheap, it is at least plentiful. Don't be late in lighting your fires. It is not heat you want so much as a healthy circulation of air, which only a little fire heat can give. We lighted a big steam boiler a week ago for roses, and deeply regret that we ever let it out all summer. WILLIAM SCOTT.

noticeable. Some of the newest of the new varieties from the same source, Australia, are making even a finer record for growth and appearance than the varieties just named, and some world beaters will be exhibited this fall, unless I am greatly mistaken. They will be taken up later in these notes, as their virtues and vices become more manifest. It does certainly seem just at present that "Westward the star of empire takes its way," in the case of the chrysanthemum. Starting in China and Japan it spread to Europe, then here, and today I believe no varieties can touch the ones raised by Mr. Pockett in Australia. Nellie Pockett, T. Carrington and others of his earlier seedlings are still holding prominent places with us at the exhibition tables, which augers well for the future of the present novelties.

Undoubtedly the Australians are much favored by their climate, which makes an outdoor system of culture possible, and every variety that I have seen imported from there is strong and healthy. Now, in this last batch, we are promised varieties that beat for size anything yet sent out, and reds that love the sun instead of having to be shaded from it. H. J. Jones was really the first satisfactory red we ever grew that could be fed to make a large flower and not burn with the sun. H. J. Jones, after this year, will be nowhere, if present growth on new red varieties is any index to their future greatness. BRIAN BORU.

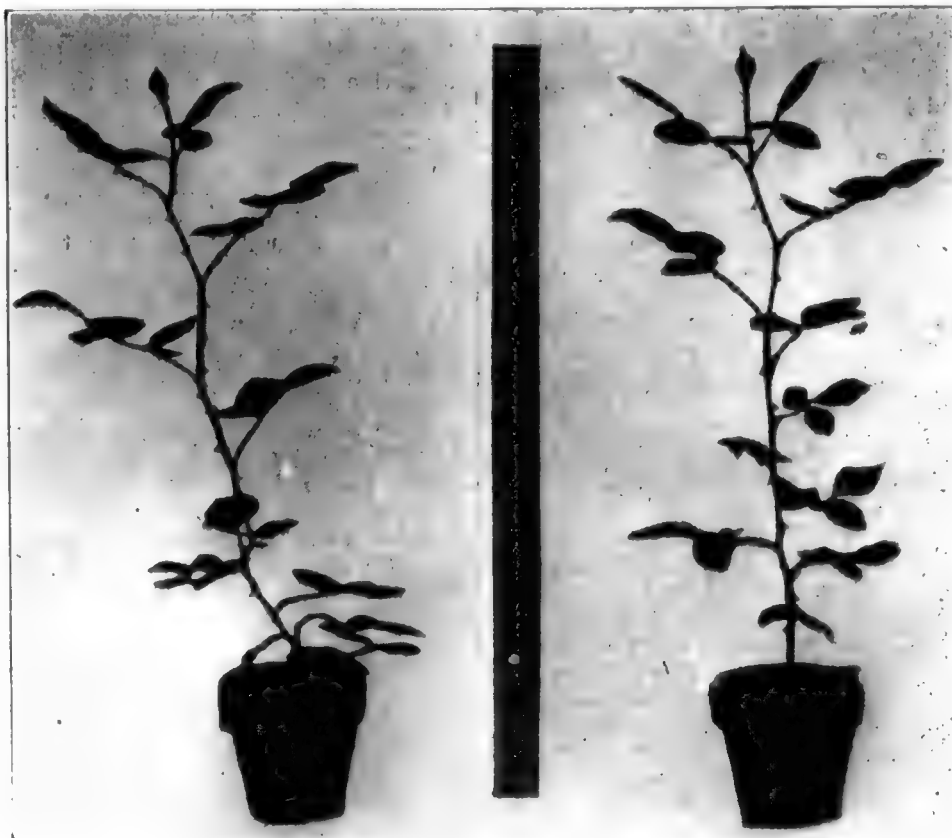

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

As the season of steady night firing approaches there is always a good deal of anxiety in store for the grower, for however well he may plan and manage during the day, he has to give the entire responsibility to the night fireman during a certain portion of the twenty-four hours, and to the manner in which this man performs his duties is due a good deal of the success or failure of the establishment.

In selecting a night fireman we must look for a man who thoroughly understands the art of firing, and who by study and practice has also mastered the art of keeping an even temperature by the intelligent manipulation of valves and ventilators. He must also be so much of a mechanic as to be able to do simple repairs. With these qualifications he must also combine a cheerful, obliging disposition, be trustworthy and able to exercise good common sense. But above all he must be strictly sober, else all the other qualities go for naught. Happy is the grower who has the services of such a man, as he can go to rest with the confidence that his orders will be strictly attended to. For the better guidance of the night man a thermometer should be placed convenient to each ventilating machine, and a card marked in plain figures, showing the temperature required, should be hung where it can be easily read.

The thermometers should be placed in neat wooden boxes and the boxes so placed that the sun cannot shine on the instrument at any time of the day. For the convenience of the men in charge during the day a card should be used showing the temperature desired during cloudy weather and giving the minimum and maximum required during sunshine.

Ino. Breitmeyer's Sons' New Pink Seedling Rose.

(Cuttings made March 17, Photographed May 30, 1903.)

This, while giving confidence to the help, also relieves the grower from a good deal of uneasy watchfulness.

It should be remembered that a dollar or so more in the week given to secure the services of a real good man is not thrown away, as a careless, ignorant, or incompetent night man can quickly and easily destroy the labor of a season.

The usual work of tying, disbudding, keeping the houses clean and the surface of the soil in good order will occupy a good deal of time.

Now that the nights are longer and the days cooler a close watch will have to be kept on greenfly, as these will now begin to multiply rapidly. Fumigating once a week will keep them in check among teas and their hybrids, but in Beauty houses it is safer to fumigate lightly twice a week for some time to come. This is better than to have to resort to heavy smoking, which is at all times hurtful, both to foliage and buds.

Those who have been forced to carry over a house or so for summer cutting, should now, if not already done, rest them at once. At this late season a very light pruning will suffice. Remove all the thin light wood and cut off the tops of the stronger growths. During the first two weeks after pruning the house should be kept moist, with night temperature not exceeding 55 degrees if possible.

Growers alive to their best interests will now see to the safe storage of their mulching material and winter potting soil so that they may have it in hearty condition when needed, thus doing away with the necessity of having to use cold, wet material, which is neither pleasant nor profitable.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Bench Culture.

If the surface soil is not broken up soon after the plants have become sufficiently established to begin the removal of shade, a green crust will form in which even weeds will not flourish. This is obviously a wrong condition and should be guarded against, else the air and sun being shut out from exerting their influence on the soil, it is liable to become sour.

If, perchance, press of work or other causes have prevented this operation being done at the proper time, apply a light coat of wood ashes between the rows just previous to breaking up.

Make a special point in cultivating, that the crack formed by the soil shrinking from the sides of the bench be disposed of by firm tamping. At the same time straighten up any plants which may be out of line, also pick off carefully any dead or diseased leaves, allowing neither these nor weeds to remain in the bench to decompose.

A careless man at this work will do a great amount of damage by wrenching the plants, too deep raking, knocking off young shoots and branches or plucking dead leaves as one would feathers from a hen, so choose men endowed with skill and patience and take a hand yourself.

The Use of Bone.

The main object in using bone is to furnish a supply of phosphoric acid, which is essential to the production of well developed blooms. It also contains nitrogen and ammonia, but the bench soil as brought in should be of such quality as will carry the plants through the trying period of establishment in new quarters without the addition of bone.

With early blooming sorts giving good quality of bloom and length of stem soon after housing, it is a saving of time and perhaps, commercially speaking, advisable to apply a small quantity previous to benching, working it in deeply, or, better still, sprinkled on a layer of soil near the bottom when filling the bench as related in my notes of June 11.

From a practical and economical standpoint it is best to have no needless fertilizers in the soil, and especially about the roots, during the time the efforts of the plant are directed solely towards adapting itself to new conditions and surroundings.

This is especially true when dealing with varieties impatient of disturbance at the root when lifting and consequent tardiness in getting restored to perfect root action, as the constant aim should be to maintain the proper balance between food supply and plant requirements at all times.

With this end in view and your knowledge of soil constituents when prepared, time of housing, size and health of plants and conditions generally, you will be able to decide when and what course to pursue. Our plan is to apply when the soil is a trifle on the dry side, at the rate of a 3-inch potful to a row of five or six plants, work in lightly and water at once. This first watering serves to start decomposition of the bone and, if it was so treated in preparation for the market as to render its fertilizing qualities quickly available, one or two subsequent waterings will carry them within reach of the roots.

Of course this application is not needed if your soil already contains a similar or larger quantity of bone however applied. This operation should not be confounded with top dressing, which may be in order some two months later, although it may serve an end of like nature.

There is a great difference in the value of the various brands of bone meal or flour on the market and while space forbids me going into the details of the process through which some of the best brands go, I venture the statement that most of the cheap brands have undergone such treatment as to render them practically odorless and I have yet to find an odorless fertilizer that possesses any lasting qualities or much value.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

MR. CARMODY'S HUMOR.

In my attempt to recall some of the features of the late convention I failed to mention Mr. Belzebub Carmody's most amusing address. I know that won't trouble my friend in the least, but there was one remark I take exception to.

First, let me say that in spite of several venerable anecdotes, no hearer enjoyed it more than the writer, and the large, attentive audience proves that amusement and merriment are what the majority are looking for. This is proper and natural; we do lots of hard thinking and working at home. We do not assemble as a society to discuss the transit of Venus, or woman suffrage, or the propagation of the gospel in foreign parts.

A feature like the address from Posey County was most welcome. Mr. Carmody is a natural wit, and it is when he is purely the original Carmody that he is greatly enjoyed. Natural wits are not always good story tellers, and good story tellers are by no means always wits. What I take issue with is Mr. Carmody's statement (of course, borrowed) that it takes a surgical operation to get a joke into an Englishman. If he had said a Scotchman he would not have been so far wrong. There is a dry humor about the Scotch, but their stories and jokes must always redound to the credit of the Scotchman, or it's no joke. However, there is a much more diversified range of character in the Scot than in the Englishman, so we won't enlarge on that, but merely say that we know several Scotchmen who kneely enjoy a joke or witticism and it takes no trepanning of their craniums to let it in.

They say the French are witty. Doubtless so, but unless we understand it in the original it cannot be appreciated. The translations of German wit that we have come across sound funny, but sadly lack spice. The Irishman, of all English speaking people, has undoubtedly the ready repartee and wit which is pure wit. And "Pat" cares little whether the laugh is on him or the other fellow, so long as he can give a ready, quick-witted reply. But best of all I like the wit we will call American—Mark Twain, Bret Harte, Eugene Field, Bill Nye and many others. Now, where did this American wit and humor evolve from. It certainly did not come from the Hollanders, who settled New York. No one accuses them of being witty. Irishmen, so numerous and prominent now, have been coming here only for the past sixty years. There were a few scattering ones before, but not enough to leave any mark on the national character. The Teutonic emigration began only about 1840, and the keen wit of New England was flourishing long before that, so where do we get the foundation of our wit? We all realize that there is a prolific and varied field of character in this country at this day, from which to draw inspiration for story and joke. The infant mind of the negro, the lately emancipated Hebrew, "Paddy from Cork," "Donald from the Highlands," the English rustic or duce, even the several types of the native born afford a vehicle for caricature from other types. Yet beneath all that there is a native, shrewd, sharp wit, and it came from New England and it was carried to the shores of New England by old Englishmen from the land that produced Shakespeare, Ben Johnson, Charles Lamb, Sidney Smith, Thackeray, the immortal Dickens and thousands more of witty men. Read Jerome K. Jerome's little book, "Three Men in the Boat, not to mention the dog," and see, Mr. Carmody, if you will say again what you said at Milwaukee. Even if your original wit and jokes do deal largely with skepticism of the infernal regions, brimstone and sulphur, I love to listen to you.

W. S.

SUBSTITUTES FOR COAL.

Their Comparative Efficiency in Use.

BY W. R. BEATTIE, WASHINGTON, D. C.

The use of greenhouse structures for growing plants for profit is limited practically to the last half century, and the problem of warming the atmosphere within these structures was one of the first to receive attention. I might mention that greenhouse heating began by the employment of organic matter packed tightly together, the heat thus generated being liberated and maintained a moderate temperature within the enclosure. Following this we have the stove and flue methods, then the hot water system with its open cement troughs, the cast iron pipe system with open expansion tanks, and at present hot water under pressure for small establishments, and steam in its latest adaptations for large ranges of commercial houses and conservatories.

It is scarcely necessary that allusion should be made to the phenomenally rapid growth of the greenhouse industry in the United States, except as a reminder that here is an industry that represents an important percentage in the total of agricultural production. That which fifty years ago was a novelty, and a luxury with most persons indulging therein, and a means of financial gain to a very few, has now reached the point where it represents the investment of millions of dollars capital and the employment of an army of people.

In the case of a scarcity of fuel it is possible for the management of the mill or factory to suspend operations, draw fires and water from the boilers, and close down for an indefinite period without particular loss except in the delay in filling orders. Not so with the grower of greenhouse products, for with him the lack of fuel for a single hour in excessively cold weather may result in the loss of his entire stock. This fact places the florist in a much more critical position during a fuel famine than are his neighbors, the manufacturers.

It is an old saying that "history repeats itself," and the past has shown that differences occasionally arise between capital and labor and these invariably result in a shortage of some of their products. There is no doubt but that there is plenty of fuel in this country to last for generations, but nature has stored it many miles from where man has contrived to use it, and emergencies must be provided for. For general use in most localities, and under ordinary conditions, there is no fuel that will compare with coal, either in price or results.

In the time and space allotted I will endeavor to point out some of the methods whereby a temporary shortage of coal may be bridged over, together with descriptions of special appliances used in connection therewith.

Coal, the Standard.

As coal is the principal source of the production of artificial heat, and so long as it remains the principal source, we will naturally adopt it as the standard by which to measure all other fuels. In order then that we may determine the relative value of the various substitutes for coal, it will be necessary, first, that we understand something of the heating power of the various grades of coal, and the methods of determining this efficiency.

In all our calculations we use the B. T. U. (British Thermal Unit) as our unit for measuring the heat given off by the combustion of any fuel. This unit is the amount of heat required to raise one pound of water one degree, at and from 32 degrees Fahrenheit. Reference is also made to the number of pounds of water evaporated from and at 212 degrees per pound of fuel, and per pound of actual combustible. The value of any fuel is measured by the number of heat units that its combustion will generate. Carbon and hydrogen represent the combustible portion of a fuel, and its heating value depends upon the proportion in which these elements are present. All solid fuels contain some moisture and more or less incombustible matter, either sulphur or ash. The anthracite coals contain a moderate percentage of moisture, are low in hydrogen, high in carbon, and moderately high in ash; these produce very little flame. Ordinary wood, on the other hand, is high in moisture, comparatively high in hydrogen, and low in carbon and ash.

The following table shows the comparative heating value of the various classes of coals:

Kind of Coal.	Carbon conten.	Volatile matter.	B.T.U. per lb.	Water evap. per lb.
Anthracite	86.00	3.86	13,220	13.66 lbs.
Semi-Bitumin's	73.84	18.56	14,730	14.08 lbs.
Bituminous	55.00	35.00	13,000	13.50 lbs.
Lignite	38.78	40.19	9,670	10.00 lbs.

It will be observed that as we pass from anthracite to the softer grades of coal, as the carbon decreases the volatile matter increases, and the heating value decreases, except in certain of the semi-bituminous coals found in Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia, which contain a higher number of heat units and are capable of evaporating more water per pound than are the anthracite coals. The highest of these is known as Broad Top, Pa., containing 14,820 heat units per pound of coal.

By reference to the above table of heating values of the various classes of coals, we can ascertain the comparative cost per thousand heat units at the prices of coal delivered. Assuming the price per ton for the various coals to be that given in the following table, we have:

Kind of Coal.	Price per ton of 2240 lbs.	Price per lb.	Cost per 1000 B.T.U.
Anthracite	$6.50	.290 ct.	.021936 ct.
Semi-Bituminous	4.50	.200 ct.	.013578 ct.
Bituminous	3.50	.156 ct.	.012018 ct.

These figures, however, would not be comparable with actual results accomplished by burning coal under the ordinary boiler, for they are based upon the theoretical heating efficiency of the coal according to chemical analysis. The results obtained in burning coal as reported by the United States Naval Fuel Board were as an average for seventeen tests about eight pounds of water evaporated per pound of coal burned. Upon this basis the foregoing table should be corrected to read as follows:

Kind of Coal.	Price per ton.	Price per lb.	Cost of evap. 1 lb. water
Anthracite	$6.50	.290 ct.	.036 ct.
Semi-Bituminous	4.50	.200 ct.	.025 ct.
Bituminous	3.50	.156 ct.	.0195 ct.

It should be stated, however, that the above included the raising the water from about 130 degrees F. and evaporating it under a pressure of about 280 pounds. This would require a greater expenditure of energy and would in a measure compensate for the losses that are common when using coal under ordinary conditions.

Substitutes for Coal.

Among the solid fuels that might be named under this head are wood, peat, charcoal, coke, sawdust, spent tanbark, wheat or rye straw, bagasse or crushed cane, corn fodder, corn cobs, and cotton stems. Of the gaseous fuels, natural gas, blast furnace gas, water gas and coal or illuminating gas. In the line of liquid fuels there are two, petroleum in its various forms and alcohol.

Where plenty of wood is available, it is perhaps the best and in the end the cheapest substitute for coal, principally because no special appliances are required for burning it. Perfectly dry hardwood contains almost as many heat units per pound as does coal, and two cords of ordinary fire wood are generally considered to be equal to one ton of bituminous coal, so far as heating efficiency is concerned. The heating efficiency of wood varies with the kind, as well as with the amount of moisture it contains. Where an excessive amount of moisture is present in the wood, a large amount of heat is consumed in vaporizing this moisture. This heat would otherwise be expended in doing the work for which the fuel is being burned.

In some parts of the country there are large beds of peat that might be used as fuel, especially if put up in the form of briquettes. The manufacture and sale of briquettes has become an important industry in some of the foreign countries, where many kinds of fuel are wanting. Various materials are used in the manufacture of these briquettes, among which are lignite, coal dust and screenings, peat, coal tar and products, coke, charcoal and crude petroleum. Although almost any of the fuels, except the gaseous, may be made into briquettes, the principal use for this method is the transforming of such substances as peat, coal dust and fine slack into a form in which it may be readily burned. Peat usually contains a high percentage of moisture, 10 per cent when thoroughly dried, and 25 per cent when air dried. About 30 per cent of its available heat is consumed in evaporating this moisture. Peat also contains a large amount of ash, 15 per cent on an average, which very greatly diminishes its fuel value. It is, however, about equivalent to good wood as a heat producer, evaporating about six and one-half pounds of water to the pound of peat fed into the furnace.

If charcoal be burned in ovens, the by-products of its manufacture make the process profitable, but owing to the limited quantity of charcoal produced it can scarcely be considered as a regular fuel. There can be no advantage connected with the use of charcoal for heat production, as it contains as a rule only about 60 per cent of the original heating value of the wood, and it is more economical to burn the wood itself. Charcoal has about the same heating efficiency as coke and anthracite coal.

Coke is prepared by the distillation of bituminous coal in ovens or retorts. Unfortunately the same conditions that govern the output of coal also control the production and shipment of coke, and it cannot be depended upon for use as a substitute for coal. Coke has about the same heating value per pound as anthracite coal, and burns more freely, but does not last so long in the furnace.

Sawdust can be utilized for fuel, but to get the best results it should be first dried, then burned in a specially constructed furnace. The quantity of sawdust available, however, is not sufficient to warrant our giving it any particular attention. With about 50 per cent of moisture present, and under good draught, sawdust has given an evaporation of four pounds of water, or about 4,750 heat units, per pound of fuel. Spent tanbark is similar to and gives about the same results as sawdust. In the use of both of these fuels it would be advisable to dry them as thoroughly as possible, and then burn them with a small amount of semi-bituminous or bituminous coal to carry the fire.

Either wheat or rye straw has an application as a fuel wherever it is very plentiful, three and one-half pounds being equal to one pound of coal. Since we have assumed in our table, showing the cost of evaporating one pound of water, that semi-bituminous coal cost $4.50 per ton of 2,240 pounds, and if it require three and one-half pounds of straw to do the work of one pound of coal, 7,840 pounds of straw will be required to equal one ton of coal. It would be necessary therefore to purchase straw at 5.74 cents per hundred weight, or about $1.15 per ton, in order that the cost might be equal.

Corn fodder and cotton stems might be placed in about the same class as straw and cannot be classed as of any particular importance as fuels. Corn cobs, where available in any quantity, can be used to good advantage. No data is available as to the effectiveness of cobs, but experience shows that they are very efficient as a steam generator. Bagasse or crushed cane is often used as fuel, but to be properly burned it requires either to be first dried or else in a furnace that is adapted to its use.

This practically covers the range of solid fuels, except perhaps a few of minor importance, found in isolated locations only.

Gaseous Fuels.

Through certain sections of the United States there is to be found an abundance of natural gas. Where it occurs in great quantities it is even cheaper than coal. It is usually supplied on the basis of the cost of doing the same work with coal, and as it requires very little attention it makes a very desirable fuel. Very little is known regarding the thermal efficiency of natural gas and it varies greatly in different localities and between different wells in the same locality. It is estimated, however, that 30,000 cubic feet are required to equal one ton of the best coal. With coal at $4.50 per ton, natural gas would have to sell at 15 cents per thousand cubic feet to be on an equality with coal; however, the price would be comparable at 20 cents per thousand, since no fireman is required, at least not for full time, and there are no ashes to handle.

Where government buildings are heated by natural gas, the contracts are let upon the basis of the coal required to do the same work, the gas company agreeing to maintain the proper temperature within the building and to supply coal and the necessary firemen in case the gas should fall at any time during the year. Where natural gas is used as the regular fuel it is always wise to have a small supply of coal on hand, as the supply of gas is occasionally cut off by breaks in the main pipe line.

Coal or illuminating gas is produced by heating bituminous coal in air-tight retorts.

ble to apply a small quantity previous to benching, working it in deeply, or, better still, sprinkled on a layer of soil near the bottom when filling the bench as related in my notes of June 11.

From a practical and economical standpoint it is best to have no needless fertilizers in the soil, and especially about the roots, during the time the efforts of the plant are directed solely towards adapting itself to new conditions and surroundings.

This is especially true when dealing with varieties impatient of disturbance at the root when lifting, and consequent tardiness in getting restored to perfect root action, as the constant aim should be to maintain the proper balance between food supply and plant requirements at all times.

With this end in view and your knowledge of soil constituents when prepared, time of housing, size and health of plants and conditions generally, you will be able to decide when and what course to pursue. Our plan is to apply when the soil is a trifle on the dry side, at the rate of a 3-inch pottful to a row of five or six plants, work in lightly and water at once. This first watering serves to start decomposition of the bone and, if it was so treated in preparation for the market as to render its fertilizing qualities quickly available, one or two subsequent waterings will carry them within reach of the roots.

Of course this application is not needed if your soil already contains a similar or larger quantity of bone however applied. This operation should not be confounded with top dressing, which may be in order some two months later, although it may serve an end of like nature.

There is a great difference in the value of the various brands of bone meal on flour on the market and while space forbids me going into the details of the process through which some of the best brands go, I venture the statement that most of the cheap brands have undergone such treatment as to render them practically odorless and I have yet to find an odorless fertilizer that possesses any lasting qualities or much value.

MR. CARMODY'S HUMOR.

In my attempt to recall some of the features of the late convention I failed to mention Mr. Belzebub Carmody's most amusing address. I know that won't trouble my friend in the least, but there was one remark I take exception to.

First, let me say that in spite of several venerable anecdotes, no hearer enjoyed it more than the writer, and the large, attentive audience proves that amusement and merriment are what the majority are looking for. This is proper and natural; we do lots of hard thinking and working at home. We do not assemble as a society to discuss the transit of Venus, or woman suffrage, or the propagation of the gospel in foreign parts.

A feature like the address from Posey County was most welcome. Mr. Carmody is a natural wit, and it is when he is purely the original Carmody that he is greatly enjoyed. Natural wits are not always good story tellers, and good story tellers are by no means always wits. What I take issue with is Mr. Carmody's statement (of course, borrowed) that it takes a surgical operation to get a joke into an Englishman. If he had said a Scotchman he would not have been so far wrong. There is a dry humor about the Scotch, but their stories and jokes must always redound to the credit of the Scotchman, or it's no joke. However, there is a much more diversified range of character in the Scot than in the Englishman, so we won't enlarge on that, but merely say that we know several Scotchmen who keenly enjoy a joke or witticism and it takes no trepanning of their craniums to let it in.

They say the French are witty. Doubtless so, but unless we understand it in the original it cannot be appreciated. The translations of German wit that we have come across sound funny, but sadly lack spice. The Irishman, of all English-speaking people, has undoubtedly the ready repartee and wit which is pure wit. And "Pat" cares little whether the laugh is on him or the other fellow, so long as he can give a ready, quick, witted reply. But best of all I like the wit we will call American. Mark Twain, Bret Harte, Eugene Field, Bill Nye and many others. Now, where did this American wit and humor evolve from. It certainly did not come from the Hollanders, who settled New York. No one accuses them of being witty. Irishmen, so numerous and prominent now, have been coming here only for the past sixty years. There were a few scattering ones before, but not enough to leave any mark on the national character. The Teutonic emigration began only about 1840, and the keen wit of New England was flourishing long before that, so where do we get the foundation of our wit? We all realize that there is a prolific and varied field of character in this country at a day, from which to draw inspiration, story and joke. The infant mind of negro, the lately emancipated Hebrew, "Paddy from Cork," "Donald from the Highlands," the English rustic or even the several types of the native Indian afford a vehicle for caricature from all types. Yet beneath all that there is a native, shrewd, sharp wit, and it came from New England and it was carried to the shores of New England by old Englishmen from the land that produced Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, Charles Lamb, Sidney Smith, Thackeray, the immortal Dickens and thousands more of wit men. Read Jerome K. Jerome's little book, "Three Men in the Boat," not mention the dog," and see, Mr. Carmody, if you will say again what you said at Milwaukee. Even if your original wit and jokes do deal largely with skepticism of the infernal regions, brimstone and sulphur, I love to listen to you. W. S.

SUBSTITUTES FOR COAL.

Their Comparative Efficiency in Use.

BY W. R. RUATTEL, WASHINGTON, D. C.

The use of greenhouse structures for growing plants for profit is limited practically to the last half century, and the problem of warming the atmosphere within these structures was one of the first to receive attention. I might mention that greenhouse heating began by the employment of organic matter packed tightly together, the heat thus generated being liberated and maintained a moderate temperature within the enclosure. Following this we have the stove and flue methods, then the hot water system with its open cement troughs, the cast iron pipe system with open expansion tanks, and at present hot water under pressure for small establishments, and steam in its latest adaptations for large ranges of commercial houses and conservatories.

It is scarcely necessary that allusion should be made to the phenomenally rapid growth of the greenhouse industry in the United States, except as a reminder that here is an industry that represents an important percentage in the total of agricultural production. That which fifty years ago was a novelty, and a luxury with most persons indulging therein, and a means of financial gain to a very few, has now reached the point where it represents the investment of millions of dollars capital, and the employment of an army of people.

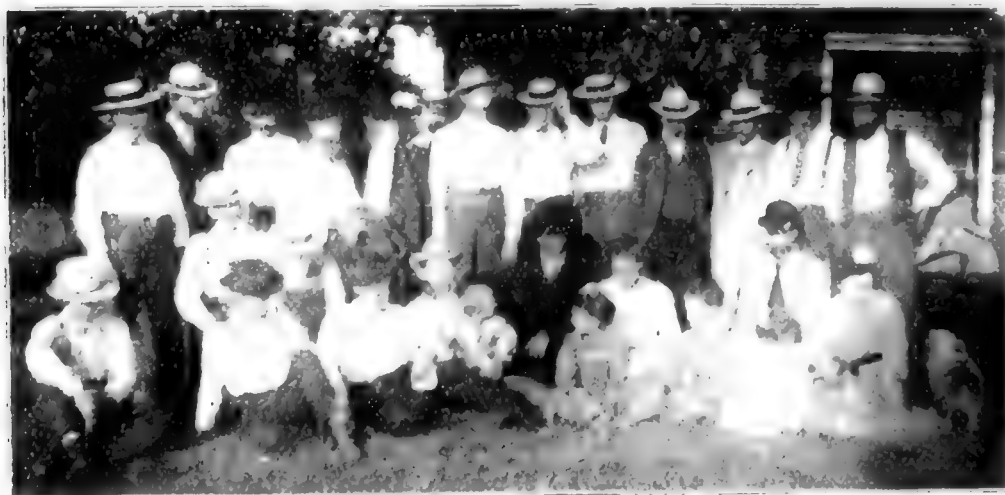

In the case of a scarcity of fuel it is possible for the management of the mill or factory to suspend operations, draw fire and water from the boilers, and close down for an indefinite period without particular loss except in the delay in filling order. Not so with the grower of greenhouse products, for with him the lack of fuel for a single hour in excessively cold weather may result in the loss of his entire stock. This fact places the florist in a much more critical position during a fuel famine than are his neighbors, the manufacturers.

It is an old saying that "history repeats itself," and the past has shown that differences occasionally arise between capital and labor and these invariably result in a shortage of some of their products. There is doubt but that there is plenty of fuel in this country to last for generations, but nature has stored it many miles from where man has contrived to use it, and emergencies must be provided for. For general use in most localities, and under ordinary conditions, there is no fuel that will compare with coal, either in price or results.

something of the heating power of the various grades of coal, and the methods of determining this efficiency.

In all our calculations we use the B. T. U. (British Thermal Unit) as our unit for measuring the heat given off by the combustion of any fuel. Kind of Coal.	Carbon content.	Volatile matter.	B.T.U. per lb.	Water evap. per lb.
Anthracite	86.00	13.80	13,220	13.66 lbs.
Semi-bituminous	73.84	18.56	14,730	14.08 lbs.
Bituminous	55.00	35.00	15,000	15.50 lbs.

It will be observed that as we pass from anthracite to the softer grades of coal, as the carbon decreases the volatile matter increases, and the heating value decreases, except in certain of the semi-bituminous coals found in Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia, which contain a higher number of heat units and are capable of evaporating more water per pound than are the anthracite coals. This practically covers the range of solid fuels, except perhaps a few of minor importance, found in isolated locations only.

Gaseous Fuels.

Through certain sections of the United States there is to be found an abundance of natural gas. Where it occurs in great quantities it is even cheaper than coal. It is usually supplied on the basis of the cost of doing the same work with coal, and as it requires very little attention it makes a very desirable fuel. Very little is known regarding the thermal efficiency of natural gas and it varies greatly in different localities, and between different wells in the same locality. It is estimated, however, that 30,000 cubic feet are required to equal one ton of the best coal. With coal at $4.50 per ton, natural gas would have to sell at 15 cents per thousand cubic feet to be on an equality with coal; however, the price would be comparable at 20 cents per thousand, since no fireman is required, at least not for full time, and there are no ashes to handle.

Where government buildings are heated by natural gas, the contracts are let upon the basis of the coal required to do the same work, the gas company agreeing to maintain the proper temperature within the building and to supply coal and the necessary firemen in case the gas should fail at any time during the year. Where natural gas is used as the regular fuel it is always wise to have a small supply of coal on hand, as the supply of gas is occasionally cut off by breaks in the main pipe line.

Coal or illuminating gas is produced by heating bituminous coal in one of two ways.

Coal gas contains only about 20 per cent of the heating value of coal, and could not profitably be used except in an extreme emergency. Its production, like coke, is dependent upon the output and delivery of coal, so cannot be regarded as a reliable substitute for coal.

Blast furnace gas is that which is given off by the partial burning of coal in a blast furnace. This gas usually represents about 60 per cent of the heating value of the coal; its composition, however, is irregular and its use practically limited to the firing of boilers connected with the blast furnace establishment.

Water gas is produced by passing water vapor or steam over hot coal; this process produces a gas containing about 58 per cent of the heating value of the coal.

Coal Gas.

There is a system of gas production from coal, now in use in England and two or three places in this country, known as the Mond system, by which it is claimed a great saving of coal is secured. As the difficulties of securing a sufficient supply of coal increase, the consumer will learn to adopt methods whereby greater economy may be effected. In the production of Mond gas a very costly plant is necessary and its use would only be possible in large communities where the interests were largely in common. It is claimed by this company that in the production of power they have attained the ideal of "one horse-power, one hour, one pound of coal." This, however, cannot be realized by burning the gas under boilers, and may be possible only by converting the gas directly into power by means of gas engines.

Mond gas is a highly efficient form of water gas, containing upwards of 80 per cent of the heating value of the coal. The gas contains about 140 heat units per cubic foot, and a gross ton of rough slack coal produces 140,000 cubic feet of gas, or 19,600,000 heat units to the ton as compared with 32,995,200 heat units in a ton of the best semi-bituminous coal, or 29,120,000 heat units in ordinary bituminous coal. Although a greater number of heat units are contained in a ton of coal than in the gas produced from a ton of coal, the heat contained in the gas is much more available than that in the coal, as shown by the results obtained in the recent tests made by the Naval Fuel Board, in which only about half the heating value of coal was realized. It is intended, however, that this gas shall be produced from the coal screenings and the waste products, which are usually sold very cheaply, and it is claimed that a ton of the poorest slack will produce as much gas as a ton of lump coal of the same grade.

By comparing the data already given it will readily be seen that aside from wood and natural gas, where it can be obtained, there is very little among the solid and gaseous fuels that can be depended upon as substitutes for coal. We now turn our attention to the liquid fuels, of which there are but two that are worthy of consideration; these are petroleum, either as it comes from the well, or some of its products, and alcohol. The present supply and the methods of the manufacture of alcohol would not warrant its extensive use as a fuel, but the time may not be far distant when it may be produced in great quantities from plants, perhaps ten to fifteen tons from an acre of ground. The thermal efficiency of alcohol is not exceptionally high, being about 12,600 units per pound, or 2,000 units less than the best semi-bituminous coal. Alcohol is exceptionally efficient as a fuel owing to the fact that most of the heat is available and very little is lost in the process of combustion.

Petroleum as Fuel.

We now come to the consideration of the most important of all the substitutes for coal, in fact the only substitute aside from wood, that reaches any degree of comparison. During the scarcity of coal last year there were many attempts made to replace coal with oil, some few of which were rather satisfactory. There is no longer any doubt regarding the mechanical part of oil burning, but the expense connected therewith is so much greater than with the use of coal as to make it impractical under most circumstances.

Last year an oil burning test was made at the Bureau of Printing and Engraving at Washington, under the direction of the officials of the Treasury Department. This test was made under a 250 horse-power boiler, and the oil was burned by means of two "Branch" burners. The report upon this test reads as follows: "The result of the test shows that 13.8 pounds of water were evaporated from and at 212° F. per pound of oil. That the total amount of oil consumed was 3,323 pounds, which at 320 pounds per barrel, makes the cost, at $1 per barrel, $10.40, and that the amount of coal necessary to evaporate the same quantity of water as was evaporated by the oil, assuming eleven pounds of water to the pound of coal would be 4,351.3 pounds, which at $4 per ton would make the corresponding cost of coal $7.76."

In the catalogue issued by the Babcock & Wilcox Company, we find the following statement regarding the relative value of petroleum and coal: "Petroleum has a heating capacity, when fully burned, equal to from 21,000 to 22,000 per pound, or say 50 per cent more than coal. But, owing to the ability to burn it with less losses, it has been found, through extended experiments, that under the same boilers and doing the same work a pound of petroleum is equal to 1.8 pounds of coal. The experiments on locomotives in Russia have shown practically the same value, or 1.77. Now, a gallon of petroleum weighs 6.7 pounds (though the standard buying and selling weight is 6.5 pounds), and therefore an actual gallon of petroleum is equivalent under a boiler to twelve pounds of coal, and 190 standard gallons are equal to a gross ton of coal. It is very easy with these data to determine the relative cost.

"At the wells, if the oil is worth say 2 cents per gallon, the cost is equivalent to $3.80 per ton for coal at the same place, while say at 3 cents per gallon, the lowest price at which it can be delivered in the vicinity of New York, it costs the same as coal at $5.70 per ton. The Standard Oil Company estimates that 173 gallons are equal to a gross ton of coal, allowing for incidental savings, as in grate bars, carting ashes, attendance, etc."

The experiments just completed by the Naval Fuel Board are the most comprehensive and thorough of any that have ever been conducted. As an average for fourteen tests with crude oil as fuel, 11.60 pounds of water were evaporated from about 120° F. under a pressure of 279 pounds, to each pound of oil burned. This is compared with the results of seventeen coal tests in which the average evaporation was 8.12 pounds of water to each pound of coal burned. This evaporation, in both cases, as will be observed, took place at a very high pressure, and included the heating of the feed water to the point where it was evaporated. The equivalent evaporation from and at 212° F. for the oil would be 13.30 pounds of water per pound of oil, and for the entire seventeen tests with coal the equivalent evaporation would be 9.21 pounds of water per pound of coal. In these coal tests, three grades of coal were used, Pocahontas run of mine, New River run of mine, and Pocahontas hand picked and screened. During the first three tests with Pocahontas run of mine, having a calorific value of 14,067 heat units per pound of coal, and 15,391 units per pound of combustible, there resulted an equivalent evaporation of 8.65 pounds of water per pound of coal fed into the furnace. The second three tests made with the same kind of coal, but with a slightly higher heating efficiency, produced an equivalent evaporation of 9.40 pounds of water per pound of coal fed into the furnace. The following three tests made with New River run of mine, having a calorific value of 14,841 units per pound of coal, and 15,684 units per pound of combustible, yielded an equivalent evaporation of 9.36 pounds of water per pound of coal fed into the furnace. The remaining eight tests made with Pocahontas coal hand picked and screened, with a calorific value of 14,992 units per pound of coal, and 15,475 units per pound of combustible, yielded an equivalent evaporation of 9.30 pounds of water per pound of coal fed into the furnace.

Taking the general average equivalent evaporation, for the seventeen coal tests, of 9.21 pounds of water per pound of coal fed into the furnace, we have 20,360.4 pounds of water evaporated from and at 212° F. to each ton of coal consumed. Calculating the cost of coal at $4.50 per ton, we have a rate of .0216 of a cent per pound of water evaporated. To evaporate the same quantity of water, using oil as the fuel, as was evaporated by a ton of coal, would require 1551.1 pounds of oil. Calculating 320 pounds of oil to a barrel, we have 4.85 barrels of oil equaling one ton of coal. Owing to the fact that oil can be burned much more economically than coal, we are safe in assuming that four ordinary barrels of crude oil are equal to one ton of the best semi-bituminous coal for heating purposes. With these figures before us and the price of both coal and oil at hand, we can very readily calculate the comparative cost of each.

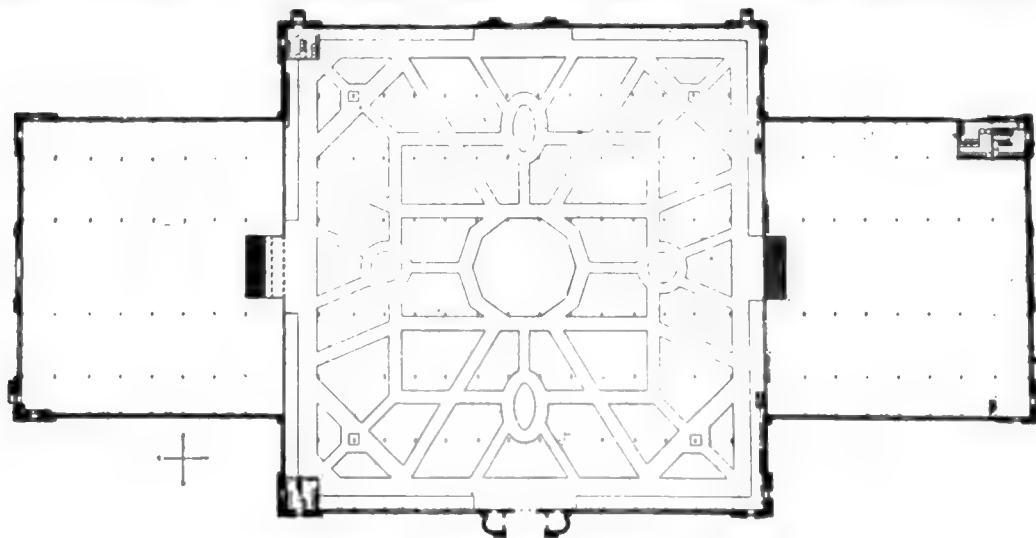

Crude oil is being successfully burned in locomotives throughout the southwestern part of the United States, also in all kinds of steam generating appliances wherever near enough the oil fields to warrant a cheap and plentiful supply. The minimum amount of attention required to do the firing adds a factor in favor of petroleum as fuel; in the case of the steamship Mariposa, sailing between San Francisco and Tahiti, the introduction of oil has reduced the firing force from twenty-two to three men.

The use of crude oil is, however, attended with several difficulties: it kills animals that take it inwardly, and plants with which it comes in contact. Crude oil contains all the more volatile elements, including the naphtha, and is highly explosive, and care must be taken in handling it. When burning it in an enclosed furnace explosions are liable to occur should the flow of oil become temporarily interrupted; upon the oils resuming its flow the furnace becomes filled with gas, which, upon igniting, produces an explosion. Where artificial gas is available it is desirable to maintain a small jet within the furnace and near the burner to serve as a lighter should the oil gas become extinguished. Broken fire brick, which become white hot, will serve to relight the gases.

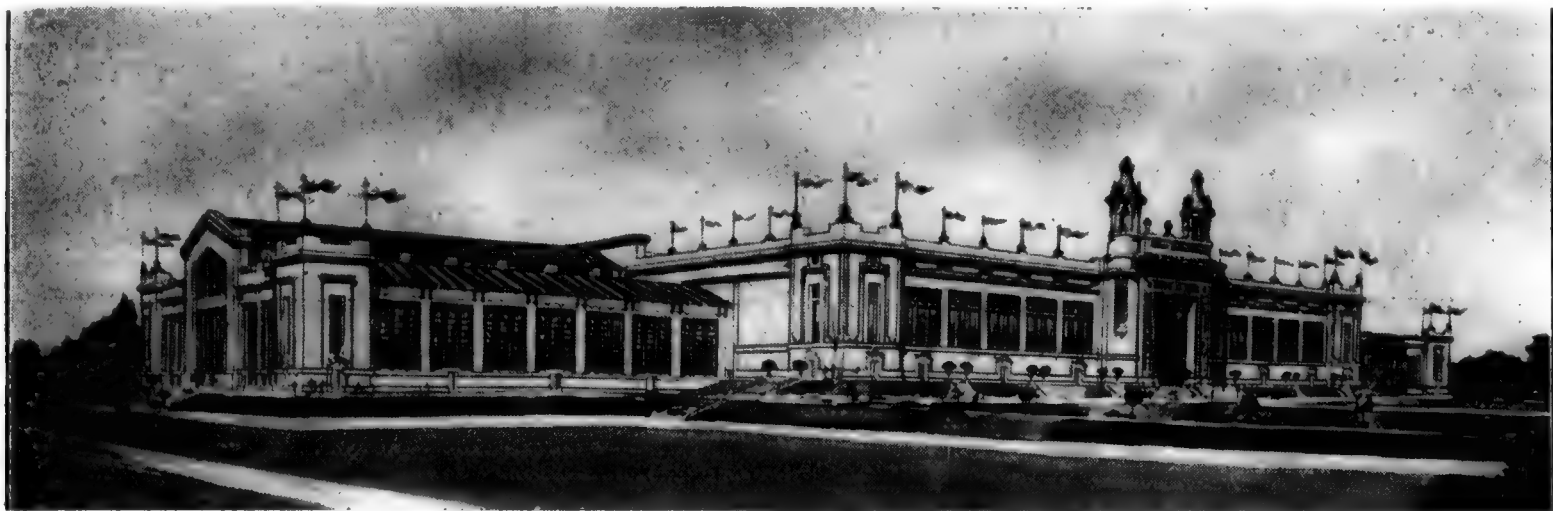

Appliances for Burning Oil.

There remains no question regarding the mechanical application of crude oil in generating heat under boilers, and the only drawback to its general adoption are the limitations imposed by the supply and cost. With a sufficient supply in view, however, the limitation of cost may be disregarded during a short emergency period.

During the shortage in the coal supply last year a great number of devices for burning oil were placed upon the market, and many an "oiled brick" scheme was imposed upon the public. The advantages claimed for many of the so-called oil burning outfits, by those who had them for sale, were remarkable, indeed; plenty of heat with half the cost of coal at ordinary prices and absolute satisfaction were lib-usually guaranteed. Many such an outfit that cost perhaps $2 to manufacture was installed at a price ranging from $10 to $50. It is needless to add that most of these were afterward discarded and many of them are now to be found in the junk shops.

In burning oil it is necessary to either transform it into a gas and mix with the required amount of air before it is burned, or to spray or atomize it as it is fed into the furnace. The object of a burner, in the use of oil as fuel, is to get the oil into a finely divided state, and to get the particles in direct contact with the oxygen of the air. The atomizing may be accomplished either by means of steam or compressed air, the steam being the simpler where the burner is used in connection with a steam boiler. In a large heating plant, where low pressure steam is the method used, it would be necessary to install a small auxiliary boiler to furnish high pressure steam with which to feed the oil burners used under the low pressure boilers. Where electric power is available, a motor-driven air compressor could be used to furnish the supply of air for atomizing the oil. The higher the temperature of the steam or air used for atomizing the oil, the greater will be the efficiency of the burner.

The Oil City Boiler Works burner, used by the Naval Fuel Board during the first eight oil tests, vaporizes the oil by means of compressed air. The Hayes burner, used in test No. 9, employs steam as the atomizing agent. The Oil City Boiler Works burner, used in tests Nos. 10, 11 and 12, requires steam to spray the oil. The F. M. Reed burner, used in tests Nos. 13 and 14, volatilizes the oil by means of steam, after which a supply of air is added before leaving the burner. The cost of these burners and the expense of their installation can be had by addressing the manufacturers.

To Build a Burner.

A very simple and efficient burner can be constructed in the following manner. Procure an ordinary flange union, bolt together with thin iron washers between the parts in order to hold them separated about 1-32 of an inch; close one end by means of a cast iron plug and bush down the other end to not less than one inch or more than two inches; this forms the burner and it should be placed in the center, or perhaps a little toward the front of the firebox, and upon the grate bars. The bushing should form the lower end of the burner and should be screwed to the top of an elbow attached to a pipe that makes one or two turns around the firebox. A steam connection from the top of the boiler is made to this pipe and the oil is fed into this steam pipe through a tee to which is attached the oil supply, the connection being made just outside the furnace. The oil supply should be controlled by a needle valve and the flow accomplished by using a closed tank for the reservoir and compressing the air in the top of the tank, the oil being drawn from the bottom. To start this apparatus, steam is first gotten up on the boiler by means of a coal or wood fire. First the steam and then the oil are started through the burner and the coal fire allowed to burn itself out.

In experiments recently made with an eight horse-power upright tubular boiler, burning crude oil, an even flame of yellowish color with a blue tint was secured which worked the boiler to about two-thirds of its maximum capacity; the burner used was made from a 2-inch flange union. In this test no smoke was given off. For a larger burner a 3-inch or 4-inch, or even larger, union may be used, or two or three smaller unions connected together.

The greatest difficulty with burning oil occurs when the installation is under the smaller class of hot water heaters, such as are used in the moderately small greenhouse plants. In that case it is necessary to generate the gas by passing the oil through a heated coil or retort, and then burning it by the Bunsen method. There are a number of makes of burners designed for the direct generation and combustion of oil, but none of them give a perfect flame, due as a rule to insufficient air being mixed with the gas.

The firm of Lord & Burnham are agents for an apparatus for burning oil which is rather simple in construction. A closed tank is used for containing the supply of oil, the pipe leading to the retort and burner being taken from the top of the tank. To the bottom of the tank is attached a valve connected with the water supply, and as the oil is drawn from the tank it is replaced by the water and a uniform pressure maintained. The oil and water will not mingle and the amount of oil in the tank is determined by means of a gauge-glass which extends from top to bottom of the tank. This system might be employed in connection with the use of any burner.

A fair degree of success has been attained with a Bunsen system of burning refined kerosene, in which the gas was generated in a coil placed in the fire-box, the gas being conducted from the coil, downward to a point below the level of the grate, where it was liberated through an orifice into a mixer, and burned with a clear blue flame over a wire gauze stretched over the top of the mixer. This burner is very efficient, but is liable to produce a vibration that is sometimes equal to the noise of a steam whistle. The wire gauze will last but a short time, and should it become perforated the burner will flash back to the nozzle of the mixer and burn with a white flame. The supply tank should be elevated eight or ten feet above the burner in order to give pressure, and inlet controlled by a needle valve. This system would work well if supplied with air from a pressure blower, as the chief difficulty arises from the inability to mix sufficient air with the gas.

Conclusions.

That coal is the cheapest and best fuel that the market affords, one pound under ordinary conditions evaporating about seven and one-half pounds of water at 212° F.

That the provision for a liberal reserve supply of coal is, under most circumstances, the safest method of providing for an emergency. This supply need not be stored near the boilers, and should only be used when coal cannot be secured from the regular sources. The interest on the money invested in such reserve supply of coal will be wisely expended.

That a pound of dry wood will evaporate about four pounds of water at 212° F. That wood is in many cases the most efficient substitute for coal during a short period.

That where crude oil can be secured at a reasonable price it is the best and most reliable substitute for coal, and where it can be purchased as low as $1 per barrel it is preferable to coal at $3.50 and upwards per ton. That one pound of crude oil will evaporate 13.3 pounds of water at 212° F., and that one pound of oil has a heating efficiency equal to that of about 1.6 pounds of coal. Also that the use of oil is clean and economical so far as the fire-room work is concerned, and if properly burned, no smoke is produced.

That the mechanical part of oil burning has passed the first experimental stage and has proved successful. That there are a number of good burners upon the market, especially of the sprayer class, using compressed air or steam for volatilizing the oil.

That a cheap and efficient burner can be made from comparatively inexpensive materials.

That oil can be burned in an even and effective manner, especially under steam boilers of the watertube class.

That petroleum will probably never replace coal for general use.

ST. LOUIS WORLD'S FAIR.

Those who visited the Buffalo exposition, or the one at Omaha, will remember the representative character of the florists and nurserymen who exhibited there. Chief F. W. Taylor, of the St. Louis World's Fair, who occupied a similar position in both the expositions mentioned, reports that nearly every exhibitor he has had heretofore, together with a good many others, will be in attendance at St. Louis in 1904. The exhibits already planted cover as many acres as were used in Buffalo for the entire outdoor exhibit. When the next fall's and next spring's plantings are added to what has already been done, there will be at least fifty acres of outdoor planting of exhibits, entirely aside from the landscape work of the exposition itself. The material already planted includes evergreens, hardy shrubs, roses, peonies and other hardy perennials.

A recent letter from the Mexican commission says that they will bring with them five carloads of plants for a part of the horticultural exhibit.

THE FLORIST NOT TO BLAME.

On the editorial page in the September issue of the Ladies' Home Journal appears the editor's views on the custom of display at funerals. Of course, the use of flowers comes in for its share of criticism and in all probability, considering the high standing of the publication, no discourtesy was intended in alluding to "those fearful conceptions of the ignorant florist," but why make it appear that the florists as a class are ignorant, when as a rule they are wholly in the hands of the relatives or friends of the deceased on these occasions?

The law of supply and demand is present in our trade, as in others, but let no one think the florist so devoid of knowledge regarding the fitness of things that he does not see the absurdity in some of the demands made upon him, or so lacking in intellect as to be unconscious of the suggestiveness in the case when a gates ajar was ordered with the gates to be finished in bright red. These monstrosities are conceived in the brains of those desirous of obtaining something different or more fearful and wonderful in its architecture, the construction being left for the florist to work out, strict orders often being given that two or more certain colors predominate, regardless of harmony.

The spirit of the article in question voices the sentiment I have heard expressed by some of the leading ones in our profession, in part, proof of which I respectfully refer to the article in "Floral Arrangements" in the Florists' Manual, by William Scott.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

CONVENTION REMINISCENCES.

Everybody is now back from the convention and the vote in favor of Milwaukee as the banner city is unanimous. Such an overflow of good things, such weather, such an exhibition, and such an abundance of generous entertainment have never been equaled in the history of the S. A. F. The pace set is a hard one to follow, but Vice-President Beneke and the St. Louisians are already planning to excel it. New York is proud to have furnished the mover and seconder of the unadorned nomination of President Breitmeyer, Harry Bunyard and J. B. Nugent, and it feels more than pleased with the fine bowling record of Captain Lang.

The exhibit of handsome fat men at the convention has never been equaled. At St. Louis a fat men's bowling team would be as attractive as the bowling of the ladies, and it could be selected from those mountains of good nature and avoirdupois, Messrs. P. J. Foley, of Chicago; W. J. Herendeen, of Geneva; W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo; F. R. Mathison, of Waltham; J. F. Sullivan, of Detroit; Peter Crowe, of Utica; Dan MacRorie, of Orange; Julius Kretschmar, of Brooklyn; E. Hippard, of Youngstown; Arnold Ringier, and Anton Then, of Chicago, and Warren Ewell, of Boston, over 3,000 pounds of happiness.

I wonder if Leuly, of Hoboken, will wheel to San Francisco when the convention goes there about 1919. The distance wouldn't worry him; he manages to get there every year.

Never were the ladies so generously cared for as in Milwaukee. The vice-president may lay claim for all time to his well won honors as the champion "ladies' man," and he nearly absorbed the top prize for bowling and the presidency also. His labors have been persistent, unselfish and fair in behalf of all and the society has a good memory. He can afford to wait patiently for the recognition he deserves.

The Chicago example of large heartedness is an indication of how the windy city does things. There seems to be no limit to its purse and its usefulness. The banquet at the Auditorium and the "open house" farewell with its musical accompaniment are memories that will never fade. There is nothing small about Chicago. A visit on Sunday last with Edgar Sanders was most enjoyable, from the inspection of the famous "den" of horticulture to the pleasant reminiscences reaching back over the years since the S. A. F. was born. That Brother Sanders may meet us in 1904 at St. Louis, fully restored to health, is the wish and expectation of all his visitors and friends.

The possibility of the society furnishing its own program was demonstrated at the president's reception by the singing of Miss Fulmer and the willingness of many others to do their share. This feature, under Brother Beneke's supervision, can be splendidly amplified at St. Louis.

If J. F. Wilcox had won the bowling championship, it would have been a popular victory. His modesty alone prevented him.

Those fierce looking hats from Denver covered as peaceful a lot of wholesouled westerners as one would wish to meet, and they were good bowlers, even if they could not quite reach the top. They will do better at St. Louis, and so will New York.

The vote taken on the New York special as to the most popular man on board went to Chatterton Warburton. As Mr. Warburton chaperoned three handsome ladies, the vote was a foregone conclusion. The winner of the decision as to the handsomest man on board was left to the ladies and resulted in a tie between Mr. Schloss and Mr. Guttman.

The number of "summer widowers" at the convention was phenomenal. Next year every married man will be expected to take his better half to St. Louis.

The number of prostrations at this convention was unusual. And the article that made Milwaukee famous looked clear and pure, too! Perhaps it was the water! One has to be so careful when away from home.

Two of the most contented souls in the multitude were Messrs. Craw and Fotheringham, of Irvington and Tarrytown. No wonder! Both married since the Asheville convention.

Wm. Dilger, of Detroit, was born lucky. The hotel thieves left him all his money and he was going to buy a new watch, anyway, on the first of September.

H. M. Altiek proved himself a good all-around man, and as a speaker, bowler and shooter he generally hits the mark. His carnation circular met with general approval.

J. W. Deake and Mrs. Deake decorated with a badge, including the S. A. F. buttons of many years, came all the way from Asheville to see if the convention of 1902 could be excelled. Everybody had kind words and memories of their fine work last season.

And as we meet and part, and farewells are spoken, and hands wave good byes, and happy memories are cherished, we renew life's battles stronger and better for these annual reunions. May not one of all the happy throng be missing when we greet one another at the great exposition in 1904.

THE YEAR IN COLORADO.

Here is a model report of a state vice-president of the S. A. F. Its author is J. A. Valentine, president of the Park Floral Co., of Denver, and the ideas embodied are deserving of serious consideration. The full report follows:

Reports from different growers and retailers indicate that trade in general throughout Colorado during the past year has been very satisfactory and that the volume of business increases pretty steadily from year to year. Retail buyers show a decided tendency to be more critical as to quality and to appreciate the value of anything which may be accounted a novelty. The quality of flowers produced has been such as to meet this more critical demand, except in the summer season. The home trade is almost nothing during the summer months, but the state is blessed with a great many conventions and a pretty steady stream of tourists. The conventions seem to have no appreciable effect on the flower trade, but the tourists are often flower buyers of means, who demand stock of a good quality. So far the florists of the state have not given this matter of summer supply the attention it deserves.

Previous to this year the supply of Beauties in the Denver market has not been equal to the demand, a great many being shipped in from Omaha and from Chicago, but this summer the Montclair Greenhouses and the Harmon Greenhouses of Mrs. R. Mauff have increased their area and have devoted the increase largely to Beauties. It seems now as though the shortage is likely to be more than overcome and an oversupply produced. This is also true as regards the rose Madame Chatenay, which proved to be very popular last season, while it was comparatively scarce, but it is doubtful whether the trade will consume all the stock from the increased planting.

Violets still continue to be the bane of most florists' existence in this locality. Maler & Dankworth have been the only firm in the vicinity of Denver who have met with uniform success in violets during the past several years.

In carnations there will be heavy plantings of most of the introductions of 1903. It remains to be seen whether the flower buying public will consume all of the cut from the large number planted at the prices which novelties are entitled to bring.

There have been several unsuccessful attempts in former years to conduct a wholesale cut flower establishment on a commission basis in Denver. Lyle C. Waterbury has recently opened an establishment to be conducted on a commission basis and announces his intention of carrying a full line of supplies usually carried by such concerns. Such an establishment would be a great convenience to the retail florists of the city, as well as to the growers, and it is to be hoped that the volume of business will be sufficient to justify Mr. Waterbury in continuing in the business.

The season has been a very backward one and frost was noted in Denver as late as July 3. This unseasonable weather interfered very considerably with the ordinary bedding trade, but when the end of the season was reached the total volume appeared to be in excess of last year. There still continues to be a marked increase in the demand for ornamental shrubbery and hardy herbaceous plants.

An organization of a state society under the name of the Colorado Society of Floriculturists was affected in May and it is to be hoped that this society will be an influence for good in the florist business of the state. It announces that one of its prime objects shall be to encourage the holding of exhibitions. The state legislature has been induced to make an appropriation for such an exhibit at the State Fair to be held in Pueblo in September.

Last summer and again this summer the Denver florists have been very severely injured by hail. Most of them were insured in the Florists' Hail Association and all of them so insured speak highly of the treatment received and the prompt settlement made.

Attendance at the annual convention of your society in Milwaukee from this state will be small in numbers, but will still show a very decided gain over the attendance at any former convention. It is to be hoped that the entire delegation will be so enthused at that meeting that they will return next year in still larger numbers.

BUFFALO.

Various Matters of Interest.

We found our city about at the same old gait upon our return from Milwaukee. Business is about at its lowest ebb, but that won't last long, as our wealthy people are fast returning from mountain and seashore. The weather for the past week has been simply suicidal—mist, drizzle, rain. We enjoyed such a lovely week's weather in Milwaukee that this week at home has made us feel discontented with our location, but we know it has been genial.

Asters and gladioli are the leading flowers of the day. Of the former Rudolph Boettger, of Eggertsville, and Harry Fishell, of Corfu, send in a lot of very fine blooms.

We returned from the convention city on the installment plan. Nineteen went out and only six returned, yet we believe they are alive somewhere. We know W. F. Kasting is, because we saw a nine-pound bull head that he hooked out of some unpronounceable lake in Wisconsin. Professor Cowell, with Brother Rudd, of Chicago, spent a day botanizing among the swamps and sand hills at the foot of Lake Michigan, Mr. Rudd providing the antidote for snake bite and Mr. Cowell discovering an unknown species of the "Rubrum Trubrum Terakifolium Tremens."

We were very glad to again have a visit from J. A. Valentine, of Denver, one of the wild west six whose hats and yells were a picturesque feature of the convention. Another member of the "gang" also came back with us to see his mother and other old friends. Philip Scott left home and friends three and one-half years ago and this was his first return visit. We did not go into the veal business, but he was warmly welcomed by all. One good friend, Park Superintendent Braik, kindly undertook to show him new Buffalo, and if any man can show beautiful Buffalo, Braik is the man, so we were rather disappointed to find that their sight-seeing had been largely confined to bowling alleys and their accessories.

W. J. Palmer has been putting in a most industrious summer at his large Lancaster establishment. Mr. Snell, late of Thorley's, who has had charge of Mr.

Palmer's up-town store for the past year, or since its opening, severed his connection with the firm on September 1.

I am glad to be able to say that Joseph Rebstock, who had the misfortune to break a leg two months ago, in a mix-up between an auto and a spirited horse, is now walking a little and will soon be himself again. My experience is that if you get a good job done and the fracture heals nicely, the limb is actually stronger at that point than at any other, but it so spoils the symmetry of the limb and is so expensive and inconvenient that to have legs that are all mended up fractures is not worth while.

All those that we have interviewed since coming home say they look back at Milwaukee as the most pleasant and enjoyable convention in their memory. Our bowlers are not discouraged. Not for two years have they rolled as a team, and two of the members had not rolled a single game in a year; so to get a decent third behind Philadelphia and Chicago is not discouraging, for we all know that the teams of the two leaders don't exactly sleep on the alleys, yet they dream much about them and speak often of them in their waking moments. There will be something doing in St. Louis, even if retired veterans have to go into training again. W. S.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cold, easterly storm had a good effect on business, which improved for several consecutive days. The outdoor flowers were spoiled and the indoor were reduced in numbers and by no means improved in quality. There was a nice little business done, though there appears to be no probability of its continuance. The Flower Market had some choice asters, which were in brisk demand, also American Belle in quantity from John Burton. Other roses are plentiful. There is a fair amount of shipping.

The Convention.

Leo Niessen returned last week from his trip to Milwaukee, stopping in Chicago and Pittsburg on his return journey. He was much pleased with his whole trip. Milwaukee received the visitors most kindly, the convention was well attended, the exhibition a very fine one and all the arrangements admirable. The bowling match looked blue for our boys after the first game. The way they rolled the second and third games would have made any Quaker proud of them. A day was devoted to seeing a few of the big Chicago places, when H. B. Howard, of the REVIEW, kindly looked after a party of about twenty-five. Mr. Howard piloted the visitors to Bassett & Washburn's, J. C. Vaughan's and Peter Reinberg's. All proved most interesting.

A Tasty Book.

The prettiest little pamphlet issued for a long time is the new catalogue of M. Rice & Co., just out. The illustrations are on a colored background, which brings out the light and dark colors of the baskets, screens and wreaths to perfection and showing clearly the material of which they are made. The work is extremely well done, making it possible to determine clearly, exactly how each article will look. The whole catalogue is well worthy of careful perusal.

Notes.

Joseph Heacock is sending in his first Beauties of the season to the Flower Market.

John F. Andre is sending in Brides, Maids and Beauties to Leo Niessen.

C. A. Dunn & Co. are receiving some nice Semple's asters.

The J. Wolff Moore Co. opened for business this week at 1420 Columbia avenue. Mrs. Moore is the daughter of Mrs. J. Wolff, Sr., who has closed her store opposite but still continues her business at her greenhouses on Ridge avenue.

Hugh Graham has greatly improved his store at 108 South Thirteenth street. New mirrors, a fountain and other additions make the effect light and pleasing.

John McIntyre, with Edward Reid, has made several flying business trips up the state lately.

Leo Niessen is receiving Beauties from A. Farenwald, of Hillside.

Eugene Bernheimer has just returned from a trip to Lancaster.

John McKeefery, with H. Bayersdorfer & Co., has just returned from his wedding trip.

The Florists' Club meeting on Tuesday was devoted to expressions of opinion on the Milwaukee convention and felicitations on the triumphs of the bowlers.

The Flower Market is to be congratulated on the successful termination of the negotiations to remain in the present quarters. President Heacock and Manager Meehan deserve great credit for the excellent arrangements just completed.

Lincoln I. Neff, who runs several stores in Pittsburg, was a visitor lately.

Whelen, of Newtown, has his Brides and Maids in very fine shape this season. Several houses of carried over plants look as promising as the young stock.

The Thorn Hedge Greenhouses, Frank S. Jackson, manager, have a fine stock of Pandanus utilis.

George Waterfield has started his house of callas, which give promise of great things next winter.

C. Eisele is sending some flowers of his Begonia Humboldtii to the Flower Market. The blossoms are very pretty for design work.

The statice wreath of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., described last week, resembles Scotch heather, not holly as incorrectly written.

Robert Glass, who is with Leo Niessen, is to be congratulated on the arrival of a welcome little stranger.

John Young, of C. Young & Sons, of St. Louis, was a visitor last week.

Julius Riels, the well known florist of Fifth and Grand avenues, died last week. PHIL.

The Market.

Summer in the flower business, late fall in the coal bin! Even the leaves on the trees are taking notice; many are yellowing and dropping off, and the appearance of autumn blooms in the fields and by the waysides hints that there is really something behind these signs. Better hurry along the belated summer work. It is dangerous to be behind hand in any line in these days of swift competition, and more so in the flower business than in any other. The behind-hand florist is directly competing with experts in his own line who are fully up to date and some of them just a page or two ahead of the times. For instance Sam Goddard is the Lou Dillon of the chrysanthemum business. He breaks his own New England record four days this year by bringing in a dozen August 25, and following it up in a limited manner.

There is some remonstrance against average prices, but good material is generally selling at fair rates. There is, however, a decided droop on the Shamrock and a better movement in mayflowers, golden rod, columbine and other distinctly American specialties in which we can always place our Reliance.

Notes.

Have you noticed that Iliffe evidently patterned his system of heating the market by the elevated railroad? Part of the time it is overhead and then underfoot. The first time greenhouse methods have been introduced in a Boston business block, I am told.

A slip of the pen last week gave the wrong hour for the auction sale of stalls at the flower market. It comes off Saturday, September 12, at 9 a. m., and there is much speculation as to the results in a room big enough to hold all comers. But the new location seems to be a success all right. Can anyone name a customer who frequented the old market and does not come regularly to the new?
J. S. MANTER.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business is reported as having been pretty good the past week, consisting altogether of funeral work. There is no trouble to get stock, as everything is very plentiful, though mostly of the poorer grade. First-class stock is still scarce and will continue so until cooler weather sets in. We have had a few good soaking rains of late, which will help outdoor stock greatly. The opening of the schools next week and the return of the summer vacationists should improve business, especially the transient trade of the downtown stores. Some of the wholesalers report that shipping trade is again good and that quite a few shipments were made the past week.

Among the best roses that are in the market are Bride, Kaiserin, Carnot and Meteor. The very best of these bring $5 to $6 per 100. Seconds are sold at almost any price, as there are too many of them in the market at present. A few good Beauties are also seen, but not with extra long stems. The best sell at $2 per dozen, and from that they range down to $4 per 100. Good carnations are still scarce. Field-grown stock is small and short-stemmed and not fit for cut flower work. For these 50 and 75 cents per 100 is considered a big price. A few good Hills bring $1. No good Daybreak or reds are in the market. Asters are very plentiful, with only the long white and purple in demand, at $1.50 per 100, and 50 cents is all the small ones bring. Tuberose stalks are plentiful; in fact, there is an overstock, which is also true of gladioli. The "tubes" bring $3 and the "glads" only $2, and they are still cheaper in 1000 lots. The demand for other outdoor stock is poor, with plenty of everything in the market. There has been quite a demand for smilax and the market seems to be well supplied with it.

Various Notes.

During the past week we have had quite an array of visitors. Among the first was Col. Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, with a well-filled order book. Then came J. Stern, from the same town, selling wax floral designs. L. Baumann, of Chicago, was next, with decorative articles. All report good trade in their lines since the convention. George Vestal, of Little Rock, and William Bastien, who is with George M. Kellogg, at Pleasant Hill, Mo., also made friendly calls on the trade.

Robert F. Tesson, who took sick in Chicago after the convention, is up and around again at his home in Clayton.

The decorations made by Carl and Robert Beyer at the twenty-first harvest festival held at Lemps Park were again the feature of the big display. The affair lasted two days, Sunday and Monday, August 30 and 31.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Weber are expected home this week from Michigan, where they went from the convention. During their absence Fred, Junior, is taking good care of everything that comes in.

C. C. Sanders' places on Delmar avenue and on Henley road are in fine shape for the coming season and he expects to be well supplied with fine roses, carnations and chrysanthemums for his home trade.

At Frank Fillmore's place everything is in fine shape. His roses and carnations are looking at their best. Frank had to do jury duty the past week, which he says is too much bench system for him.

The September meeting of the Florists' Club will be held next Thursday afternoon at Fred Ammann's place in Edwardsville, Ill. The meeting will open promptly at two o'clock and the members are requested to meet at twelve at the bridge entrance to take the Lansdown car. President Dunford expects a large attendance, as the meeting will be of great importance to all the members. The installation of officers will take place. An essay will be read by Frank M. Ellis on "Trade in Cut Flowers the Past Season." The convention delegates will tell of their experiences at Milwaukee and Chicago, of how they captured everything except the bowling match. It is also expected that the new officers will put the machine in operation at once for the convention next year. Brother Ammann promises a good time for all, so don't fail to attend and take part in the proceedings.

Bowling.

The first bowling since the convention occurred last Monday night at the Blue Ribbon alleys, just to show what we can do at our home alleys:

The Market.

The hot weather forced out the roses and resulted in an unwieldy supply of soft stock, but the few cool, rainy days changed all that and cut down the crops to a surprising degree, so that receipts have been light this week. There are still enough of the low grade flowers, but shipping demand has taken a spurt and the wholesalers have had to do a great deal of hunting to find satisfactory material for their orders and in some instances, it was impossible to fill them even in part. Beauties of the 20 and 24-inch lengths are in good demand and hard to get.

Carnations from indoors are again coming along and the supply will show a steady increase. Of course the stems are short as yet, but the stock is good for so early, it having been a very favorable season. Some excellent Semple's asters are in and selling fairly well. There are still quantities of the low grade stuff, which is hard to get rid of at any price. Good auratum lilies are still to be had, but much of the receipts in this line, too, are poor and hardly salable. Gladioli continue in heavy supply, but few dahlias are seen and these few sell slowly. Greens of all kinds are equal to all requirements.

Various Notes.

C. L. Washburn and family returned yesterday from Wausaukee, Wis.

E. E. Pieser says that he does not remember a duller period than from August 18 to 30, but that business opened well this week.

F. Stielow, at Niles Center, grows his carnations in brick clay, composted a year before use with almost an equal part of manure. White Cloud, in this soil, is a very good keeper.

A bed of Egandale canna at Lincoln Park, is attracting much favorable comment.

P. J. Hauswirth goes to Atlantic City next Wednesday for the Red Men's annual pow-wow.

George Piepgrass is at Mercy Hospital, recovering from a surgical operation.

C. M. Dickinson has been in northern Wisconsin for a few days with Mrs. Dickinson and their boy.

Robert Northam is now salesman for M. Winandy, at the Growers' Market.

Louis Wittbold was at Wheeling, Ill., this week to bring home his wife and boy, who have been visiting Mrs. Wittbold's parents there. The little one has been quite ill.

George Weiland, of Evanston, will be married September 8 and will leave with his bride for a trip to the Pacific Coast.

Jacob Phillip, who has been growing vegetables at Rogers Park, has benched 28,000 carnation plants and will send his cut to John Muno's city salesroom.

Mrs. Horton is again on duty at Bassett & Washburn's after a trip to New York.

A. L. Randall is harvesting his peaches in Michigan and sending over a good crop.

The Libertyville fair is receiving the attentions of the north shore florists this week.

J. A. Budlong is at home again, having ridden his bicycle to Providence, R. I., and most of the way back again. When within a short distance of Chicago he found the roads too muddy for wheeling and was obliged to resort to the train.

The closing hour is again 6:30 p. m.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The condition of business at the present time is an exact counterpart of last week's report, after one of the worst fortnights of the year. But the end of all things discouraging approaches and before we know it schools will open, theaters will again demonstrate their value to the trade and the return of the "600" from country resorts will begin. Already signs of autumn appear. Violets are in the market, chrysanthemums will soon be with us, and fall shows and well-stocked retail stores before another moon. New coats of fresco ornament the walls and ceilings, and both wholesalers and retailers are getting ready for the good times when the discouragements of the unprofitable summer will be forgotten.

Various Items.

Charlie Carlin, of Thorley's, is back from the mountains and the season may be safely said to have begun.

Small's windows are very attractive this week, one with a fine display of Nymphæa Devonensis, and the other banked with Anna Foster ferns.

The yacht races are about over and their influence caused hardly a ripple on the floricultural sea. A good active, rising market down on Wall street would do more for the flower business in a day than all the yacht races ever sailed.

Employers and employes have about all had their turn at outings, and have come back, brown and healthy, for another try at the battle of life.

A. Warendorff has been summering at Avenne-by-the-Sea.

The New Jersey Cut Flower Co. will open its wholesale department on September 15.

Alex. McConnell, of Fifth avenue, received orders for two fine wreaths this week from J. Ogden Armour, of Chicago, and Lolita Armour, whose recovery through the agency of Dr. Lorenz made her famous. The designs were made of cattleyas, cypripediums and valley and were very handsome. This firm had the decorations for the Alcock wedding at the Holland House last week, using many palms, American Beauties, Bridesmaids and valley, and keeping the display intact for many days.

A large clock of handsome design, and abundant fresco work, make the Fifth avenue store of Thomas Young, Jr., as good as new.

J. H. Troy, of the Rosary, has many interesting stories to tell of his trip abroad, and looks several years younger since he visited the scenes of his youth. He must have some good neighbors near his new store at Thirty-fourth street, as he has the street decorated with bays, bamboos and topiary work nearly from Fifth avenue to Madison.

A communication from Wm. Elliott rejoices in the wresting of the silver loving cup from the Boston Club by the New Jersey Bowling Green Club, of which he is a member, after a three years' struggle. The match was played on the grounds of the Boston Curling Club, Cambridge, Mass., and he says the Jerseyites made their opponents "look like 30 cents."

A card from John Nash, dated Paris, indicates a very happy European trip and an early return to the activities of the Coogan building. Mr. Nash will reach New York early the coming week.

All the European travelers are returning. Mr. and Mrs. Vincent, of White Marsh, Md., have already arrived at their southern home.

Nearly all the wholesalers are now receiving shipments of violets, and may be said to be "rushing the season," as the demand is very limited. With the opening of many theaters next week a market will doubtless be provided for all first-class stock that reaches the city.

H. E. Froment, bookkeeper at W. Ghormley's, is away for a two weeks' holiday in the mountains.

The weather for five days has been as little like the delightful brand furnished at Milwaukee, as conventionists can imagine. From the sunny climate of Chicago, even with its 90 degrees of humidity and heat, the transition to the storm and cold of the metropolis was distressing. Five days of chilling rain and a storm that strewed the shores of the Sound with wreckage was an unseasonable welcome home to those who tarried by the way. But a delightful September and October are promised in reward for this "year without a summer," and no more charming autumns are enjoyed on the continent than right here in old New York, the delightful temperature often reaching beyond the Christmas holidays.

Frederick Zahn, who has for some years conducted a successful florist business at 70 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, Harlem, has removed to 2603 Broadway, near Ninety-eighth street, a splendid part of the city, where opportunity for a bon ton clientele is unsurpassed.

Death of Frederick Law Olmsted.

Frederick Law Olmsted, the noted landscape architect, died here August 28, at the age of 81. Mr. Olmsted has left the impress of his genius on many of the finest park systems of the country. He it was who laid out the World's Fair grounds in Chicago in 1892—a scheme of landscape gardening which drew forth unstinted praise from artists of the old and new world. He created the schemes for Central park, New York; the South Park system, Chicago; Prospect park, Brooklyn; the Boston park system, Biltmore, at Asheville, N. C., and many other important works. Boston in 1901 perpetuated Mr. Olmsted's name by uniting Lavarett and Jamaica parks and renaming the new vista Olmsted park.

Mr. Olmsted was born in Hartford, Conn., in 1822, and studied engineering at Yale in 1845 and 1846. After a few years spent in practical farming he made, in 1850, a pedestrian tour of Great Britain and the continent of Europe. A few years afterward he took another journey through France, Italy and Germany. In 1856 he began the work of preparing the plans for the building of Central park, New York. Four years were devoted to the superintendency of the execution of those plans, and Mr. Olmsted returned to Europe for a brief stay.

For two years the great outdoor artist worked in California as a member of the commission having in charge the National park of the Yosemite, and on his return to New York in 1866 he began to plan Prospect park, Brooklyn, in association with Calvert Vaux.

Almost to the time of his death Mr. Olmsted looked like a man in the prime of life. His journeyings abroad, his long rides on horseback through the south, and his love for outdoor exercise gave him a constitution like iron. He had a summer home on Deer Isle, Me., which he seldom left before Thanksgiving. Mr. Olmsted is survived by his wife, a daughter and his sons, who are following their father's profession at Brookline, Mass.

TROUBLE WITH CYCAS.

We have cycas on which the old leaves turn yellow as soon as a new whorl grows. They have had plenty of heat and water. Shall we feed them?
J. J. L.

A cycas in good health should hold its foliage for two years, and if the plants in question are not newly imported stock and are well-established, it would seem as though it were a case of starvation. Supposing such to be the case, it would be beneficial to give them some liquid manure of moderate strength about once a week, though repotting would be more permanently helpful. With newly imported cycas stems there is sometimes a loss of foliage from defective or insufficient root action, and in the latter condition overwatering might aggravate the trouble.

FUNERAL FLOWERS.

A Washington publication, The New Century, prints the following:

A correspondent asks us "to attack" the custom of lavishly displaying garlands and "set pieces" of flowers at funerals. We should be glad to oblige our correspondent if we thought "attacks" on this sort of thing ever did any good.

It is natural enough that bereaved friends, kindly acquaintances and sympathetic neighbors should wish to offer some beautiful tribute to the dead, and flowers are the most appropriate possible symbols of love and hope. It is not true that the offering of flowers in memory of the dead is a "Pagan custom," as our friend says, in an un-Christian sense. Everything in Paganism was not antagonistic to Christian sentiment. If the rose was a symbol of Venus, Christians have made it a symbol of the Blessed Virgin; and it is no unusual thing, in Christian symbolical pictures, to see lilies left in the tomb of the Immaculate, as she ascends to Heaven. Whether a man be Pagan or Christian, the natural desire to reverence the dead, to show love for them, springs in his heart; it must take some form, and, in all ages, especially in the case of the young, it has taken the form of a tribute of flowers.

The offering of flowers at the grave of the dead is a beautiful and human custom. It is perfunctory, if it becomes a mere matter of fashion, if it loses its simplicity and taxes those who can not afford it, then its abuse ought to be restrained by those whose position ought to make them an example to others.

Wm. F. Gude states that the editor published this matter without reference to any florist and that it nearly escaped notice, but on being called to the attention of the Washington Florists' Club the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, the New Century, a weekly paper published in this city, has given expression through its editor favoring the use of flowers at funerals and other memorial occasions, evidencing by his editorials not only his broadness of views, but also his love for the beautiful.

Therefore, be it resolved by the Washington Florists' Club that the thanks of this association are due and are hereby tendered to Hon. D. I. Murphy, the editor of the said paper. Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the New Century and inscribed on our minutes.

The Market.

Everything in the flower line has given way to the aster for the past two weeks. I have never seen them so plentiful or so cheap as they are at present. Good flowers, with long stems, can be bought at from 50 cents to $1 per hundred and the florists are using them in vast quantities to fill up their windows. Roses are not very plentiful but there are just about enough to supply the demand, which is not heavy. A good deal of mildew is noticeable on most of them. Carnations are equal to all wants and can be bought at a low figure. All kinds of outdoor stock is plentiful, including Japanese lilies. Business is only fair and, although we had about 25,000 visitors during the last week, none of the florists seem to have been enriched to any considerable extent. What business was done was principally in the line of festooning and window decorating.

Various Notes.

The death of Dr. Charles B. Brigham removes one of the most enthusiastic growers of plants on the coast. The scientific cultivation of flowers, especially tuberous begonias, gloxinias and ferns, occupied much of his time. Dr. Brigham was well known by all the craft and his demise is universally regretted.

A visit to the greenhouses of E. T. McLellan, at Burlingame, shows everything in apple-pie order. Fifteen men are employed on the place and the planting for next winter is just about completed. A large batch of valley was noticeable; this firm has been very successful with this popular flower. Everything on the grounds has a thrifty appearance and bespeaks a big harvest later on.

I saw several large cases of Liliun Harrisii opened today by a local seed house. They were in good shape and were sent out by W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago.

The Department of Agriculture at Washington will spend a large sum in the purchase of land in California for the cultivation of plants and seeds, and buildings for their housing. The determination of the department to provide for this enterprise became known this week through the announcement of Professor Arnold V. Stubenrauch, of the horticultural department of the University of California, as one of the committee of two to select a site for the proposed station. The appointment was made by Dr. A. J. Pieters, head of the division of plant introduction and seed distribution of the Department of Agriculture, with whom Professor Stubenrauch recently toured the state. P. H. Dorsett, of Los Angeles, was appointed the other member of the committee, who will be called upon to select a site of 100 acres in some fertile and well irrigated spot. G.

DETROIT.

The man who stops over only one day at Detroit makes a mistake, for no city has more attractions nor develops a sincerer welcome. My call was especially made to see at its home the new rose which J. Breitmeyer's Sons will place on the market the coming season. All the fall exhibitions will see it in all its glory. As you know, this great acquisition originated at Grand Rapids five years ago, its parentage being Bridesmaid and Test-out. From a stock of 1,900 plants in 1902 the firm has now in grand growth over 16,000 from which to cut and propagate. This shows the faith the Breitmeyers have in the variety. In fact, orders have already been booked for nearly 100,000 plants, and the first year's sales are expected to total half a million. The rose is a wonderful propagator, strong, an easy grower, free from mildew, makes no blind wood, has the tea habit, every blind shoot the same as Beauty, eventually bringing a bud. The rose has not yet been christened, and $100 in gold will be offered as a prize to the one who furnishes the most appropriate name, a committee of Detroit ladies passing upon same.

Mr. Dorner, of La Fayette, Mr. Foley, of Chicago, and Mr. Rackham were guests with me of the genial Fred, at Mt. Clemens, on Tuesday. Five miles out from the city J. F. Sullivan's ranch looks bright and prosperous with its wealth of Golden Glow and asters, and its greenhouses in apple-pie condition. Mr. Sullivan is installing a new water system, which will end anxiety as to the moisture supply in the future. His store has been modernized since I saw it a year ago, and is now "one of the finest." The business seems to be always booming there and Mrs. Sullivan grows younger as the ducats increase. Norman is a chip off the old block, and has completely outstripped his paternal parent as a bowler.

B. Schroeter seems to be making substantial progress, and Mr. Breitmeyer's corner looks just as superb and the welcome of the force is just as warm as it has been for many a year. There has been no change in the lieutenants, ladies and gentlemen, for an age. I don't see how Phil manages to keep the gentler sex department intact so long. But the president is a good man to tie to! His elec-

ROCHESTER.

The flower business seems to be holding its own in Rochester. A brief call at Salter Bros., Keller's and Wilson's found all overwhelmed with funeral work, many of the designs being packed for shipment to adjacent towns.

The asters grown here are as fine as any in the country, and very abundant.

J. H. HEMINGWAY, superintendent of parks at Worcester, Mass., disagrees with the general run of tree planters. He says: "Bear in mind that the tree has been disturbed, received a shock, it is very sick. You do not want plum pudding and roast the first thing after a long sickness; well, then, do not give it to your tree in the shape of strong loam; do not cover the roots or allow them to touch it at all. Cover it first with the poorest material that you dig out in working the hole, and cover the roots with the same. Make the tree struggle for a living (on the same principle as the cutting bench). Strong loam causes a fungous growth and decay sets in."

THE Whitney-Eckstein Seed Co. advises that when red clover is to be grown with grasses the seed should be sown by itself, as it is so much heavier than any of the grass seeds that they cannot be sown evenly if the seeds are mixed before sowing.

THE Chicago Tribune of August 20 contained an interesting illustrated write-up of the L. A. Budlong farms, where they employ as high as 1,200 people doing the harvest of onion sets and cucumbers for pickles, paying them off in cash within twenty minutes of the close of each day's work.

C. P. COY & SON, Waterloo, Neb., say in a circular letter August 25: Cucumbers will average fair. It now looks as though contract orders on most kinds will be filled with little or no surplus in sight. It has been too wet for melons and they will be very spotted, many cu-tire failures and more shortages. Summer squash promise well, as do some fields of winter squash. In fact, the latter are very good, but acreage is small, owing to back-sets and discouragements early in the season. The early varieties of corn are coming on well, but the later kinds are yet uncertain, and will depend on weather in September.

RECENT DECISIONS.

Where a contract for the sale of seeds was silent as to where the seeds were to be weighed, it was competent to show a custom among dealers in seeds at the place of delivery not to accept Chamber of Commerce weights.—Gehl v. Milw. Prod. Co. Supreme Court of Wis.

Where one agrees to buy of another all that part of a crop to be raised which reaches a certain standard as to quality, and he accepts a part of the crop, he may refuse the remainder, if it falls below such standard, even though a part of those accepted fell below it, and he had full knowledge thereof.—*Norfolk Beet Sugar Co. v. CINCINNATI

The Market.

The hot spell is at an end and the temperature is down as low as 50 degrees at night. The quality of stock has improved as cuts were reduced. The keeping qualities of roses are especially benefited, and there is much more stock that will do for the shipping trade. As the supply of outdoor stock diminishes, the shipping trade increases and there is quite an active out-of-town demand. Several of the retailers were very busy with large funeral orders, and the general report is that business is unusually good. Altogether it turned out to be by far the best August we have ever known.

Stock, both housed and in the field, is looking remarkably well this year, and growers are predicting great things. The season was very favorable for carnations, and the plants are fine. Roses, likewise, are in good shape. Chrysanthemums are coming along fast, and it looks as though several varieties will be in very early. The present cool spell will check them somewhat, so that they will not be in before the market is ready for them.

Stock quotations are very much the same as last week, though the supply is not so large, especially roses. If the present conditions hold out, much better prices may be looked for in the near future.

Various Notes.

The forty-eighth annual fair of the Hamilton County Agricultural Society drew out a warm competition for floral honors between George & Allan and J. T. Conger. Considering the season of the year, very creditable displays were made. Mr. Conger captured most of the prizes for plants and George & Allan did likewise on cut flowers. The display was the best seen at the fair for many years.

During a heavy windstorm last week Charles Jones' big plate glass show window was blown in. The loss was about $200, but Mr. Jones carried insurance.

The entries for the Fall Festival flower shows are now closed. Every class will be warmly contested, and I believe that these shows will bring together the finest lot of flowers even seen at this time of year. I would advise all florists who intend visiting the festival this year to be sure to be present on flower days. The first show, September 10, will be devoted entirely to cut flowers and plants, the second, September 17, to table decorations. I venture to say that the table decorations will be the finest ever seen in this city.

Wm. Murphy is now on his way to Snow Island, where he will spend several weeks. He will be joined later by C. C. Murphy and daughter.

Visitors: B. Eschner, M. Reukauf and E. J. Fancourt, all of Philadelphia.

Our facilities for handling orders, either for flowers or plants, are of the very best.

BALTIMORE.

We have gone back to the old refrain; clouds, rain; rain, clouds. For five days we have scarcely seen the sun and in one night there was a rainfall of three and a half inches. The temperature is low and at night is suggestive of mildew, and the impending necessity of early fires. Flowers outside are greatly damaged by the excessive moisture.

Trade last week was lamentably short, but on Saturday there was a little spurt. Many persons are returning to their city homes. This will have some effect on business. The cool summer has been one of general health; the mortality was light, and the demand for funeral flowers below the average.

Golden Gate, under the conditions of moderate temperature, has this season proved itself a good summer rose, one of the best paying varieties now grown.

Certain wholesalers in a neighboring city are sending flowers into this market, "to be paid for if sold," whereat the indignation of our home growers may be imagined.

Frank G. Berger and wife are off on a sea trip to New Foundland, and Richard Vincent and wife are lately returned from a European trip.

Henry Pfister, formerly gardener at the White House and now engaged in business in Washington, and Charles Dudley, of Parkersburg, W. Va., were in town last week.

B.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The past week was a very dull one. Business was at a standstill. This August was the dulllest month the trade has experienced for many years. We are all eager for a reaction in business, and it is hoped that fall business will soon make its appearance. Outdoor flowers, such as asters, gladioli, album and rubrum lilies and short carnations continue to be a glut and can be bought at extremely low figures. Some very good Kaiserin roses are sent in by Patrick Maier.

Notes.

The Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co., at Bakerstown, is beginning to cut some good American Beauties from the new plants.

At Blind Bros.' place everything is in fine condition. With a greater boiler capacity than last year they anticipate good results this season.

B. L. Elliott is shipping the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. quantities of Shakespeare gladioli, of which the quality is fine.

It is rumored that another new wholesale commission house is to be opened in this city by one of the street Greeks.

The lone fisherman, Phil Langhans, is back again at his post.

Visitors: John A. Steel, Uniontown; Arthur Langhans, Wheeling; Wm. Cro-mach, Irwin.

Hoo-Hoo.

NORTH WALES, PA.—Charles Kreible is building an addition to his greenhouses in the west end.

OWOSSO, MICH.—Herbert Deal died August 23, aged 35 years. His demise was hastened by the tragic death of Mrs. Deal a year ago.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—F. J. Taggart, for several years a merchant here and director general of our two successful flower shows, is now in the oil prospecting business, being interested in the development of lands in Chautauqua county, Kansas.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—James Pont and the Vancouver Floral Company have each added a new greenhouse to their establishment.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The demand and supply of cut flowers have been at odds the past week and not satisfactory to anyone. Early in the week the extreme hot weather brought on a lot of poor, soft roses that no one seemed to want at any price, while the latter part of the week found a shortage and a very brisk demand for all kinds of funeral flowers. Carnations are very scarce and poor. Asters were almost ruined by the heavy rains and hail. Gladioli are very plentiful, but in poor demand.

Various Notes.

Our Milwaukee delegation was well pleased with the trip, and all agree that it was the very best convention they ever attended.

Vacations are still in order and seem to be very popular. C. B. Wilhelmy has just returned from a two weeks' trip to New York City, Philadelphia and Atlantic City, stopping at many cities going and coming, and visiting as many florists as time would permit. Mr. Wilhelmy speaks very highly of the eastern florists, their places and the many kindnesses shown him.

F. R. Williams and family have returned from a two weeks' lake trip to West Superior and Duluth. Mr. Williams reports a delightful trip, and recommends it for anyone desiring a rest.

William Warnke spent his vacation at Painesville and had a splendid time.

E.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—James Pont, M. J. Henry, C. Helmer and Mr. Jacobs, accompanied by H. H. Page and Ed Tunnecliffe, of Henry's forces, are off on their annual hunting and fishing trip for two weeks.

AN EDITORIAL ENDORSEMENT.

The following editorial under the caption, "Why Not?" appeared in the Washington Post, August 22:

At the annual meeting of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, at Milwaukee, on the 20th inst., Mr. William Scott, of Buffalo, read a resolution, which was adopted, asking the Department of Agriculture at Washington to build greenhouses, as some of its experimental work, and attempt to solve the problem of the florists in plant nutrition, propagation, and culture, as it did the farmers' problems.

It strikes us that this is not a bad suggestion. Floriculture is a great and a very rapidly increasing business. We can mention no other of the very ancient callings that has, in the last four or five decades, developed so rapidly as this. It would be quite within bounds to say that the sale of flowers in this city has increased ten-fold since 1865. This may be, to some extent, an exceptional growth, but something closely akin to it has been going on in all American cities. The Agricultural Department has greenhouses and makes a superb floral display in its home grounds; but it might well go much further.

If it be suggested that the element of utility is lacking, because flowers are not edibles, we reply that all things which minister to the love of beauty, all things that refine and elevate the mind, are useful. There is practical utility in any and all agencies for improving the race. The esthetic sense may quite as properly receive the attention of the Department of Agriculture as the appetite for hog and mowing. An art which develops one of the most beautiful flowers from a common pasture weed is not to be lightly esteemed.

THE BEST.

I received the Convention Number of your paper and please accept thanks for same; it is a complete work, the best I have seen, and makes me think I cannot do business without the REVIEW. Enclosed find $1 for a year's subscription.—J. M. LOWN, Rhinebeck, N. Y.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

We had very cool weather for the month of August. Old-timers say it is the coldest August for twenty-two years. There is plenty of funeral work, but not much of anything else to do. Asters are very plentiful. We are getting some very nice Semples.

A visit to S. S. Peckham's greenhouses in Fairhaven found him very busy installing a little water works of his own. Mr. Peckham has had harder work getting a sufficient supply of water than a man would have getting a supply of Milwaukee beer in a no-license town, but he thinks he is on easy street now so far as water is concerned. He is getting his water from a never failing spring about a quarter of a mile from his place, pumping it to his greenhouse with a petroleum engine. Mr. Peckham's stock is looking fine and his houses are all cleaned up in good shape for the coming winter.

E. Y. Pierce has just finished a new house and has it planted in chrysanthemums.

A. B. Hathaway has not yet finished his new house, but says he will have it completed in a few days.

Arthur Ashley, formerly manager of the Tuxedo Greenhouses, is erecting a new house, 30x140, on Hillman street. He intends to fill it with carnations.

The Mann brothers, of Randolph, have been the guests of E. H. Chamberlain.

Mr. Munson, of New Haven, Mr. Ringier, of Bobbink & Atkins, Mr. Greenlaw, of N. F. McCarthy & Co., and a new man from W. A. Manda's, whose name we did not learn, have all been recent visitors.

R. E. Nofftz has returned home from a visit to his old home in Germany. Dick is looking fine. He says he is feeling much better and would like to have staid longer. You will hear something from the Florists' Club now that Dick has returned.

OMAHA.

The past week was an improvement over the preceding one, but that is not saying much. Stock is very poor and scarce, caused by excessive rains. The heaviest rainfall ever experienced in Omaha came Wednesday, August 26, almost six inches in twelve hours, and in thirty hours over nine inches of water fell.

L. Henderson and Wm. Ellsworth and wife have returned from their eastern trip.

Miss Maude Quarnstrom, with A. Donaghue, has returned to her post after spending a fortnight on a farm.

TOUGHKENAMON, Chester Co., Pa., Dec. 29, 1902.
MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.

Yours very truly, ROBERT C. BANCROFT.

Impressions of Western Growing Methods.

BY JOSEPH HEACOCK, WYNCOTE, PA.

One of the pleasantest features of the convention of the S. A. F. is the opportunity it gives of meeting our brethren of distant parts of our great country, and when time permits to see their places; to actually shake hands and talk with the man who has the largest greenhouse establishment in the world, to compare notes and then to feel how far these men of Chicago have passed us of the east.

A party of twenty-five were, on the Saturday after the convention, piloted from the center of Chicago to Peter Reinberg's. A pleasant ride of nearly an hour by trolley, and it was announced "we get out here." One of the party on a rear seat, upon arising and catching his first view of the houses, the ends of which, abutting on the street, reached nearly half a mile along the highway, raised his hands towards heaven and exclaimed, "Oh! my God!"

I shall never forget the first view, for it seemed to me that there was nothing to be seen but glass. Nor shall I forget the last view, for there stood those ten immense brick stacks (besides several belonging to Geo. Reinberg) some seventy-five feet high, standing like sentinels, as it were, over all that glass.

No time was lost, and we were conducted through house after house of carnations and roses, all in fine condition, until we met and were introduced to the proprietor. We of the east have been under the impression that these immense places in and around Chicago have been developed from the sale of land that had become immensely valuable as the city had grown up around them. One has but to go through them to see that this is a mistake, and when I told Mr. Reinberg of the impression we had, his answer was characteristic of the man in frankness. "Twenty years ago I owned this ground and was in debt $5,000. Seventeen years ago I built my first greenhouse with borrowed money and grew lettuce in it. I have recently bought forty-five acres two miles from here so as to get soil in the future." We were told by another that that crop of lettuce paid so well that in a few months Mr. Reinberg took the money back to his good friend that had loaned it to build his first house.

They have over 1,000,000 feet of glass (nearly as much as all the glass around Philadelphia) and use over 10,000 tons of coal per annum under thirty-four steam boilers. A new block of houses has just been finished nearly 300 feet square, built on the ridge and furrow plan, using the Garland gutter, it being supported on iron posts about eight feet from the ground. They have been planted and everything is promising well. It is a beautiful house, not a partition of any kind in it.

We were introduced to Mr. Collins, the foreman on the place, who has been with Mr. Reinberg since he commenced growing roses. One of the latter's strong points, it is easily to be seen, is to know a good man and then to keep him.

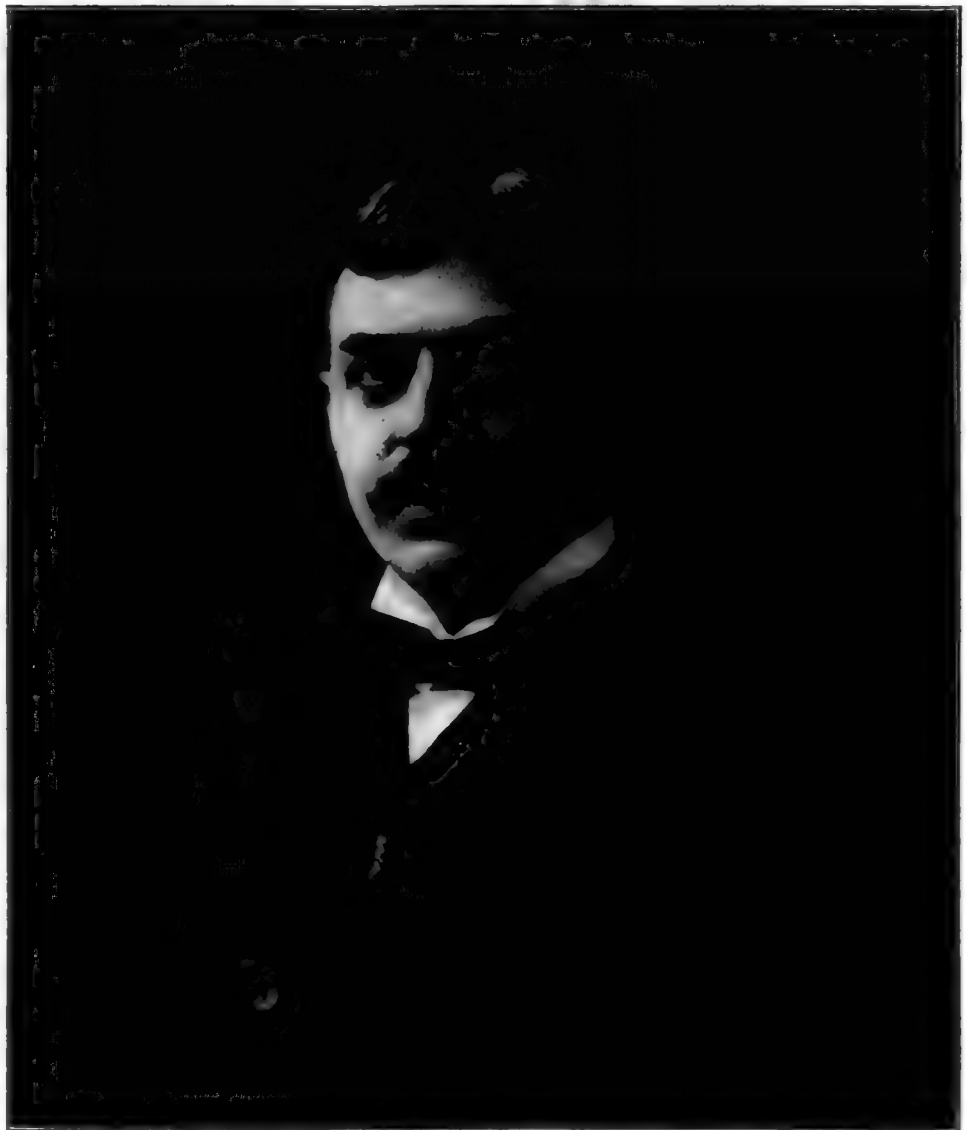

In the afternoon we went out to Western Springs, where we were served with a very substantial lunch and were then treated to a straw ride to Bassett & Washburn's place at Hinsdale, where we saw roses and carnations in such fine condition that it made at least one eastern grower envious. What a magnificent growth they had! And what quantities of manure they used! They have a good soil and brains to use it. But with all these brains, soil and manure the Chicago places owe their immense growth to the railroad facilities that center at that place. Their product is known from Pittsburg on the east to eled 1,400 miles into the enemy's country to prove that the best roses were grown around Philadelphia. He came home feeling that he was right. If he ever goes again he will expect to be licked.

PRESIDENT BREITMEYER.

We note that William Scott was pleased with the portrait of President Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, which appeared in our Convention Number; not so the president himself. Not only did that portrait show the new executive as he was in the days which, if they were not of the long ago, were certainly some years back, but he was there arrayed in full dress, apparel which should never be seen before the dinner hour, and Mr. Breitmeyer observed that so great was the interest in the Convention Number and its fresh, clean contents, that not one subscriber left the wrapper on his paper until after dinner; but, quite the contrary, lost no time in letting the sun of morning in upon that portrait of our president in his evening suit. As we were partly responsible for this breach the Rocky Mountains on the west; from Canada on the north to the Gulf on the south.

We returned to Chicago much pleased with our day's outing and regretting that we had not more days to spend in the same way, promising ourselves to take a few days off from our labor and go again to see more of the great places around Chicago. The writer once travof the proprieties, in that we did not give Mr. Breitmeyer's portrait time to change its clothes before parading it before the admiring people that morning after the convention, we take pleasure in presenting here a picture which does its subject better justice.

CARLSON'S ASTER.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs showing two fields of Carlson's Improved aster. These fields are growing northwest of Chicago and are for E. H. Hunt's seed crop. No blooms are being cut and the plants are being carefully rogued to eliminate any not true to type. There is very little disease and no yellows. This variety originated at Washington Heights, just outside of Chicago, and was originally put on the market by the venerable D. S. Heffron. It is a vigorous, strong grower, producing very large flowers on long stems, and a characteristic is that very few of the flowers show a yellow center, which is a quite common fault this season with many varieties.

CANADIAN FLORISTS' CONVENTION.

The sixth annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association was held at Toronto, September 2 and 3. President Thos. Manton was in the chair and the association was well represented by members from all over Ontario, Quebec and a few from the maritime provinces. The delegates were welcomed to the city by Mayor Urquhart and Ald. Hubbard, and the reply to the address of welcome was delivered by Mr. Walsh, of Montreal, who certainly gave Toronto great credit for the rapid advances she had made in horticulture.

After these opening formalities, the president's address was given. He dwelt at some length on the labor question, also the different experiences by many importers in having goods properly appraised by the customs officers. In his remarks on the labor question, he said that the reason that better help can not be sein charge by the Steel Briggs Seed Co., and entertained at their grounds.

At the afternoon session a paper on "Floral Art and Value" was given by H. G. Dilleuth, manager of Dunlop's King street store. In the evening a paper was given by A. Gibb, of Montreal, on "Public Parks and Squares." R. W. King, of Toronto, read a paper on "Greenhouse Construction and Operation," dealing with heating and ventilating in a practical way.

E. J. Mepsted gave the association an invitation to Ottawa for next year, which was accepted on motion of Messrs. Bennett and Robinson, of Montreal. Judges were appointed to examine the trade exhibit and report.

Thursday morning the delegates were taken in hand by the city council and after driving around the city, were taken to High park and entertained to luncheon. From there they went to the trial grounds of the William Rennie Seed Co. Here the visitors were photographed. From there they returned to the exposition grounds and the concluding session was held in Directors' hall. Thursday evening a banquet was tendered to the delegates by the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association.

At the Thursday afternoon session much comment was made upon the trade exhibit and the Toronto delegates received some chaff from Hamilton and other delegates, who considered that the trade exhibit was not up to the Hamilton exhibit. Especially did the King Construction Co. and D. J. Sinclair get the benefit of this, as they put up quite a large exhibit at Hamilton last year and were noticeable this year by their absence.

The election of the officers was held Thursday evening and results as follows: President, E. J. Mepsted, Ottawa;

Manton, was presented with a beautiful arm-chair in recognition of his valuable services to the association during the past year.

Notes and Comments.

It will be well if Ottawa will take a practical pointer for next year on the mistakes that have been made the past two years in regard to trade exhibits. Last year the convention met some two miles from the hall in which the exhibition was held. This year it was four miles, and with the program of three sessions a day, it was impossible for delegates to visit the trade exhibition for more than an hour or so during the whole convention. If Ottawa could make it possible to hold the convention and trade exhibition in the same hall many of the large exhibitors will be inclined to take it up again. D. J.

We are growing older and wiser, too, it is to be hoped. Certainly we are growing in bulk. The sixth annual convention, just held in Toronto, was decidedly the most successful in every respect that has been. (Someone perhaps may tell you, with the exception of the trade exhibit; the writer believes, without exception.) The meetings were well attended, the number of delegates was one-third larger; the papers were most interesting and instructive; the discussions, when the boys did get going, were bright and lively; the president was a general favorite; the round of entertainment was continuous and the utmost sociability and good will prevailed. What more could possibly be wanted? The enterprise of Montreal and Ottawa is especially to be lauded, both cities sending large contingents of "jolly good fellows" and "daisies." Kingston sent a contingent of one, but he represents his city in a manner entitling him to be called a Timothy Eaton, chrysanthemum. (The next one sent out, bigger and better than Timothy Eaton, should be called Orlando Johnson.) The champion long distance delegate hailed from Truro, Nova Scotia. He was rewarded by being elected second vice president for the ensuing year. One of the most pleasing incidents of the convention was the presentation of a roll top desk to the retiring president, Thos. Manton. It was the unanimous opinion of the delegates that he thoroughly deserved all he got. There are "daisies" and "chrysanthemums" and "jolly good fellows." Tom is all three rolled together and has a heart as big as a sunflower.

Mr. Editor, it is not the intention of "yours truly" to inflict on your readers a stilted, conventional report of the proceedings; perhaps a few short notes will save time, space and bad language.

Mayor Urquhart charmed the hearts of everyone in his address of welcome and also in his speech at the closing banquet. It is necessary to say "closing" banquet, there were so many of them.

The president's address was as full of good points as a packet of tacks. Some of the points are going to stick in, to the treasurer.

The treasurer reported a considerable increase in the size of the association's bank account.

The paper and practical illustration on design work and values by Mr. Dilleuth revealed the fact that he is a "bird" of the first water.

A good paper may always be expected of R. W. King, on anything connected with greenhouse construction. He gave forty minutes of good, solid, substantial matter.

Crop of Carlson's Improved Aster, Pink, Growing for Seed.

cured by the florists is the low wages being paid to those who are considered capable men. Mr. Dunlop gave his experience with the late Gardeners' and Florists' Union.

After the morning session, which was concluded by the secretary's and treasurer's reports, the delegates were taken first vice president, Geo. Robinson, Montreal; second vice president, C. Suckling, Truro; treasurer, Hermann Simmers, Toronto; secretary, A. H. Ewing, Woodstock. W. Gammage, London; J. H. Dunlop, Toronto, and C. Webster, of Hamilton, were elected to the executive committee. The retiring president, Thos.

The government has got to take the duty off azaleas, and appoint a horticultural expert as appraiser, "and so say we all of us."

More time is wanted to do business at the trade exhibit. Certificates and honorable mentions should be given to deserving exhibitors.

The question box was well used. Ottawa next year. E.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Early Blooms.

The early blooming varieties, if housed in July, will by this time have become sufficiently established to give fairly good bloom and stem, making the temptation very strong to allow a crop to mature, especially at this time, when carnations are in short supply. If you are sure of a market at remunerative prices, it will, perhaps, be good policy to get into evidence, but do not over-do the matter, especially with varieties you know will be in great demand at the holidays, with prices to correspond.

Pink and white are the colors most likely to be sought for, and Nelson and Queen Louise are good ones to depend upon to furnish these. Crane is the best scarlet for early, but had best be held for future high prices. Estelle ought on no account to be allowed to bloom early. It is most beautiful in color, but throws many single flowers if allowed to bloom before getting exceedingly well established.

Mrs. Potter Palmer should be handled with a view to producing a supply at Christmas and thereafter. It is somewhat impatient of disturbance in lifting in hot weather, and the blooms being of very large size it requires a lower temperature than can be had for some time yet to develop its blooms to perfection. With all this, it is surprising how well its color holds under the hot sun of spring and early summer. We are growing it this year in solid beds in a cool house, and from present appearances, it will go ahead of last year's fine showing.

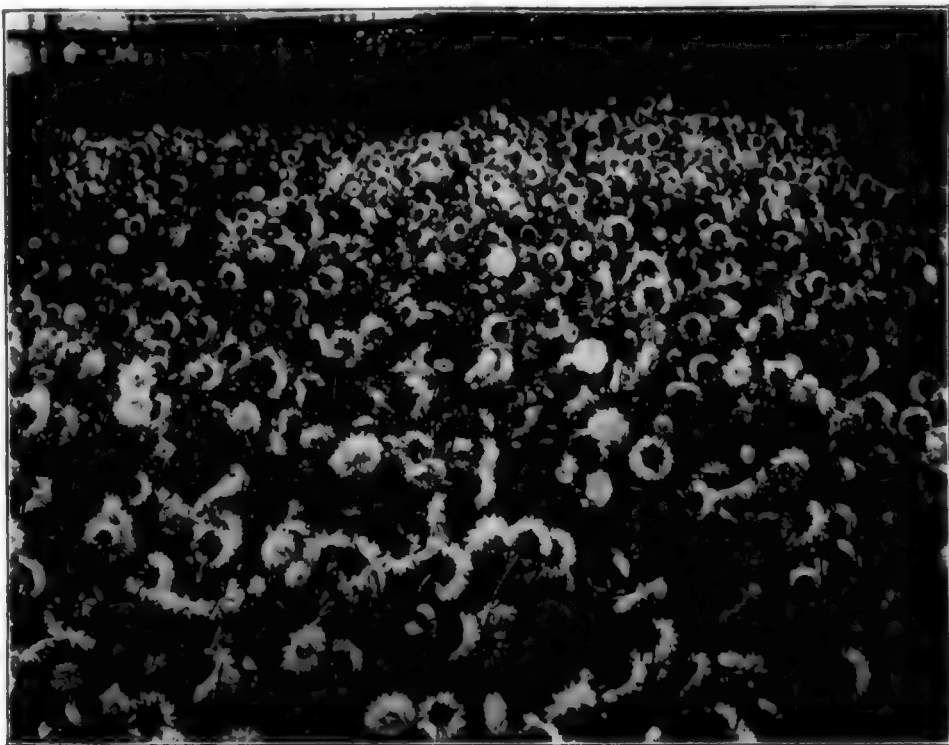

Supports.

So much has been written on this matter, and growers in general being possessed of inventive brains, I cannot add much but to advise the use of such as will not prevent free circulation of air among the foliage or free access to the soil for the removal of weeds, application of top dressing or liquid food, and the introduction of water at times when wetting the foliage is not desirable.

The actual cost of material used in some systems may be small, while the labor involved in putting up may over-balance the total expense incurred by the use of a method which at first cost may seem large. Then comes the question of how many years the same material may be used without additional outlay. This is our fifth year with the Model stake, which has given much satisfaction and no repairs have been needed. Whatever you use the sooner the supports are put up the better.

Fumigation.

Last year I advised the use of aphid punk for the prevention and destruction of greenfly, but I find that this handy and effective insecticide seems to have gone the way of many other good articles, deteriorated in strength; at least this was the case with a lot I saw opened very recently. I am very sorry to make these remarks, but I feel that I cannot at present recommend its use. We are now using tobacco dust, burning it frequently as a preventive, which is far better than to wait until a cure is needed.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Before the opening of the season arrives, we should have all the arrangements made for the successful storage and care of the buds between the time of cutting and that of dispatching to our customers. The care and skill bestowed on the cut during this period is an important factor in the lasting qualities of the blooms, an item that goes far in gaining their good will and retaining their trade.

Arrangements should also be made to keep a record of all blooms cut during the season. We start this record-keeping on October 1 and continue up till Memorial day, which embraces the real harvest season. By this method we can, at the end of the season, know definitely the relative value of each variety grown, as no amount of guesswork can in any way give a satisfactory idea of what has been done. It has frequently happened in my experience, both with roses and carnations, that the varieties which got the most credit from mere guesswork were not by any means entitled to it when the total for the season was reckoned.

An easy and convenient method of keeping a true record is to have a sheet of cardboard tacked up in each house, with columns for each of the varieties in the house, and spaced off with lines for each day of the month. These sheets can either be filed or the totals copied into the journal and totaled at the end of the season. Similar sheets should also be in use in the sorting room, with columns added to show the numbers of the different grades.

There are many advantages to be derived from such a system, one of the most important being that by a careful study of the records from day to day it is a simple matter to find out whether the crop is on the increase or on the wane, and to take orders accordingly. The man in charge of each house or section of houses can also at any time find out just how he stands by comparison with his neighbor in charge of another section and naturally tries to emulate his most successful rival.

Of course, we cannot confine ourselves to growing only those varieties which are proved to be the most profitable in our soils and conditions, as our customers' wants have also to be considered, but with the facts before us when laying down our future planting plans, while giving every consideration to the customer end of the question, we must have it so that there will be a generous profit left for the labor, trouble and anxiety of the year.

RIBES.

"AT BUYER'S RISK."

The following "opinion" should be of much interest to everyone in the trade as it was prepared by W. T. Alden, of the law firm of Alden, Latham & Young, Chicago, at the solicitation of a wholesale florist who likes to be sure of the ground upon which he stands. It covers, in a most explicit way a point which probably arises more often than any other in the too frequent controversies between shipper and consignee. An understanding of the legal phase of the question may here be obtained:

"Regarding your request for an opinion as to your rights where buyers of your goods refuse to accept the same and refuse to pay the purchase price, claiming that the goods have deteriorated in transit, we desire to submit the following:

"The law is well settled in the states of Illinois, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Massachusetts and New York, that where there is nothing in the contract of sale to the contrary, a delivery of goods by the seller to a transportation company amounts to a delivery of goods to the buyer, and the goods are, during transit, wholly at the risk of the buyer, and if they deteriorate in value while in transit, either as a result of natural causes, such as the change in climatic conditions, or on account of delays of the transportation company, the purchaser must stand the loss; and if the transportation company is liable for damages, he (the purchaser) must make claim against the transportation company for damages, and not the seller.

"This principle applies to goods that are of a perishable nature, such as your line, to-wit: flowers. It necessarily, therefore, follows in your case that your customer in each instance cannot refuse to accept and pay for your goods where there is nothing in the contract of sale to show that you warrant the condition of the goods at their destination, or where you use ordinary, reasonable care and caution in packing and preparing the goods for shipment.

Brewing Co., 60 Ill. 158; Mobile Fruit & Trading Co. vs. Judy, 91 Ill. App. 82; Bridge Company vs. Hamilton, 110 U. S. 113; English vs. Spokane Commission Co., 51 Fed. R. 451; Mee vs. McNider, 109 N. Y. 500.

"As a matter of policy it is, of course, a good idea to call this fact to the attention of your customers, by referring to it in your business terms, printing it in your advertising matter and on your stationery, etc. We desire to say, however, that your use of this disclaimer on your stationery will not give you any greater legal rights, strictly speaking, although it places you in a much better position in case you get into controversy with any of your customers, as a matter of argument if for no other reason.

"While we have not examined the law in other states than those above referred to, we feel reasonably safe in saying that the law as above stated is universal in this country, although we would not give an absolute opinion without referring to the authorities."

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

FLORAL ART AND VALUES.

The following is a paper by H. G. Dilleuth, of Toronto, read before the Canadian Horticultural Association, September 2, 1903:

In the making of vases such as are used in the stores every day, care should be taken that the flowers are always placed so as to make them most presentable, not only from an artistic, but from a practical view also. Many of our customers shop considerably and they do not always get the best stock, but that which has been properly arranged so as to appeal to them. The goods we handle are perishable and should be handled accordingly, which is quite necessary if flowers are to retain their fresh appearance.

The professional artist is usually a good colorist, for he will scarcely be able to reach that position without having a good eye for color. This is one of the main essentials in our business, for many an otherwise artistic arrangement has been spoiled by colors which did not harmonize. Another essential is confidence and the quick grasp of an idea which a patron will often convey. Try to keep in harmony with any feasible suggestion and have confidence enough in yourself to describe the way in which details may be carried out. There are many who remain in the business year after year, and who are in the best of positions to learn the technicalities connected with it but who, after years of struggle, are not much better qualified than when beginning. Although anyone with an artistic temperament and some practice can arrange a design after a fashion, there are too many who never take into consideration that an infinitude of small details always exists.

Design making is probably the most important part of the retail storeman's trade, for there is more money made in this than in any other branch. In planning or making up a design the artist should ever keep in mind the effect of the picture as a whole when viewed from different points. I have had many opportunities of seeing designs made up by different firms, and have often noticed that what looked like an artistic piece of work from a distance, did not appear so under closer scrutiny. In these days when galax leaves and hardy ferns are so cheap there is no reason why standing designs should be sent out which, when seen from the opposite side, should confront one with patches of moss, tinfoil and toothpicks all exposed, and not the faintest pretence made at covering the back. I have also seen designs that were filled with moss so water-soaked that there was a constant drip of water falling over the sides of the casket and onto the floor. Although a certain amount of moisture is required to keep flowers, yet it is not good to have your designs in this latter condition. In the arranging of your designs do not try to use up all the old available material in your establishment; use two or three kinds of flowers and keep the varieties separate and a more striking effect will be obtained, for in grouping your varieties you are again only copying nature and care should be taken that all toothpicks and wire are hidden from view. Avoid overcrowding; density is not desired. Rather have your flowers on the spare side and use plenty of good foliage, the same as grew with the flowers you are using, though often some good fern or asparagus adds beauty to the arrangement. Society emblems, as a rule, are not a credit to the designer who made them and many of these designs which are sent out would be much easier recognized if a label accompanied them, announcing what they are. Whatever it is about a design that is expected to appeal to the public most forcibly should be arranged with the details brought out most prominently. The study of ornamental design trains the eye to recognize and the hand to execute that beauty of line and proportion necessary in designs of this kind.

Under this same heading of floral art comes window and store decorating. How much better the stores look today with a few nice baskets or palm leaves decorating the ceiling and walls than they used to look when covered with a number of rusty frames of the different designs. The importance of a well decorated store can not be overestimated, as a particularly well arranged display of stock will always attract some attention and a lasting impression is made on those who see it. Idle curiosity may be the feeling with which they view it, but later on, some flowers may be required and your nicely kept window and well arranged store will be remembered.

The window display is gradually working its way to the front and many florists are today taking advantage of this method to aid in promoting sales. Many dollars are expended on worthless advertising in programs, etc., which would be much better expended on handsome vases or jardinières for the window, and if the possible results are realized you would not grudgingly figure on the expenditure of this money. The chief defect in the decoration of many of the windows today is overcrowding. A simpler and broader treatment in your display will give much better results. The fault of over-decoration comes from viewing from too close range and not considering that the public view from the sidewalk or the other side of the street.

To decorate the window properly much depends on the window itself. Width, height and depth must be taken into consideration. One pretty effect is to take shades of the same color and begin with the lightest and work back to the darkest. Large vases or pieces look better in the center or background, and often a vase or large basket of some real good flower with some nice ferns is enough for the window. Crape papers are not as much in demand as formerly, and though sometimes desirable, as a rule have a cheap look. Good, clean stock, good vases and clean windows are absolutely essential, and it may be a good plan to try various clerks to see which can make the best display. Frequent changes are necessary, even though the next arrangement will not be as good as the one displaced.

Decorations also demand artistic ability and some of the commonest forms such as arches, pillars, scrolls, etc., are often so badly proportioned as to be grotesque rather than adding beauty to the residence or church. Detail is as necessary here as in funeral work, and all decorations should be carried out with a view toward lightness instead of trying to get rid of a large quantity of stock. Harmony of color and concentrating your ideas to certain points which will prove conspicuous will be more effective than having a few flowers or plants scattered over a wide space. Try to have your decorations appear to advantage when first seen, for it is the first impression which is usually lasting.

Sometimes a clear space or wall can be made to look very pretty with festoons of flowers and ribbon, or empire wreaths. See that all flowers used are fresh and put as many of the flowers as possible into vases, for they will retain their freshness much longer. The most expensive flowers are not always necessary, for very fine work can be arranged with wild flowers and many of the shrubs and vines which grow on the usual florists' establishment.

Values usually vary according to the locality or to the customer. There are hardly two firms whose system of valuating is the same, though it is generally understood that the retailer adds 100 per cent to what the goods cost him. In some cases this amount is satisfactory and in others it is too little or too much, as the case may be. At seasons when the wholesalers charge their highest prices there are few stores which get the recognized 100 per cent. Often on high-priced stock 50 per cent is sufficient, while there are, again, times when 400, 500 or even 1,000 per cent are realized on the cost of the goods. The best value for flowers is usually derived from made-up work. By this I mean designs, bouquets and decorations. Here it is that the artist has a proper place to display his talent and the fewer flowers he uses in getting the effect desired, helps to add to the profits.

Where more than one clerk is employed better satisfaction can be given and better prices obtained by having a stated clerk look after certain patrons who are accustomed to coming regularly to the store. The best artist is not always the best salesman, for he often carries a look of superiority with him which is quite necessary when an order is being given for an elaborate decoration, but which is often out of place when it comes down to a mere dozen carnations.

Too many of the smaller retail stores are run in a haphazard way. There are many flowers and plants handled in which there are no profit. You should know in dollars and cents which of the specialties are making or losing money. With this knowledge we would be able to drop our unprofitable branches.

TROUBLE WITH ROSES.

I see by the REVIEW that all the boys in the rose line that get into trouble come to you for advice, so you can add another victim to the procession. I took charge of this place on March 24. My stock was small and weak, yet I have seen and handled stuff just as poor before. I planted some in May, then in June, and some in July, and it has not behaved at all well. The soil is a good clay loam, with one-fifth cow manure. I feel it is not the soil to blame, as a neighbor has good stuff in exactly the same soil and same compost. I have six houses 26x125. Four of these are the continuous house, without walls. In the north house I have Beauty and Perle, which have done very nicely, yet the Beauty is not as strong as might be. The next two houses are Bride and Maid, which have not done at all well. They grow weak and puny, don't make the strong healthy wood they should. The next house is Gate and Ivory, which have done fairly well. Then comes glass in that wall south. Then comes a house with Carnot and Kaiserin, which we call the summer house. It was planted May 5 and has done splendidly. Everything was planted out of "threes," except Beauty, all or practically so in the same soil.

Now what I want to know, is it the fault of the houses, or my fault? I have had charge and grown roses for the past twelve or fourteen years, but have never had such luck before. The houses have been built three years, good and clean, and every facility to do good work. I am the third man in charge, and my predecessors have had the same experience. I never had roses in this style of house before, but have grown good carnations in this style. The sixth house is in Meteor, same soil, but closed like No. 5, and they have done excellently. That is what makes me ask if it is the houses. In your writing you have said, "A good man will adapt himself to his houses." Well, I have done everything I know how, but I cannot start the Brides and Maids.

If there is anything in the world I can do to get something out of this stuff, I wish you would tell me how to go about it. I know you can tell me if anybody can. Allow me to take this opportunity to thank you for the rose notes each week in the REVIEW, as I think they are fine for both the old and young growers.

N. G.

After a careful perusal of this letter, I cannot find wherein he has gone astray in his general treatment of his stock, and as he has been successful using the same methods in former years, we must look for some other cause for the failure. From his description of the houses, they appear to be in every way suited for rose growing. I do not think the fault is there. The soil also appears to be all right, seeing that his neighbors use the same kind with success.

Judging from the way the stock behaves, the only feasible cause appears to lie in having used weak and degenerate stock, and we all know how difficult it is to get such stock to produce strong, vigorous wood in time for fall or early winter cutting.

So long as the foliage retains its color and freshness, as it appears to do in this case, the best method of treatment would be to stimulate root action by persistent cultivation, using a slight top-dressing of air-slaked lime before ruffling, alternating this every two weeks with a light sprinkling of bone, but never using the two in combination. As the plants are weakly, it is better not to attempt any other kind of feeding until they become stronger.

If the blooms are not required very badly, it would be advisable to continue disbudding for some time, but if the flowers are needed, cut more with a view to the welfare of the plant than with the object of securing a long stem. It would also be well to start night firing, as the majority of nights are now too cold to admit of ventilating freely without it. With his long experience I need scarcely remind him of the necessity of being extra careful with his watering.

From the full text of his very confidential letter, I can see that he is very much disturbed over his seeming failure, but he must not lose courage, as it is from encounters like these, and which most of us have experienced, that the observant grower emerges with added knowledge which fits him for future battles.

RIBES.

MORE REMINISCENCES.

"How dear to our hearts are the scenes of Milwaukee."

When fond recollection presents them to view: The lakeside, the trolley ride, the trip to the gun club, And every bright spot which in four days we knew."

One thing which impressed us very much was the cordiality with which we were met on all sides. Every one seemed glad to see us, and, like the small boy, we were glad we had come.

"Ye scribe" enjoyed a trip to the parks which was not a part of the regularly prepared program. We found them equal to the description given beforehand, and more, for how can cold type tell of the beauties of a pansy bed, filled with hundreds of saucy faces that gaze into yours, or the brilliant glory of a border of hardy phloxes?

Our friend from "Posey Kounty" accompanied us on the day of the Ladies' Ride, and told the following doleful tale while taking in the beauties of Lake park. It seems that this particular gentleman always (?) carries his own drinking cup, and upon leaving one of the palm gardens, he very carelessly left his cup at one of the tables. Upon returning for it a few minutes later, he discovered that it was ruined, for as he told it: "It was full of Schlitz" (slits). It nearly took a surgical operation to get the aforesaid into the cranium of a member from Iowa.

The day of the shooting tournament there was one event which was not given in the returns, and that was the shooting done by the two school ma'ams from the west. An empty cartridge box was badly mutilated, and both of the ladies carried a well-marked impression of Mr. Altick's gun for at least two weeks.

Then the trip to Chicago again demonstrated the thoughtfulness of our hosts and hostesses. Could anything have been better planned than the dainty lunches? The very air was filled with good cheer, and some were so enthusiastic that they had to give vent to their feelings by dancing, even though our friend from the sunny southland said it was wicked, simply because he couldn't dance.

As a fitting close to the day of pleasure was the dinner at the Auditorium. And could anything have been prettier than the dear Scotch song sung by our favorite orator from Philadelphia? We surely ought to have more such music, and we trust that Mr. Craig will be with us at many more conventions.

The concert must not and will not be forgotten. As we wended our way back to the hotel, the strains of many of the selections kept repeating themselves again and again.

Upon our return to Milwaukee on Saturday, we could find none of the familiar buttons which had been so numerous all during the week. When we reached Chicago on our homeward way, we were accosted by, "There is one of those buttons now," and were greeted in his most hearty manner by Mr. Schmeling, who inquired about Milwaukee as minutely as though he had been absent a month.

So it goes. Every day we recall something that was said or done in Milwaukee and the memory of the good time will linger with us until we pass the mile post which shows us the time is near to go to St. Louis, and then anticipation will be our portion until we greet old friends and make new acquaintances in the city beside the Father of Waters.

PERLE.

THE S. A. F. AT ST. LOUIS.

"At St. Louis next year," said F. W. Taylor, chief of horticulture at the World's Fair, "it should be possible to more than double the attendance at the Milwaukee convention, successful as that meeting was in all its features. It is understood, of course, that the society will be invited to hold its business sessions on the exposition grounds, where a suitable hall for such meetings is now being built in proximity to the Agricultural and Horticultural buildings. The use of this hall will be free to the society and should the S. A. F. directors and the St. Louis Florists' Club accept the offer of the exposition management, provision will be made for the housing of the trade exhibition, probably by clearing sufficient space in the Horticultural building. It should not be difficult to secure a very complete trade exhibition, if not considerably the largest on record, for a great variety of the strictly trade wares will be permanently on display throughout the fair, and it only remains to enlist the support of the allied industries and provide for those enterprising business getters whose work was the feature of the Milwaukee show.

"As to the trade itself, there will be the largest showing by florists, nurserymen and seedsmen ever made at any exposition. A great deal of stock is already planted. We are making preparations for planting very much more, beginning about October 1, and much tender stuff is booked to go in next spring. Practically every exhibitor who has shown at previous expositions will be represented and many more besides. It only remains for a favorable growing season to insure a display from which every member of the trade can gain much that is valuable as well as much pleasure."

BUTTED GLASS.

From Greenville, Tex., comes the following: "Is the leakage greater in a greenhouse where the glass is butted than in one where it is lapped? Is there any particular way to butt the glass to prevent leakage?"

I can just imagine the first question being put to a meeting of the S. A. F. & O. H. something in this style: "All who believe there is more leakage in a butted house than a lapped house will please say 'aye.'" A mighty shout would go up. "Contrary, if any?" And there would be only half a dozen to say "No" in all the crowd, but they would be sweet, intelligent voices, conscious that they were speaking truthfully of what they knew.

The question, as it is put above, would need a long explanatory answer. It will entirely depend on the quality of the job done in both cases. A new house, faithfully lapped with the use of putty, should not at first leak a drop. But putty will rot, brads will slip or get loose, and unless a thorough painting is annually done your lapped house will in three or four years have a good many leaks. If the glass is butted with the grooved bar and cap, with no possibility of the bottom light slipping, and the bars are put on absolutely square from plate or gutter and the glass is properly laid, then there will not be a drop of water in the house except at the plate or gutter, where it can be taken care of and will do no harm.

It is impossible to buy glass so truly cut that here and there in the house there will not be a space of a sixteenth of an inch between the edges when butted. Water will not drop from these few misfits; it will run to the bottom. Your butted roof is as tight and sound to-day as it was ten years ago, and that I have had occasion to notice very closely within a few days during the terribly wet spell. "Charlie, do you see, a drop of water on your path?" "No, not one." "That's good, and there's not on my side." I know, Mr. Editor, you don't want too long a story on this old question, so I won't go into the lesser advantages of the butted system, such as quickness in laying the glass, no blowing out and little breakage, ease in removing or alterations, if necessary. Think what a comfort, if overcome with a hail storm, you could have all the sound lights out in a few hours and be ready to begin glazing next day.

As to the last question, there is a particular way to butt the glass, and it is the inexperience and failure to persevere that has led many of our good men to denounce the system. Briefly, the principal rules to follow are: Always let the thin end of the glass lead up the bar. There is always a slight bow to all common glass; let the bow, or convex side, be up. There must be either a check in the wood or metal at plate or gutter to prevent the glass from slipping; or if not a check, then two nails or screws of sufficient strength. If you have to cut a light to bring in the glass the right length, use the small light at the plate. Use a 1 1/8-inch round-headed brass screw and put them in at every light half way its length. Screw down moderately firm, but not so tight as you would the last resting place of your mother-in-law, or the light may crack. Above all, it is useless to expect a good job unless the bars spring from the plate or gutter at a perfect right angle, and allow 1-16 of an inch for play between bars. There are just one or two don't's. If you are near a railroad where the locomotives burn soft coal, or within the influence of city smoke, don't butt the glass, and don't use single thick glass.

TROUBLE WITH PALMS.

I am having trouble with my palms. As soon as a new leaf comes out the ends of the others begin to die. What is the cause and remedy? K. A. W.

This inquiry is so indefinite that it is a difficult matter to offer a suggestion. Had the species of palms been specified, and the conditions under which they are growing, there would then have been something upon which to base an opinion. The tips of palm leaves die off from various causes, sometimes from defective roots and overwatering, but more often from lack of water and too dry an atmosphere.

W. H. TAPLIN.

SPIDERS.

Can you tell me how to get rid of spiders in our greenhouse? They have very long legs and small bodies and are harmful to the plants. We should be very thankful for advice as to how to dispose of them. E. K.

This must be a different spider from any we have seen or heard of. E. K. does not say how they are harmful to the plants, or what plants suffer, whether they cut or suck the juices of the plant, or spin their webs so thickly about the plants as to prevent growth. The little red pest we call red spider is, I suppose, a true spider, because he spins a web, and in syringing the leaves we do no harm to the spider himself but we destroy his web and he can't travel without it and so perishes. He is a vegetarian, but all long-legged spiders that we ever saw are carnivorous. They eat or suck the juices of flies, wasps, butterflies or any insect that is guileless enough to "enter my parlor." Tobacco smoke has no effect on them. We have often, while watching the fumigating pot, noticed the capers of the spiders when the smoke rolled their way. They drop down a few feet, then up again, and are quite busy for a few moments, something as we are at the commencement of a hail storm, but after a time they retreat into the innermost depths of their wonderful dwelling, shut their eyes and dream of some good, fat fly, while we in the hail storm think of John Esler. The hydrocyanic acid gas will kill them, as it will anything that has lungs. If the house were empty, strong fumes of sulphur would settle them, but no house is empty just now. Cobwebs in the corner don't look very nice, but outside of appearances I never heard of their doing any harm.

How many of you have ever read that delightful little book Flashlights of Nature, by Grant Allen, a man who had the faculty to notice more of nature's work in the fields and woods and in the lowly things that creep and fly than any naturalist, perhaps, of any past century. One chapter is devoted to the domestic life and habits of the commonest spider, name I don't pretend to remember, but think it is "Ornithireucum Cannibalensis." Among other intensely interesting descriptions of forming his web, etc., Mr. Allen tells us that when Lady Spider decides to take unto herself a husband she gives due notice in the neighborhood, and two suitors promptly make their appearance, but both at a respectful distance and at different angles. After half an hour of close scrutiny of the charms and other attractions of the two candidates, her choice is made, and the rejected one is overtaken and devoured. The lucky one is then invited home and housekeeping commences. After a few days of blissful honeymoon Mother Spider tires of hubby, and to save herself a lot of talk and divorce proceedings, she pounces on her dear Alphonso and promptly devours him. It is economy in the family and saves a lot of trouble. I may add that in the spider world the wife is superior to the husband in size, sagacity, good looks and utility, and seems to have much the better time of it in this world. Many such true stories of flowers and insects can be found in that wonderful little book, and it is a thousand times better reading than the latest murder trial.

GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION.

The following is a summary of remarks under this head, by R. W. King, of Toronto, before the recent meeting of the Canadian Horticultural Association:

Outside of the aspect as regards the sun's rays and the lie of the land for drainage purposes, there appear to me some questions yet to be considered in choosing a site for greenhouses. Presuming, for instance, that rose-growing is the purpose of the plant, should the location be high or low? Should the climate be warm or cold? In fact, location generally, and for different purposes, is a question that I would like to hear very fully discussed.

I think it would be a good idea to take a census of all growers, successful or otherwise, to determine such questions. For instance, the Dale estate rose ground is practically table land, having a cliff on two sides of it, and is considerably elevated above the level of Lake Ontario. Lawrence, of this city, I think, will tell you that he had poor success in growing roses at Mimico, but good success when he moved his houses to the very much higher land of North Toronto. Mr. Mussen has also had good success at North Toronto. Mr. Dunlop is at a fair distance from the damp air of the lake, and considerably elevated in position. His prevailing winds blow not from, but towards the lake.

In talking with the late Harry Dale on the merits of different forms of construction, with a view to selecting a standard house, he told me what I know to be true. He had built houses running north and south; he had built them running east and west; he had built them short-span-to-the-east and short-span-to-the-west, and he had built them even span; he had built them divided, and he had built them under one roof. The sum-up of his experience as then expressed was, that he had grown prize flowers in them all, and to a profit.

In approaching the question of form for permanent houses on a large scale, I mentally reasoned as follows: Given an area of ground suitably located which we want to cover so we may regulate the temperature artificially without interfering with the sun's rays, let us say, for our argument's sake, that the roof is one solid sheet of glass of circular shape, 100 feet in diameter, surrounded by walls seven feet high. It does not matter how you face that house; it faces the same any way you put it, but it does matter how you plant it. Certain parts will be shaded by the walls, but make your walls of glass, and, as far as absence of shade is concerned, all parts are the same.

Now we will support our roof by posts, say fifteen feet apart each way. If they form rows north and south, they will also form rows half way or diagonally between either of these two positions. The shade thrown by these posts will travel substantially equally over the whole of the house. Following out this argument, I think you will arrive at the conclusion that position in regard to sun's rays has little to do with the form of the house, the main thing being to give the least size to all parts of the roof support consistent with safety.

To illustrate the objection to divided houses from cost of heating standpoint, we will imagine that roadways are cut through the circle referred to. Every roadway necessitates the cost of walls on either side and subtracts from the growing space. The walls, even though glazed, require extra sash and supports, which add to the shade. To avoid the shade of wall surface, was the first object aimed at in raising benches to bring the plants to the light; but as soon as you dispense with your walls this necessity for raised benches disappears. My own solution of this question of form of houses is to keep your blocks square and your roof supports as few as possible.

There is another question affecting the block form of building, and that is ventilation. You know the bugbear of the block system at present is the absence of opportunity in the center of the block for side ventilation. It is said this is not a point in rose growing, but that it is essential for carnations, although I have seen excellent carnations growing in detached houses with no side ventilation, and I may say that I find it is the growers advocating this additional ventilation who are now building very wide houses. I do not wish to propose a question of this kind in any partial light, but since it has become advisable if not imperative for economy in heating, to block your houses, it is wise to consider first such improvements in ventilation as will accord therewith. This I think may be found in double ventilation, or the placing of ordinary ventilators on each side of the ridges.

Another point that might be touched on is that of drainage. When we come to build in block, where the rain cannot get away at the sides of narrow houses, the disposing of a downfall of the liquid element becomes a question to be carefully considered. We do not, in long runs, want to make gutters large enough to carry it off to the ends; and most of us want to use butted glass, which has a faculty of leaking badly when a downpour of rain fills up the valleys beyond the capacity of the gutters to carry it away.

Where the auxiliary gutters are used to catch the leakage and drip, being relieved at short intervals so as to empty into underground drains, we find a disposition to make these underground drains too small. Experience seems to dictate that for a 17-foot house a 2½-inch tile may be used for the first 150 feet, a 3-inch for the next 125 feet, and a 4-inch for the next 125, and 500 feet is as long as we think it advisable, for several reasons, to run a house on the same grade, unless specially designed.

TO REMOVE BOILER SCALE.

Kindly let me know what will take the scale off of boiler tubes and sides. I bought a second hand boiler and there is about ¼ of an inch of scale all over the inside. J. R.

There are many preparations sold for this purpose, but the best I have found is a careful application of hammer, chisel and scraper. HENRY W. GIBBONS.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

H. H. Berger & Co., New York, bulbs and plants; H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, bulbs, seeds, etc.; Chas. Hawkinson, Excelsior, Minn., nursery stock; J. H. H. Boyd, Gage, Tenn., trees and tree seeds; Clare & Scharrath, Jacksonville, Fla., decorative goods; W. C. Beckert, Allegheny, Pa., seeds and bulbs; Alexander Seed Co., Augusta, Ga., seeds and supplies.

ABUTILON.

A subscriber sends a leaf of Abutilon vexillarium and says: "I enclose a leaf of abutilon maple. It grows about eighteen inches high and compact. Give me the name of it and tell me where to get it."

Instead of a compact grower I should call it a spreading or almost creeping plant. The pretty orange and green variegation of the foliage made it quite a favorite some years ago. I have seen it used in flower gardening with good effect and we still use it largely in veranda boxes and vases. You can buy it of any catalogue house in the business. Perhaps a neighbor has some. If so, get some cuttings about the middle of September. Take only the tender tops of the shoots, put them in the sand and keep wet. They don't root in the fall as easily as ageratums, but they root.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

LONGIFLORUMS FOR SUMMER.

I can use some longiflorum lilies during June and July. Do I have to get them from cold storage, or can I get bulbs late this fall, pot them up, keep them outside in a frame on the north side of the greenhouses and take inside about March 1?

P. O.

If you took them into the greenhouse by March 1, they would be in flower by the end of May. The best you could do by keeping them in a cold frame all winter (and that's risky in pots) would be to have them in flower by the end of June, their natural flowering season. It is much better to buy them from a firm that makes a business of keeping them in cold storage, and for July and later this is all you could do. Leave the retarding to the specialist who has the correct methods of doing it, and you will save money and much labor.

DETROIT.President Gets a Watch.

A most pleasant event occurred on Thursday evening, September 3, when the newly elected president of the S. A. F. was decoyed into taking an auto ride to the Rusch House at Grosse Pointe, where he found about forty of his florist friends in waiting and a table spread with good things to eat, the decorations consisting entirely of newly cut grass, with which the table was covered. After enjoying the "feed" and something to wash it down, Mr. Breitmeyer was presented with an elegant gold watch to replace the one stolen at Milwaukee. He was completely surprised, but rallied as only a Detroit man can and made a very good speech. George Reynolds then took hold as toastmaster and called on C. W. Ward and F. W. Creighton, who were visitors, and Rev. Collins, J. F. Sullivan, R. Flowerday, F. H. Beard and others, of Detroit, who all helped to make the occasion one long to be remembered.

Since the meeting of the directors of the American Carnation Society at Milwaukee the premium lists for the March meeting have been increased by the addition of three $25 cups, donated by the Foley Manufacturing Co., of Chicago, one of which Mr. Foley wished to give to the Michigan grower who will exhibit the best vase of his own seedlings

The other two will be placed later. Now we may expect some fine seedlings from Grand Rapids, Saginaw, Mt. Clemens and other towns in Michigan. RAG.

NEW YORK.The Market.

Sir Thomas failed to lift the cup and the festivities which have attended his entertainment, the opening of the schools and the theatrical first nights have so far failed to lift the market. Still a slight improvement is already discernible and every day draws us nearer to the change in the tide. It will all be sunshine soon, and the long experience of "low water" will be forgotten. As was to be expected, the warm spell put a quietus on the violet's prematureness, and it is well. No one wants to wear violets before October.

These are anxious days for the Broadway florists. The Rapid Transit people want to open the street from Fourteenth to Forty-second, and a protest that can be heard from Harlem to the Battery has already reached the powers that be. Should the great thoroughfare be torn up again, it would completely paralyze that section of the florist business and entail losses that with many would be ruinous. The latest scheme is to work only at night and board over the exposed section by day, a compromise that does not meet with much approval. Meantime the trade is hoping for the best and making its window decorations the finest in the world, a reputation which floriculture on Broadway has long enjoyed, and deservedly.

Various Notes.

On September 3 the most gorgeous wedding of the year, the Thayer-Brooks, took place at Newport. Over 3,000 invitations were given. The floral decorations at the church and home were very elaborate, and the wedding breakfast had over a thousand guests. The steamboat companies ran excursions for sight-seers and altogether it was a strenuous time. Carte blanche, as is often the case with the "600," was the florist's order, a commission that makes the remainder of the society season "velvet."

The renovating, enlarging and painting of the wholesale stores continues. Geo. Saltford now has one of the largest and most convenient places on the street. The store is double its former size and is very neatly arranged and decorated. His early experiences in the violet business have borne much fruit. From being a pioneer in Dutchess county he now finds over seventy growers of the favorite flowers. He predicts an enormous output for the season. He has returned, fully recovered from his recent illness, and ready for the enlarged trade for which he has prepared.

Fred Atkins and wife have returned from Europe, after a very successful and pleasant journey. Now look out for agricultural and horticultural novelties and plenty of them.

Patrick O'Mara's indisposition at Milwaukee was short lived, though sufficient to prevent his enjoyment of the boat ride and the Chicago convention festivities, much to his regret. He feels that the O. H. section of the society deserves respectful recognition and predicts the election of Prof. Cowell in 1904. Meantime he agrees with all of us that President Breitmeyer is the right man in the right place.

W. J. Elliott has returned from Northport, L. I., where shooting, yachting, fishing and automobiling combined to make his holiday a healthful one. Next Tuesday begin the auctions, and with no opposition the field should prove remunerative.

Emil Schloss has returned from the west, having called at all the large cities on his way home from the convention.

The firm of Holton & Hunkel, of Milwaukee, was fortunate in securing the entire exhibit of Reed & Keller at the convention.

L. J. Kreshover and wife are enjoying their final outing this week at Atlantic City.

Scallen's new store on Broadway is now occupied by the firm, and on the exact site where the old establishment existed for so many years. It is a handsome and commodious spot.

George W. Crawbuck, of Hicks & Crawbuck, is at Chatham, N. J., with his family, and Mr. Hicks, of the same firm, returns the last of the month from his summer home at Wantaugh, L. I.

J. W. Bebus, with W. J. Elliott & Sons, and a son of the late Jacob L. Bebus, one of New York's pioneer florists, has returned from his summer outing at Alexandria Bay.

C. W. Ward is on a western trip. His article on the peony in the September number of Floral Life is a most interesting one, splendidly illustrated, and occupies the place of honor in the issue.

Sigmund Geller has rented a large storehouse, 158-160 West Twenty-seventh street, for the convenience of his overflow, and his facilities for his increasing trade are thus largely provided for.

Values are rising in real estate in the vicinity of the wholesale district, Twenty-sixth to Thirtieth streets, on account of the projected building of the new Pennsylvania depot.

Tuesday of this week Charles L. Allen, of Floral Park, gave his lecture on "The Inner Life of Plants, or the Soul of Nature," at the exhibition of the Lenox, Mass., Horticultural Society.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The florists' clubs of Hartford, Bridgeport and New Haven held a meeting and outing August 27, at Lake Compounce. About forty members from the three cities were present. The morning was occupied with social intercourse. After dinner there was speaking by members of the club, the toastmaster being A. C. Sternberg, of West Hartford. He made a short speech, after which Theodore Wirth, president of the Hartford Florists' Club, made a few remarks. He was followed by G. X. Amrhyn, president of the New Haven club. The other speakers were C. E. Keith, president of the Bridgeport club, J. A. Thomson, of West Hartford, W. E. Reck, of Bridgeport, H. E. Ferrier, of New Haven and ex-President McDonald, of the Hartford club. After the speechmaking the members went to the bowling alley and rolled tenpins for a handsome loving cup.

ELGIN, ILL.—George Souster has just returned from a month at Mt. Clemens, where he succeeded in getting rid of his rheumatism.

TOLEDO, O.—Henry Krueger, of Krueger Bros., and Miss Agnes Smith, were married September 1, and are on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Business continues on an even gait, but the return of warm weather has largely increased the supply of low grade stock without giving greater cuts of the better stuff for which there is a demand. A continued period of heat could do much harm just now. Some good Beauties are seen and they sell pretty briskly, except that Monday being a holiday resulted in an accumulation either at the greenhouses or the stores. The best roses seen are from old plants, but there are now only exceptional growers cutting these. Brides from the young stock are fair and would be very good with a week of cool weather. Maids are off in color. Liberty is not greatly in evidence.

The carnation growers are cutting away at a great rate, just as though there were not plenty of choice asters. Despite the very large supplies in this line, good asters are selling briskly at good prices, but poor asters can scarcely be sold at all. There are all kinds of gladioli in market, also too many dahlias. Tuberoses are used for funeral work and auratum lilies also. Valley is plentiful.

Wanted: A Show Hall.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago is in urgent need of assistance. It wants a suitable place to hold the autumn exhibition. The Auditorium is not available, the Coliseum cannot be had at the proper dates and the committee knows of no other suitable hall. Any one with a suggestion to make is invited to address P. J. Hauswirth at once, for not a great deal of time remains if a successful show is to be held. If there is no show it will be interesting to note the effect on the market this fall. One gentleman, a member of the society, who has confidence in his opinion, believes it will reduce the value of the local chrysanthemum crop twenty-five per cent.

Local News.

Henry E. Klunder will open a high class retail store at 33 State street on September 17. This will be three flower stores in the one block and all on that side of the street, Mosconesotes being on one side of Mr. Klunder and Bohannan on the other.

George Weiland, son of M. Weiland, at Evanston, was married Tuesday morning and is now on his wedding tour west. The bride is a sister of Mrs. J. P. Risch.

P. M. Brodbeck is starting up his roses again after drying off and resting. His whole place is in Brides and Maids and the plants are at the beginning of their third year in the same soil.

C. A. Samuelson has been fishing north of Ludington, Mich. He reports trade not half bad for so early in the season.

M. Winandy has again possession of the ten greenhouses adjoining his range which were formerly leased to a vegetable grower. He will plant them all to carnations. His total increase in glass this season is twenty houses.

John Degnan is getting up the fall catalogue for the E. F. Winterson Co.

George M. Garland reports a big call for pipe fittings as the growers begin to fire up.

The chrysanthemums at Lincoln Park are in good shape, and a fine show is expected this fall. Alois Frey, formerly of Hartford, Conn., Mr. Stromback's new assistant, likes Chicago and the park work very much.

A. C. Spencer, at Peter Reinberg's, says field-grown carnation plants are selling better than ever; many orders, and the average rather larger than usual.

W. N. Rudd is at Rochester, N. Y., this week, attending the convention of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents.

E. H. Cushman, the gladiolus specialist, of Sylvania, O., is sending quantities of very fine spikes to J. B. Deamud.

O. P. Fordyce, who was at one time in business for himself at Salem, Ind., is now at Bassett & Washburn's, Hinsdale.

Weiland & Risch are getting some good dahlias, but report the sale very slow. They are little wanted in the retail stores.

L. Koropp is building two houses, one 17x55, the other 24x55.

W. W. Barnard & Co. are mailing their fall bulb list.

Visitors: Joseph Molck, Jeffersonville, Ind.; J. Sandstrom, Momence, Ill.; H. C. Irish, superintendent Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis; J. M. Smely, Aurora, Ill.; Geo. Souster, Elgin, Ill.; Jas. McKellar, with Livingston Co., Columbus, O.; Lyle C. Waterbury, Denver; Frank Nichols, Cleveland; Geo. A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Everybody agrees that the first week in September was excellent from a business standpoint. "Better than any week since June"; "better than three weeks in August," and so on comments vary. There is not much stuff coming in, and it is improving. Beauties, Kaiserins, valley and fancy asters have strong support among the buyers of choice stock. Dahlias are increasing in numbers; the ordinary, every-day varieties will soon be eclipsed by the fancy sorts, dahlias that are dahlias, so to speak, and then we shall see something fine.

The Selling of Flowers.

A decided change has been noticed lately in the views of many of the growers who offer their flowers direct to the retailers. For different reasons they are beginning to feel that the days of peddling are numbered. Some will support the Flower Market, some will send to one of the commission houses, while some will continue with the old methods for a while yet. It is doubtful if any who supported the Flower Market for any length of time will ever peddle his surplus again; the object lesson received from the sales of odds and ends is too vivid; the hard cash produced by leftovers makes an impression. The day will never pass when orders will be delivered to the retailers promptly and cheerfully, but this running around with surplus stuff is a waste of time to all concerned, not to be tolerated in modern business.

Holmesburg.

With the brightening up of the cut flower business comes a corresponding improvement in palms and Charles D. Ball, who is recognized as an important factor in our great foliage plant industry, is feeling the effects of this increased business vitality. His packing shed contained many plants neatly boxed and tagged, ready for delivery to the freight station. Mr. Ball has sixteen houses; all were full of fine plants, sturdy and clean, in prime condition to stand a long journey or draught from a hot air furnace.

I was especially pleased with the Kentia Belmoreana. There were plants, some made up and some single, in nearly all the large sizes. In fact, the collection of fine kentias, both varieties, in large sizes, cannot, Mr. Ball claims, be duplicated among home-grown plants here today. They were certainly fine, well worth going out to see. Latania borbonica in salable sizes filled several houses, and there were some nice arecas. Whale oil soap for scale and aphid punk for mealy bug are favored. One is impressed with the fact that neither Mr. Ball nor his able lieutenant-general, W. H. Taplin, have "the fever," but are just contented to keep the houses they have chock full of good, standard stock.

Notes.

The Riverside Greenhouses, Westerly, R. I., are shipping some fine Lillian Pond carnations to Samuel S. Pennock.

Myers & Samtman, of Wyndmoor, are bringing in some fine Beauties and Sunrise to the Flower Market.

William Munro, of Lansdowne, is sending in long-stemmed Kaiserins to Edward Reid.

John Burton's Queen street place has begun shipping Meteors to Leo Niessen.

Eugene Bernheimer was most kindly received by the florists in the nearby counties. This week he visited in Chester county.

W. R. Shelmire, of the Thornhedge Greenhouses, spent some time lately among the carnationists of Long Island.

William K. Harris has lately been entertaining Mark Mills and William K. Harris, Jr., at his Ocean City cottage.

Charles B. Herr, of Strasburg, has built a new house, 100x30 feet. His place is in fine order.

George Goldbach & Sons, Lancaster, have been doing some building and putting their place in shape for the coming season.

H. D. Rohrer, Lancaster, has torn down some old houses and built two new ones, 100x30 each.

Charles G. Johnson, of the Haines Flower Store, Atlantic City, had a large order from the firemen last Wednesday.

R. G. Palmer is bringing in some nice Perles, cut from young stock, to the Flower Market.

The presentation of the Waretown Rod & Gun Club log book and a pretty silver tea set to John Westcott for himself and Mrs. Westcott, was a pleasant feature of the September Florists' Club meeting. Robert Craig made a happy presentation speech. Everybody present toasted the bowling team in Westcott punch from the Hitchings cup.

George M. Moss expects to take a team of bowlers to Atlantic City shortly.

J. Henry Bartram, of Lansdowne, is sending in nice Beauties to Edward Reid.

BUFFALO.—W. F. Kasting's storehouse at 153 E. Mohawk street, was damaged $200 by fire caused by the explosion of an oil stove, August 28.

BILLERICA, MASS.—Backer & Co. have benched all the latest varieties of carnations and propose to go into the cutting business quite extensively next season.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade showed signs of improvement the past week, although some complain that business is still very dull. The wholesalers are not overcrowded with stock of the first grade. Of the second grade there is more than the demand calls for. Roses of the new plantings are beginning to come in, and are of fair quality. Bride, Carnot and Kaiserin are in most demand. Bridesmaid is a little off in color and Meteor mostly bullheads. When in this condition they are of little use for any kind of work. Perle is yet too soft to sell well. The best price for good roses the past week was $5 to $6, but the bulk of the stock went from $2 to $3 per 100. Beauties are as yet limited in supply, but the demand is good and barely enough come in to supply the demand; $2 is the price for the best. All growers about here have about finished planting their carnations, and from reports from some of them the new varieties are doing splendidly. The blooms are improving greatly and they are not so scarce as last week. Good, long stems now bring $1, while for shorts 50 and 75 cents per 100 is considered a big price. Asters are beginning to give out, and very little good house-grown stock is in the market today. Some fairly good shipped in stock is selling well.

It won't be long until chrysanthemums will be with us again. Some of our chrysanthemum growers around here have excellent plants. A visit to a few of these places disclosed the fact that most of them will be right in it again this season. Valley continues good in this market, but the demand is somewhat slow. More of it is being shipped out than sold locally. Armstrong's Ever-blooming tuberosa stalks are in abundance, and most of them come from Kirkwood, the home of the originator. These are sold very cheap in big lots. Gladioli have very little sale, with plenty of them in the market. All outdoor stock is looking better, with plenty of it, and no demand. Hydrangea paniculata is seen in good form at several of the dealers' and sells well. Nothing special in greens this week. Plenty of everything in the market at the usual price.

Various Notes.

S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, was in town last week, selling almost everything a florist uses.

Some of that 3,000 pounds of happiness which our friend, J. Austin Shaw, referred to in last week's issue, was with us last week in the shape of Arnold Ringier, who looks after the interests of W. W. Barnard & Co., of Chicago. Arnold left for the south Sunday night.

John Young and family returned Saturday from a four weeks' stay at Atlantic City, N. J. This much needed rest did John a great deal of good, and he is ready for a big season's business.

J. L. Irwin, who has charge of the Philippine Island exhibit at the World's Fair, is in town with 3,000 orchid plants and some 200 palms. Mr. Irwin is looking for a suitable place here to house the plants during the winter.

The Michel Plant and Bulb Co., September 8, held an auction sale of surplus stock, consisting of ferns, begonias and pot roses.

A visit to the Missouri Botanical Garden last week found Prof. William Trelease returned from his vacation trip and looking over a stack of correspondence which accumulated during his absence. When informed by your correspondent that the S. A. F. would meet with us next year the professor was very much pleased and said he and the directors of the garden would do all in their power to help entertain the visitors during their stay. Everybody was busy in the garden shaping up things to receive the big Sunday crowd, the second of this year.

A visit was also paid to Tower Grove park, adjoining the garden, and found our dear old friend, James Gurney, and his head gardener, Phil Goebel, at the lily ponds. Both were very much pleased that the convention will be held here next year. Mr. Gurney, especially, is delighted with the prospect of seeing many of his old friends who are members of the S. A. F. The large houses in the park are being put in shape to receive all the outdoor plants of this beautiful park, and, as Mr. Goebel says, there is plenty of work ahead from now until frost sets in.

Some of the flower beds and young trees in City Hall park are in very bad condition at the present time, and should be looked after. The park commissioner or his superintendent should place competent men in charge. Experience and not politics should be put in force in the park department. The great concourse of people that the World's Fair will attract next year, together with the visit of the Society of American Florists, should see the parks in the best possible shape. It's up to Park Commissioner Aull and his superintendent, Andrew Meyer, Jr., to make a reputation as to their ability to handle the great parks of our city.

The second open Sunday of this year at Shaw's Garden took place September 6. The day was most beautiful, and some 20,000 persons visited the garden during the day. Everything about the garden looks fine and is in apple-pie order.

Bowling.

The bowling club on Monday night rolled the regular weekly games, in which Charlie Kuehn again showed fine form, making an average of 220. Carl Beyer was second and Beneke third.

BOSTON.

Business is better but cannot be printed in large capitals just yet. Good material is not so plentiful and these two conditions affect prices a bit, but not too heavily. Roses continue much too plentiful, but carnations are really quite scarce. Very few first class asters are seen, but bushels of poor ones.

Edward O'Brien, the Cambridgeport florist, died very suddenly last week. He was feeling as usual and arose at the ordinary hour that morning, but was found dead in the bath room a few minutes later.

As a result of the tearing down of a business block on Washington street, many firms are moving and Mrs. N. F. Sutherland, the Paddock Florist, sells her lease at a good figure, and for the time being salesmen have one less call to make.

Has Elliott's invincible ball team met a Waterloo? G. W. Hilliard's men at Exeter, N. H., have been developing much muscle in the erection of a new greenhouse, much agility in climbing rose bushes to clip off superfluous buds and much endurance waiting for a rise in fall business. So they went over to Madbury a week or so ago and rubbed the baseball situation there right into the mud to the tune of 14 to 2.

The Market.

The past week was one of considerable activity for this time of year. All of the retail florists are busy with large funeral orders. There is a good deal more of first-class stock on the market, the few cool days of last week working wonders, especially with roses. Outdoor stock is in a bad way now, first from lack of rain, and second, the aster bug has descended upon many promising fields. In several cases the asters were a total loss. Home-grown gladioli are poor, owing to the lack of water. The northern asters and gladioli are now in their prime. Some A1 stock is being handled by the wholesale houses, and prices are good. At the present time the market is well cleaned up of all grades of asters, and more could be used to advantage.

Carnations continue scarce. Those from indoors are improving rapidly and what few are to be had sell readily. Wm. Rodgers is cutting some fine Flora Hill from old plants, also some Scotts almost as good as those cut in winter. Roses are still in large supply, especially short-stemmed roses. American Beauties are the best thing the market affords, good color and substance, stems ranging from six to thirty inches. They sell at $1 a foot per dozen, and more could easily be disposed of.

Various Notes.

Allen Drake is receiving the congratulations of his many friends. It's a boy, and I must not fail to add that Grandpa is also doing nicely.

Not all florists are machinists, but if you want a job with Fred Gear you must be one. Last week he made a floral machine planer. It was full-size and when you take into consideration the difficulty of such a job it was a very creditable piece of work.

Cards are at hand announcing the wedding of Miss Lucy Hardy Swan to W. Weber, at Oakland, Md., September 12.

J. T. Conger has returned from Tiffin, O., where he attended a National Union convention.

The Fall Festival is now on in full blast, and the city is crowded with strangers. Chas. W. Crouch was the first florist to arrive. In speaking of his plant at Knoxville, Tenn., he says that prospects were never better.

George & Allan have one of the finest houses of mums I have ever seen. The variety is Estelle, the new early white. They stand about three feet high at present, and are as even as if they had been trimmed with shears. C. J. OHMER.

IOWA FALLS, IA.—Miss Jennie Smuck has built greenhouses on the south side and W. H. Speers has put up glass on his truck farm north of town. Each will grow cut flowers and plants.

For Fall Openings

If you suggest it, your local dry goods, millinery, clothing and other stores will use a lot of Asparagus for decorating for fall openings. We can supply the goods so you can do the work and make a nice profit. Strings from 25c to 50c. Good value for the money.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Trade conditions are somewhat quiet. Socially there is nothing doing, but a few prominent funerals the last week cleaned up a little stock in light colors. Shipping trade is also very light. There is a large supply in the market of nearly all seasonable flowers. Roses are more plentiful at this time than in previous seasons. Carnations are about equal to demand, but the quality is poor. Asters are coming in freely and of good quality, although many growers are complaining of the continued wet weather damping them off. It has been a bad season for sweet peas and there were practically none in the market the entire season. Gladioli are plentiful, but there is little call for them.

Various Notes.

Most of the growers are busy housing carnations and making general repairs for winter. There will be quite an increase in the supply of carnations the coming season. Some growers have built new additions and many have discarded certain sorts and are growing more heavily of the best commercial varieties.

The violet crop looks better than it has for several seasons. Otto Sylvester, August Schueneman, Robert Zepnick, Loeffler Bros., and Otto Eggebrecht, who are the principal growers of violets for this market, have each benched a fine looking lot of plants and all appear to be free from disease.

The cut of chrysanthemums will also be equal to, if not larger than that of former years. Nic Zweifel is growing a fine lot of single-stem blooms. C. Johansen will also cut a quantity of them. Currie Bros. have several houses of them. Mrs. A. Middlemass and William Edlefsen have each benched a fine lot of Glory of Pacific, Eaton, Yellow Eaton, Ivory and Bonnaffon.

H. C. Kruseberg and wife and Mrs. William Edlefsen have returned from a trip to Europe. They spent two months visiting the principal points of interest on that continent. Mr. Kruseberg, who is the son-in-law of Mr. Edlefsen, has interested himself in his establishment and will assume charge of the down-town store. Mr. Edlefsen will look after the greenhouse. He has purchased the property on which the store is located and will remodel the latter, making it one of the finest retail establishments in the northwest.

C. Johansen has completed one new house; C. Burmeister has added one house; Heitman & Baerman, three houses for carnations; H. Schwebke, one house for roses; Chas. Kitzerow and F. Kaiser, one house each for miscellaneous stock; C. C. Pollworth Co., three large rose houses and two carnation houses, and are installing two immense boilers for the heating of their entire plant.

Convention Topics.

Most of the crotons and the large kentias and Piersoni exhibited by Craig, Dreer and F. R. Pierson, which were purchased by the C. C. Pollworth Co., have been sold. Otto Speidel, with Mrs. P. A. Valentine, of Oconomowoc, was a large purchaser. The huge goat has been loaned out to exhibit at a state fair. The special rate of one fare and a fifth, granted to C. C. Pollworth Co., as members of the Manufacturers' Association, attracted many visitors. Membership cards were sent to several hundred in the trade throughout the west and it was quite a saving to the craft. The Denver delegation alone, which came on these tickets saved about $50. About 250 members from western points took advantage of this rate.

H. V. Hunkel, secretary of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, is distributing the remainder of the souvenir books to members who joined the society while here. About 200 members were taken in, a pretty good showing for this convention.

The photographer has had trouble filling orders for the convention photograph, but will soon deliver all prints. C. C. P.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.

Business is still almost at a standstill, a small wedding decoration now and then and an occasional funeral order. The number of deaths during the month of August just past was only thirty-five and for the same month for 1902, sixty-three deaths were reported. The rate this season has been remarkably low, considering a population of 103,000.

L. J. Stuppy and son, Frank, have returned from a western fishing trip.

Mrs. Fred Krumm is quite ill.

Mr. Taylor is at Boston this week, attending the meeting of the American Pomological Society and next week will be at Ogden, Utah, at the National Irrigation Congress.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business is extremely quiet and has been so for the past two weeks. Weddings are scarce and there is very little in the line of funeral work. Flowers, except roses, are very plentiful and can be had for any old price. The bottom dropped completely out of the aster market, and only the largest and finest flowers can be sold at all. The street vendors sell bunches containing two dozen flowers, nicely arranged with ferns, for 10 cents. In a couple of weeks, however, asters will be over for the year and the chrysanthemums will take their places. Sweet peas are a drug at present and can be had for anything offered. Gladioli and dahlias are not so plentiful, but there is an abundance of other outdoor flowers.

Carnations are stationary in price and of fair quality. Roses are not plentiful, except poor flowers, and they are in fair demand. American Beauties bring from $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen, wholesale. Kaiserin, Bride, Testout and Liberty sell at from 50 to 75 cents per dozen, and poor flowers at any price. There is a good demand for Lilium rubrum, roseum and album at $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen stems, and also for Lilium longiflorum at from $1 to $2 per dozen.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 22d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

THE prospects for a corn crop show considerable improvement.

TOMATO is yet a doubtful quantity, all depending upon weather of the next two weeks.

THREE new mills of the most approved type are being installed in the Leonard Seed Company's Chicago warehouse.

W. UTTERMAN, with L. L. May & Co., St. Paul, is in California. A. W. Martin, of the same firm, has returned from Europe.

CURRIE BROS., florists and seedsmen, of Milwaukee, have incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000. James Currie, Sr., James Currie, Jr., and William Currie are the incorporators.

J. CHARLES MCCULLOUGH, Cincinnati, suffered a loss of $25,000 through water September 2, as the result of a fire next door to his seed warehouse. He was fully insured.

EVERETT B. CLARK, of Milford, Conn., was a recent visitor at Chicago on his way to Omaha. He reported onion seed in the Wethersfield section as being very short, the globe varieties particularly so.

C. P. COY & SON, Waterloo, Neb., report high water August 26, which inundated some of their best seed lands. Details of the damage cannot yet be given, but Mr. Coy says he has a feeling that they were hit rather hard.

THE situation on cucumber seed is keeping the trade guessing. A Nebraska grower is offering probable surpluses of several standard sorts. Eastern dealers are shy at making quotations, feeling sure that a great shortage will develop. In between these points wood-sawing is in order and the best is hoped for.

LESTER L. MORSE, of C. C. Morse & Co., Santa Clara, Cal., writes under date of September 2: "Crops generally, with us, are full. The only serious shortages exist in sweet peas and some kinds of carrot. The weather during harvest has been very fine to date, and we are more advanced with our work than usual."

THE milling of Alaska and extra early peas shows quite a shrinkage. Considerable hand-picking will have to be done to make the samples right. Wrinkled sorts are likely to fall down in like manner. Late sorts are all in the stacks, but it will take the result of the threshing to determine the quantity. Some of the sorts are bound to be short.

IN Michigan the prospects for a good bean crop remain favorable. If early frosts keep off and good weather prevails for the next two weeks, it is expected that the quality of beans harvested will be excellent. The New York sections have been hit hard right along by the cold, wet weather and the crops there are bound to be poor, both as to quality and quantity.

VISITED CHICAGO: F. W. Maas, with the Plant Seed Co., St. Louis; Jas. Comont, with Carter, Dunnett & Beale, London, England; Adolph Corneli, of Schisler-Corneli Seed Co., St. Louis.

THE Michigan cucumber crops show fair in some sections, and very poor in others. The aphid has done a great deal of harmful work, and it is a very doubtful outlook that confronts the grower at present.

MANY of the onion set speculators are unable to locate themselves properly. The fear that there is quite a quantity of sets hid away somewhere bothers them. Straight information seems to be of no use, and it is likely that nothing but time will put the set market where it should be. The question that the crop harvested is considerably below normal is quite generally understood and admitted, but it seems hard to get the prices up to where they belong.

SEEDSMEN MAY GET TOGETHER.

According to a recent issue of the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune, there is to be a meeting of committees of the American Seed Trade Association and the Wholesale Seedsmen's League in Chicago early in September. The purpose of the meeting, it is said, is to form a giant combine and to take drastic action to stop the government free seed distribution. These propositions are not new to the majority of the seed trade. Considerable space in different periodicals has been given to one of them, and a good deal of verbal discussion has been given the other. If, therefore, things can be brought to a focus by these committees and measures adopted to squash free distribution and establish a good working combine, the committees will have achieved renown.

No official notice of any meeting of committees has been received as yet, but the paper referred to gives Albert McCullough credit for the information it hands out; consequently there may be something in it. The trouble heretofore has been the lack of sympathy between the different sections when anything bearing upon these matters has been discussed. A close approach to consolidation of interests was knocked some time back by lack of unanimity, petty animosities seeming to be a stronger factor than good business sense. It is to be hoped that if there is anything new on foot in relation to these important matters a whole-hearted effort may be put forth.

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

Florists' Publishing Co., CAXTON BUILDING, Chicago.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

There was a little breeze during the week that stirred the placid sea of market conditions, but it soon subsided, and everything became as quiet as before. Perhaps it is the calm before the storm of business that must soon assert itself. Meantime prices remain inactive, and are likely to until October.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The cut flowers coming to the Cleveland market show a decided improvement, both in quantity and quality, and the demand has kept pace with the supply. Prices are still on a summer basis, and with but small show of a rise this month. Outdoor carnation blooms are coming in quite freely, but it is a little too early for our growers to be cutting from inside, as we do not seem to get our stock planted quite as early as some of the other growers.

Roses cut from the young plants show very good flowers, but most of them are still short of stem. Isaac Kennedy is sending in some very nice Maids and Brides to the F. R. Williams Co. Outdoor asters are a thing of the past, but those planted inside are ready to cut, and some very fine ones are being handled by the J. M. Gasser Co.

Notes.

Many of the florists around Cleveland are laying in a stock of coal at the present time, in order not to be placed in the position so many occupied last year, and some yards around the boiler rooms look like coal mines. Graham, Bate Bros., the F. R. Williams Co., J. W. Wilson, Kennedy, and the Gasser Co. are all well stocked with good fuel.

Mr. Jones, of the J. M. Gasser Co., spent five short weeks on his vacation, part of the time being spent on a trip to the Soo and the balance in the east. The fact that the weeks were short, proves that Mr. Jones enjoyed himself.

E.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—At the opening of the Kenilworth races J. H. Rebstock had as a window decoration a large floral horse. The body was made of white asters, the hoofs of violet asters, the mane and tail of asparagus and the eyes of chenille.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Trade experienced a little dullness the past week, which was probably due to our state fair taking the attention of people to the exclusion of everything else. Stock is more plentiful. First-class roses are scarce but there is an abundance of short stemmed stock. A few carnations are being cut, but not enough for the demand. Asters are becoming scarce, and at best are but poor.

Various Notes.

At the State Fair this week the Minneapolis brethren were the only competitors, Monson, Nagel, Mendenhall and Vasatka taking the majority of the premiums.

At the recent fall opening of Donaldson's Glass Block, in Minneapolis, the floral decorations were most elaborate and very tastily arranged by Mr. Souden. Hydrangea paniculata, Golden Glow, gladioli and dahlias were employed in groups and masses with charming effect.

Visitors: A. N. Kinsman, Austin, Minn.; Mrs. E. O. Lovell, Grand Forks, N. D.; W. A. Bastian, with G. M. Kellogg, Pleasant Hill, Mo., and E. A. Tonquest, with Miss M. Dailey, Kansas City, Mo.

BRICK BENCHES.

How do you fix the bottom of benches lined with brick. What do the bricks rest upon? How many bricks will be required for two benches each 7x50 feet?

K. A. W.

For benches of ordinary width $1\frac{1}{2} \times 1\frac{1}{2} \times \frac{1}{4}$, or $2 \times 2 \times \frac{1}{4}$ -inch tee irons make good supports for brick bottom, the tees being laid with the leg of the tee pointing upwards. The average size of brick, assuming that common building bricks are referred to, is about 4x8 inches, thus about 1,575 bricks would be needed for a bench 7x50 feet.

PIPING AND GLAZING.

I am building a house 15x60 to raise bedding stock and want to pipe it so that it can go several hours without attention. I intend to use overhead flows, with the returns under the benches. I have a hot water boiler rated at 3,000 feet of glass. Which will give me better satisfaction, 4-inch pipe or 2-inch? Will the large boiler be all right or had I better get a smaller one? Which would you advise, lapped or butted glass?

C. C. G.

I would give a decided preference for 2-inch pipes for the circulating coils, ten lines being required for the house fifteen feet wide, with glass on the roof only. The large boiler may be used, as with reasonable care it will prove economical in fuel, and no blowing out of the water need take place. Lapped glass will give the tightest and best roof.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

PIPING A HOUSE.

How much 2-inch pipe will it take to pipe a greenhouse 21x60, twelve feet to ridge, glazed on one end and side ventilators? The hot water boiler is at the west end of the house. Wish a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees when it is 20 below outside.

H. M. B.

Sixteen lines of 2-inch pipe will secure the results sought. The distribution of the pipes within the house will depend upon the depth of the boiler pit and the arrangement of the benches.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

AMOUNT OF RADIATION.

How much 2-inch pipe will be required to heat a house 23x100, three-quarter span, five-foot walls, glass in both ends and ventilators at ridge and on south side? When the thermometer is down to 10 degrees below zero outdoors, 60 degrees is required inside.

M. D.

Sixteen lines of 2-inch pipe will maintain the required temperature with hot water.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

TOUGHKENAMON, Chester Co., Pa., Dec. 29, 1902.
MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.

Yours very truly, ROBERT C. BANCROFT.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Beware of Early Frosts.

Already there are rumors of frost in the northwest and we must expect it to travel eastward. While our seacoast cities on the east and south may, and more often do, escape all frost until early November, we in northwestern New York rarely escape a frost at the end of September or in the early days of October. And I have known, in this little village from which I am writing, a killing frost on September 19, and the remembrance of all this tells us to be prepared.

There is nothing gained, in fact, a big risk is run, by resting easy and leaving tender plants out of doors until you feel the cold spell coming, for then they are hustled indoors in great confusion. Azaleas, acacias, metrosideros and any of those hard-wooded plants that you summered over out of doors should be in by September 25. There is nothing gained by leaving them out. That useful plant, the sweet stevia, should be lifted at once and potted firmly and stood in the shade out of doors. It is most valuable at Christmas and therefore should be kept outside as long as possible, yet it does not want a single degree of frost and indoors thrives in 40 degrees at night. A few plants of the best kinds of acalypha should be lifted and put under glass. They lift well and some of them may be useful for decorating, and after the holidays they can be cut down and will give you cuttings of the right kind. It should not be necessary to say that a few plants of such things as ageratum, feverfew, lobelia, and any plant that you can increase rapidly during winter and spring, should be potted and taken care of. A few old plants of these are far better than propagating just now. Salvia splendens and its improved dwarf varieties make a splendid show if lifted, and the flowers are often found very useful after frost has cut off everything outside, and the cut-back plants give you the best cuttings.

The hydrangeas are best outside for some time yet, as a few degrees of frost does not hurt them. It ripens the wood and prepares them better for forcing. In mentioning a few degrees of frost it is well to remember that the effect of, say three degrees of frost depends altogether on the previous weather. If we have had a few nights down almost to freezing, the plant is able to endure two or three degrees when it does come; but if there has been no night lower than, say, 45 degrees, and it has been moist and the plants are still growing, then a sudden freeze is most disastrous. I have seen just such conditions prevail and have suffered by being "off my guard."

Propagation.

Perhaps some people still propagate verbenas and petunias in the fall. Of course, it is the only way to perpetuate named varieties of these pretty bedding plants; yet I do not think it worth doing. You can buy seed of verbenas equal to any named varieties, save room and labor and have much healthier plants; and the same with petunias.

I told you in the spring to pot up a few plants of lemon verbenas, lantanas and heliotropes and plunge them outside in a frame. Hope you have done so, for they neither propagate nor lift at all satisfactorily from plants that have been in the ground. A partial rest, when brought in, of a month or two, and then a shortening back of the wood will give you cuttings that will easily root, of both the lemon verbena and the lantana. The heliotrope must be kept shifted and growing or it will get rusty.

Lilies for Early Forcing.

We put our earliest arrival of Bermuda lilies in a frame this year and covered with two inches of loose, decayed manure, just to keep them from drying out every day. They don't all start at once, but as fast as the growth is up through the manure the latter is shaken off, and the plants brought into a bright, warm bench. The man who grows for retail does not want them all in at once. A hundred or so, which were brought in two weeks ago and will be kept at 60 or 65 degrees when firing is necessary, should be in flower by the middle of November. As fast as you can select a hundred that are well started bring them in at intervals of two weeks. The common greenfly is their greatest enemy and they get so deep down into the crown of leaves that it is difficult to fumigate enough to kill them. So a very weak solution of some nicotine preparation must be applied to keep down the aphids.

The Dutch Bulbs.

The tulips will soon be arriving, and if you want very early flowers you must get some into flats as soon as you receive them. A small proportion of your import order will do. The bulk can wait for a month. No better place can be found for the flats than out of doors, covered with three or four inches of soil. I shall have more to say about these bulbs later on, but will just say now that as soon as put in the flats they must be well soaked, and unless the weather is unusually wet, the soil that covers the flats must be soaked once a week. If the soil in the flats be allowed to remain dry, little root growth is being made, and without roots you can't force.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

NEW YORK'S GREAT HALL.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America will have the finest exhibition hall in the United States at its disposal for its second annual show, to be held at New York, November 10 to 12 in co-operation with the American Institute. Arrangements have been made for the use of Herald Square Exhibition Hall, on the ninth floor of the magnificent new Macy building, Broadway and Thirty-fourth street, where there are nearly 70,000 square feet of space on one level floor, arched by a beautiful dome of glass. The location is one of the very best in the city, as all lines of transportation converge at this point, and the hall, specially built for this class of exhibitions, is reached by a splendid battery of a dozen express elevators. For the handling of exhibits there are two immense freight elevators, each built to carry a loaded truck and team.

The premium list for the exhibition insures a good display, for the prizes are liberal and much interest is manifest. President Arthur Herrington is using his best endeavors to forward the preparations. He has secured the co-operation of many of the horticultural societies in the east and this will go far toward getting together the great amount of choice material necessary to fill so vast an area.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Roses which were planted during June should now, if they have been properly handled, require their first mulch. The feeding roots should now be so close to the surface that stirring the surface will do them an injury. To receive full and immediate benefit from the mulch it should be made fine by passing it through a 3/4-inch screen. In this form it is more easily assimilated, and does not require so much material to cover the surface as if used in a rough state.

One-half inch in depth is quite sufficient at this season if the material is rich enough, as it is better to apply lightly and frequently than to run any risk of souring the soil by putting it on too thick.

As the season advances and the demand for Beauty buds increases there is ever present the desire to cut with as long stems as possible and a warning to young growers against this practice is seasonable. Cutting too close denudes the plant of too much foliage, bringing about a check to root action which causes them to assume a hard and stunted form which they usually retain till spring growth commences.

When cutting Meteors and Kaiserin it is advisable to leave at least three or four fully developed buds on the strongest stems, thus assuring a plentiful supply of foliage to keep the roots in activity and lessen the tendency to take advantage of a winter's rest. To get an early supply of long stems on Golden Gate and Ivory a constant supply of fresh food in the form of mulch will be necessary until it is safe to apply liquid food.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Seasonable Treatment.

After you have your carnation plants started to growing in good shape, the supports in place and, of course, the beds cleared of all weeds and dead foliage, and a mulch spread on, there is not a great deal to do until the next support is needed and disbudding begins. As I have said before, we allow some of the stronger plants to bloom soon after they are established, only pinching those plants that are a trifle undersized. Of course we do not allow all the varieties to come into bloom so early, as many sorts will produce only worthless blooms while the weather is very warm. Flora Hill and Crocker and, in fact, all the good summer bloomers, will do all right, but most of the reds, Mrs. Lawson while the stem is short, and many others, had better be kept from blooming for a few weeks yet.

We do not top the shoots so young after the plants are housed as we do out in the field. The growth is naturally softer and if you top the young soft shoots the beaks are apt to come weak. We allow them to form the bud and grow until the bud is half grown before topping. By that time the side shoots usually have started of their own accord and they come away strong. Take the shoot off well down toward the body of the plant, especially if the variety does not naturally grow bushy. Always aim to keep the body of the plant compact, whether you merely top to prevent blooming, or when you are cutting the blooms later on. Allowing the buds to remain on the plant so long also gives you a chance to let them come into bloom quickly, if the weather should turn cool or the market demand the blooms. Don't forget that following the first killing frosts and up to the chrysanthemum season there is always a good demand for carnation blooms, especially white ones. Be ready to supply that demand when it comes.

This is a good time to begin preparing your carnation soil for next season. Carnations like a well composted soil. As has been said before in these notes, the best way, if you have your own ground and teams, is to select a piece of good heavy sod and plow it up to a depth of six inches, leaving it over winter in a rough state, just as it was plowed. Toward spring, while it is frozen on top enough to hold up a wagon, haul on it a covering of two inches of good manure. Cow manure if you can get it, otherwise use stable manure with straw bedding. If the soil is quite heavy, I would prefer the latter, but ordinarily I prefer the cow manure. Early next spring this should be hauled into a pile where it will be convenient to the houses when you want to refill them.

Many growers, however, have to depend on getting their supply of soil from whatever source they can, very often taking the top soil from a new street that is being opened up. In such cases you are obliged to pile it up, and I don't know but what it is just about as good as the former. Dump a layer of soil about eighteen inches deep and spread four inches of manure over it, after which alternate with layers of soil twelve inches deep and manure in layers three inches deep. Allow this pile to lie until early spring, when it should be turned over and mixed and again a few weeks before you begin to use it.

Now about the old soil you took out of your houses. There are many growers who raise nearly all cut flowers and the disposition of the old soil is almost as vexatious as securing the new. Those who raise bedding and a general assortment of pot plants can use much of this soil, but the cut flower specialist can't do that. If you have an empty lot where you can spread it out to a depth of about one foot you can get this soil back into a usable condition in about three years' time, and with not very much work. Of course you did not mix the old plants in with the soil. We always take them out first and burn them, to destroy any red spider, thrips or disease with which they may be afflicted. After spreading out the soil sprinkle well with slaked lime or wood ashes and sow down in rye and leave until spring, when I will have more to say about it, I hope.

PRICE FOR CARNATION CROP.

Several readers having inquired as to equitable terms for a season's contract for a crop of carnation blooms, one of the large growers shipping from Chicago gives us the following on the subject:

We have often been asked to set a price on carnation blooms for the entire season. Seven or eight years ago the writer did make contracts which he lived up to, furnishing blooms during December, January and February at only half the price they would have brought had they not been contracted for, and as soon as the spring glut came on the other parties of the contract commenced to find fault with every shipment, wrangled that they were getting the worst of it, and eventually threw up their hands and refused to pay the agreed price, thereby breaking the contract and teaching us a lesson we shall not soon forget. If we thoroughly knew our man, however, we would be willing to furnish first-class blooms of the following varieties for the entire season, commencing October 1 to July 1, at these prices:

	Per 100.		Per 100.
Prosperity	$4.50	Enchantress	$4.50
Apollo	3.00	Estelle	2.75
Queen Louise	2.25	Norway	3.00
Lawson	3.00	Roosevelt	2.75

In years past we could have made a reasonable profit for a good deal less figure, but not since the price of glass, lumber, real estate, wages, coal, pipe and all other supplies have advanced so much, to say nothing of the extra care and labor now given the plants, and which we are compelled to give them if we are to compete with the high grade quality now being put on the market.

Another way to set a price is as follows:

Month.	Prosperity. Harlow's Enchantress. Adonis.	Apollo. Palmer. Lawson. Nelson.	Croc. Estelle. Roosevelt.	Wolcott. Norway. H. Majesty.	Cloud. Hill. Lorna. Louise.
Oct.....	3 cts.	1 1/2 cts.	1 1/2 cts.	1 1/2 cts.	1 cts.
Nov.....	4 " "	2 " "	2 " "	2 " "	2 " "
Dec.....	5 " "	3 " "	3 " "	3 " "	3 " "
Jan.....	6 " "	4 " "	4 " "	4 " "	4 " "
Feb.....	6 " "	4 " "	4 " "	4 " "	4 " "
March.....	6 " "	4 " "	4 " "	4 " "	4 " "
April.....	6 " "	4 " "	4 " "	4 " "	4 " "
May.....	4 " "	3 " "	3 " "	3 " "	3 " "
June.....	3 " "	2 " "	2 " "	2 " "	2 " "
Ave.....	4 1/2 " "	3 " "	3 1/4 " "	3 " "	2 1/2 " "

I am inclined to think the latter method the best. It is understood that every carnation is a good one, no weak stemmed, off colored ones or bursted calyxes. I think any fair minded grower or retailer will agree that the above prices are very fair to both parties when only first-class stock is taken into account.

Albert M. Herr, secretary of the American Carnation Society, says that for such varieties as Apollo, Prosperity, Enchantress, Estelle, Queen Louise, Norway, Lawson and Roosevelt, at least $4 per 100 should be asked for a contract price from October 1 to the week after Easter, if the price is to include the holiday crop, and after Easter the price should be cut fifty per cent and if carried over Decoration day it should again be cut fifty per cent, making a flat rate of $1 per 100 for summer blooms. Queen Louise might be grown for about half these figures, but the others will be losing ventures for any less money.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

Jerome A. Suydam, Flatbush, N. Y., registers Carnation Amaze, an A No. 1 commercial scarlet; it will stand the heat of the sun without losing its brightness, is of good size and has an excellent stem. One of the best bloomers we have ever grown and we have failed to see a bursted calyx. ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Watering.

As the days begin to get shorter and cooler, more attention should be paid to the watering. The plants have made a heavy growth of foliage and the sun can no longer penetrate to the soil to dry out the beds, as it did during the earlier months. Let the soil get somewhat on the dry side and then water thoroughly and it will be some days before the operation need be repeated. It is a great mistake to be giving the beds light surface watering every day or so, because this method rots the tiny root fibers and the plants do not keep moving along as they should.

It will often happen that the sides of the bench where the sun can reach will be dry, while the center of the bed is plenty wet enough. Water along the sides with a light stream and do not turn the water on full force; then the bed will be evenly moist all through. It is always in the center of the bench where leaf spot commences when water is indiscriminately given.

Syringing, also, should be now done only on bright days, so that the foliage is always dry before night, or mildew will make its appearance; in fact, it is already showing on some varieties because of the very wet August. Spraying with the potassium solution, as previously noted in these columns, will check the spread of mildew and not disfigure the foliage to speak of. One cannot afford to dispense with syringing altogether yet, on account of the red spider, though I believe the plants would otherwise be better off without it.

Insects.

A careful examination of the buds will find some of them infested with black or greenfly. Blackfly will often be found in colonies on the under side of the foliage also, when the grower had thought that his plants were clean and right. Fumigation is the quickest way to kill fly, and in our experience the tobacco dust burnt in the house is just as effective and far safer to use than tobacco stems. If the young foliage is burnt now it seriously impairs the value of the crop, as it will show all around the edges when the leaf is developed. Fumigate at night and get the house opened up before daylight so that the smoke is all gone before the sun gets up; then the foliage is not nearly so likely to be injured.

not seem to be effective, get some tobacco dust and shake it thickly all over the bud, working it into all the little crevices of the hard, husky covering. The dust will smother every fly and I have always found it effectual, without injuring the bud in the least.

Grasshoppers are few and far between this year, which is a blessing, for they have a fondness for cutting the young, tender bud off from its parent stalk and leaving profanity in their wake. Get up at daybreak, if they are troubling you, and catch them while they are in a semi-comatose condition. Later in the day, when the sun is out, they move too briskly to be easily captured. There seems to be fewer insects on the plants this year than for some seasons past, and for this relief we are duly thankful.

BRIAN BORU.

NYPHAEAE JAMES GURNEY.

Many good things have emanated from Tower Grove Park, St. Louis, where they have a new seedling nymphaea, called James Gurney, whose parents are N. O'Marana and N. Frank Trelease. It has large bronze leaves, more fringed than its parents, and large, beautiful pink flowers. Anyone who sees it can forget all the other varieties. Phil Gobel, who has charge of the pond, and James Gurney, the head of the park, are very proud of their new find. Tower Grove Park is also the home of the grand new salvia, St. Louis, and the beautiful Stella Gurney ageratum. The park is looking better than ever. Mr. Gurney laid it out in 1863 and has been at its head ever since. He planted every tree in the park but three. J. J. B.

"AT BUYER'S RISK."

We were much interested in the matter under this heading in the REVIEW of last week, for, like a good many others, we have, we fear, lost standing with certain wholesale houses because we refused to pay the bill in full when we were not satisfied with the stock received. It seems that legally we were in the wrong, and should have had to pay if collection had been pressed, but is it justice to ask the buyer to stand losses for which he is in no way responsible? Does he not suffer enough loss when stock reaches him in such condition that it cannot be used? Very likely he loses a customer.

Perhaps it is too much to ask that a wholesaler admit that he sent out stuff not fit to travel; we will grant that the shipper sent fresh stuff. If the express messenger puts the box on the steam pipes and the carnations go to sleep, is it right that the disappointed buyer be made to pay the bill and waste as much more in time trying to get his money back from the express company?

We don't suppose that the time will ever come when the wholesaler can afford to guarantee the arrival of his goods at destination, for such a practice would let down the bars for all sorts of unfair claims, but it looks to us as though the wholesaler ought to meet the buyer half way in these matters. Certainly the buyer cannot be expected to keep on ordering if he finds little but useless stock, and a bill, when he opens the box, and this is only a little less true if somebody else stands the loss. The shipper may not "guarantee" safe arrivals, but just the same they have got to arrive safely if the business is going on.

The introducers of novelties may talk all they want to about size and color, calyx and stem, the societies may judge 'em by scale to any figure they please, but the important thing in a flower nowadays is keeping quality. Given ever so fine a flower that doesn't stand an overnight run and it is worse than useless in these days of wide distribution. The grower whose stuff will stand up is the one who will get the business, and he won't have any arguments as to whose risk the box travels at. P. & D.

State Vice-Presidents' Reports.

The reports of the S. A. F. vice-presidents are, in the aggregate, so voluminous as to preclude their publication in full. The following are the salient points in the reports for the states mentioned.

KANSAS.—The past year has been very good for florists of this state, but I have not been able to get many florists interested in the S. A. F.—A. H. WHITCOMB.

MARYLAND.—Very few florists have increased their facilities for growing stock and very little building of greenhouses has been done. It seems as if all interest in the S. A. F. is centering upon next year's St. Louis meeting.—C. L. SEYBOLD.

MISSOURI.—Our trade has increased on an average of twenty-five per cent over last year, and the prospects are very good for the coming fall and winter. The wholesaler, retailer and grower alike say that the past season was the best they ever had. There has been much building to increase facilities.—C. A. JUENGEL.

NEBRASKA.—Trade has been steady and satisfactory in all lines. There has never been much surplus stock and as a consequence the florists are enlarging their plants, and others are building up new fields. Nearly everyone is putting the money he has made back into new improvements and buildings.—LEWIS HENDERSON.

MASSACHUSETTS.—There is a steady demand for summer roses which cannot be met. Lawson is perhaps the favorite carnation, with Prosperity, which colors well here, a close second. Considerable quantities of the new varieties will be tried this season, and the stock looks well in spite of the excessive rains.—A. J. LOVELESS.

KENTUCKY.—The production of first-class stock is on the increase, but not nearly enough to supply the demand. Especially noticeable is the call for hardy ornamental stock for the many modern places which are being laid out near Louisville. Quite a few thousand dollars still go out of Kentucky for stock that could readily be grown here.—A. R. BAUMER.

IOWA.—Since the last convention 125-700 square feet of glass have been added to floral establishments by those who have responded to my inquiries, and I suppose those who have not reported have been equally prosperous. More than half of those in the trade report an increased demand of ten per cent to twenty-five per cent for hardy perennials and ornamental shrubs.—WESLEY GREENE.

CONNECTICUT.—The general experience seems to be that the advanced prices charged did not decrease the demand for cut flowers and plants, and that there was quite a scarcity of cut flowers at certain times. John Reck, of Bridgeport, strongly advocates the growing of a greater variety of bedding plants as a means of preventing over-production in this line. The geranium at present constitutes seventy-five per cent of the stock sold. Begonias in all their different varieties, are greatly admired where they are grown, and the demand for that class of plants would surely come if florists would make an earnest effort to grow and introduce them.—THEODORE WIRTH.

RHODE ISLAND.—Business in general the past season has been good, with better prices and less surplus stock than in former years. This state still produces more stock than is needed at home but a ready market is found in Boston. Several establishments contemplate building, and it is interesting to note that the aim seems to be to erect modern houses, as it is apparent that fancy stock is in demand.—L. J. REUTER.

INDIANA.—In cut flowers, the demand for carnations has increased fifty per cent, while the call for roses remains about the same, or perhaps on a slight decrease. The public is always willing to pay a fair price for first-class flowers arranged in an artistic manner. The Boston fern takes the lead among decorative plants, with kentias and rubbers a close second, but I predict a larger demand for the beautiful Pieroni, when it can be grown and offered at a reasonable price.—W. W. COLES.

GEORGIA.—The past year has been the best on record. In cut flowers, roses will always be the leader, carnations next, with chrysanthemums a close third. The demand for decorative stock, such as palms, ferns, rubbers and fancy-leaved caladiums is growing enormously, but summer bedding plants, such as geraniums, heliotropes, lantanas, salvias, coleus, etc., are losing their popularity. The majority of the planters when ornamenting home grounds are using hardy stock, such as broad-leaved and coniferous evergreens and flowering shrubs.—L. A. BERCKMANS.

NEW YORK.—What looked like a very serious matter last fall was the fuel question. At present the outlook for coal is brighter, but sooner or later this question will become a problem. Will the Society of American Florists be able to solve that problem, or could not something be done even now to prevent a recurrence of the conditions we all experienced last fall and winter? Some may think the influence of the S. A. F. is not sufficient and far-reaching to attack the forces that control the fuel supply, but we should remember the splendid results that were achieved by a united and prolonged attack on the express companies when they raised their rates without warning.—C. H. KIETSCH.

NEW JERSEY.—This is the most favored state in the union for the promotion of floriculture and ornamental horticulture. Greenhouse building is going on, especially among the rose growers, but the high prices of material have limited the building to a considerable extent. The general sentiment is to take good care of what we have, and wait for expansion until a more favorable time. The year has been one not without its difficulties, but on the whole the florists of the state have been successful financially.—W. B. DURIE.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—There is a steadily increasing volume of business in the old Granite state. The exceptionally high price of coal last winter made a few small places go under, but our live florists increased the price of stock twenty-five per cent, which was willingly paid and more than off-set the extra coal bill. Wm. Elliott, at Madbury, I hear is contemplating the erection of another 800-foot house for American Beauties, alongside the one already established. A market gardener in Portsmouth built a house 40x200, and a New Castle florist nearby put a handsome addition on to his place, which represents a good deal of money, ridge and furrow style, with iron gutters, iron posts and other modern improvements.—BERNARD MORRIS.

OHIO.—The local supply of cut flowers was entirely inadequate last season, and outside markets had to be drawn upon to supply the demand, yet in the face of these prosperous conditions less building has taken place than the previous year; this is probably due to the increase in the price of material. Carnations are in high favor and being more largely planted, most of them benched very early. Much complaint has been heard from those who purchased the new and high-priced varieties and received cuttings with few if any roots, and covered with rust or spotted with bacteria. This is bad practice. In roses, Beauty has taken a decided jump and more are planted than ever before. Liberty has proved a failure. Growers increased their orders for bulbs on the strength of last season's profits. Palms have been slow sale but it is wonderful how the sale of Boston ferns keeps up.—ISAAC KENNEDY.

THE TORONTO EXHIBITION.

Following close on the heels of the C. H. A. convention comes the annual exhibition of plants, flowers and floral work at Toronto. On account of this year's exhibition being on a more elaborate scale than previously, it was expected that the horticultural exhibit would be much larger than last year. This can hardly be said to have been the case, although the exhibit was a good one, especially in plants. A more commodious hall is badly needed, and, as new buildings are being erected yearly it is expected that the florists will get at least a "look in" next year.

For the best group of plants arranged on space not more than 250 square feet the prize was awarded to Ernest Collins of the Horticultural Gardens. The other prize winners were John Chambers, of Exhibition Park; Wm. Houston, Central Prison; The Government House, Grainier Bros., Manton Bros. and Jay & Son.

In the cut flower department, on the rose and carnation entries J. H. Dunlop carried off first prize and Toronto Floral Co. second.

In made up work competition was keen and some very close judging was necessary. For the large piece, a floral chair exhibited by J. S. Simmons was awarded first. This was a very fine piece and was freely commented upon by all who saw it. The flowers used were inexpensive but were used to good advantage and it was finished off with two doves and baby ribbon. A large bow of mauve ribbon hung over the back, with the word "vacant" in hand-painting.

The second prize was awarded a piece made up by H. G. Dilleuth, of Dunlop's. This was a standing lyre and was a magnificent piece, the base being composed of light gladioli, white lilies and roses, with a bunch of orchids on the front base. The lyre itself was made of roses, carnations and valley.

Third prize was awarded a large broken column exhibited by Geo. Brown, which was made of asters, lilies and American Beauties, and was much admired.

On small design, which calls for a wreath not over 16 inches, the first prize went to Geo. Brown. It was made of roses and valley. Second went to J. S. Simmons and third to J. H. Dunlop.

In other lines, the honors were fairly well divided, W. Jay & Son, The T. Eaton Co., and others exhibiting some very nice work. D. J.

RETURNING THE CONDENSATION.

The following is an extract from an address by R. W. King, of Toronto, before the Canadian Horticultural Association, September 2, 1903:

The heating of greenhouses in our northern climate is always more or less a "burning" question, with fuel very dear. The speaker's particular fad at the present time is boilers above ground. The placing of greenhouse boilers in a hole, sometimes called a cellar, is one of the inherited evils of the hot water system. You can keep your hot water boiler in a hole if you will, but place your steam boilers above ground. To obtain proper economy from a steam heating plant extended heating surfaces are required, with economizers and piping of more or less complicated nature, the proper care and preservation of which requires room to get at it, and a dry location, if the full life and economy of the plant is to be obtained. I will not enlarge on this point, but refer briefly to means for returning the condensation to the boilers. I do not personally consider that steam traps are the most successful. They require, if the lift is at all high, considerable pressure to operate them, which is not easily available in a low pressure plant.

In cases where high pressure auxiliary boilers are used in connection with heating plants, for the driving of automatic stokers and coal conveying machinery, as at the Dale estate at Brampton, a ready means is at hand for operating an ordinary steam pump to enforce returns; and this has been utilized for some years at this establishment with success, thus removing the only necessity, in that case, for having placed the original boiler plant under ground. For a small amount of power, high pressure is not necessary. In plans executed last spring I place in the main steam pipe just after it leaves the boilers, a back pressure valve, to be loaded down to, say, five pounds, thus, as soon as any steam at all is raised it runs to five pounds before any can enter the houses. From the boilers direct is led a steam pipe to a low pressure steam pump, guaranteed to run at five pounds and under. This exhausts its waste steam into the heating pipes, so practically none of its heat is lost. No matter what the pressure carried in the pipes, the pump will always have the weight placed on the low pressure valve in its favor, which can be regulated to requirements. As a proof of the practicability of operating low pressure pumps, although their arrangement is not the same, I wrote to two gentlemen who I learned had experimented along these lines. S. S. Bain, of Montreal, referring to his low pressure return pump, says: "Three pounds of steam works this pump; indeed, we find that whatever steam is in the boiler works the pump. It has given me every satisfaction." Wm. Gammage, of London, referring to his low pressure return pump, which has been in operation since 1898, says: "The pump has given us the best of satisfaction; in fact, it will work most of the time with from one to three pounds on the gauge."

Some of the objections that have hitherto been raised to the method of returning condensation by means of pumps are reasonable when we consider that in many steam heating plants, when used to their full capacity, it is often impossible to raise any pressure that could be relied upon to keep a pump in operation. For this reason in some instances a small independent high pressure boiler is used for the purpose of driving the pump. This occasions considerable extra care on the part of an attendant. In other instances, where the necessary pressure is maintained on the whole system, the pump discharges steam into the atmosphere, representing so much waste fuel.

In the system now recommended neither of these objections occur. The use of a back pressure valve causes two pressures to be made. The pressure on the boilers being always five pounds heavier than that used on the heating system. Supposing there was no pressure on the heating system whatever, there would still be five pounds on the boilers, or whatever pressure you may please to set the valve to carry. In fact, no heating at all can be done till this pressure on the boilers is raised.

With a properly constructed pump, correctly set, there should be but little more need for watching than in the case of a gravity system. The speaker holds that in any plant to be left without a watchman, electric alarms should be installed, so that the drainage could not occur without an alarm being given. In fact, he believes that a thorough system of electric alarms, with means of ascertaining temperatures in all parts of the houses as well as to automatically place the same on record at a single station, will some day be considered essential to every first-class florist's establishment.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Despite the midsummer weather of mid September, business has continued to improve. The music of the telephone, the ring of the hammer and the hum of voices enliven the commission houses and the Flower Market. The work of the decorator has begun in earnest. Hugh Graham had charge of the adornment of four large department stores' fall openings, Gimbel's on Saturday and Lit's, Suellenburg's and Partridge's on Monday. Wild smilax, gladioli, dahlias and even fine Beauties were freely used.

There has been a lively demand for fine roses. Dahlias are seen everywhere in profusion. The wet weather has made this a poor aster year for the outdoor-grown stock, but seems a good one for the stock that reaches town in fit condition. Carnations are still scarce.

Business Notes.

There are several items of more than usual interest to the street this week. One comes from President Heacock and Manager Meehan, who state that the Flower Market will make weekly payments with the beginning of their new year, October 1. The plan is, wait two weeks and then send a statement and check to every grower each week, the one week's delay being necessary to make up the books.

Another item of especial interest is that Joseph Bevis & Son have just begun supplying Brides, Maids and Liberties to Leo Niessen. This firm has for several years grown exceptionally fine roses, which until now they have peddled.

Another item, not new but not generally known, is that Edward Reid has secured the stock of William Munro, now of Lansdowne, who made such a high reputation for himself with Myers & Samtman, and with Robert Scott & Son.

Dahlias at Atco.

I visited Atco last week at the request of Mr. S. S. Pennock, who receives quantities of choice dahlias from there, where I was much impressed with the seventy-one acres of dahlias, their vigor and freedom from weeds. The farm contains four shops and packing houses, two root cellars, besides pot sheds, offices, a number of frames, and 15,000 feet of glass, fully equipped and heated by steam, with two steam pumps, windmill, etc., between 200 and 300 acres of land. I cannot give a better description of the place than that written for me by the proprietor, Mr. Peacock, at my earnest request, as follows:

As I stated, we are growing a million of dahlias on seventy-one acres of land. We plant generally rows four feet apart, and one foot in the row, although we are forced this year for want of land to plant the rows a little closer, and as close as six inches apart in the row.

I am very sorry that your time was so limited that you could not go over the entire place and note carefully the leading varieties of the particular types. The dahlia exhibition to be held September 15 and 16 we expect to be the finest of the kind ever held in this country, and I trust to see you there, when you can get the names of the leading varieties. I will also be very glad to give you any further information at any time throughout the season, as I believe it would be a good thing for your paper to push dahlias along. As I stated, today, they are practically the only flower at this time of the year, and owing to the great diversity of forms and types, as well as complete ranges of forms and colors in each of those types, they fill all wants between summer flowers and chrysanthemums.

At the present time the show, fancy and pompon dahlias are the most valuable, as they will carry better and keep longer during the hot weather. We will speak, therefore, of the present need first; a little later, however, as the weather becomes cooler, the decorative, cactus and single dahlias will carry perfectly and keep in good condition for several days. It is impossible to state which is really the most beautiful or the most useful, as it depends entirely upon individual choice, because, as stated above, there is a complete range of colors in every class. In this way the parties liking the little bouquet, or pompon dahlias, are treated to fifty to one hundred perfect little gems, embracing every color, tint or shade, or combination of shade that is to be found in the large show. These little fellows have long, slender stems. They grow dwarf, of branching habit and are cut in sprays of full open flowers, half open flowers, buds and foliage, making them most graceful and attractive. These are used for every purpose, and are the favorites of many.

Then again, the large show dahlias, when cut on stems from two to three feet long, are invaluable for vases and heavy decorative work. They are also valuable on account of their wonderful formation, with their quilled, cupped and incurved petals. This formation, however, is very stiff and formal, and outside of massing for color effect, etc., are not admired by many, although they are the general favorites in many sections and as a matter of fact outsell any other class, because it is the only class that is universally known. This is the original double dahlia.

The fancy type is similar to the show dahlia in every way except color. I would say right here that the show dahlia is an all-around full double flower, of close formation and of solid color or tipped darker than the ground color; while the fancy dahlia is either striped, tipped, margined, or penciled two or more colors, or tipped lighter than the ground color.

The cactus dahlia, as soon as it is as widely known as the show dahlia, will be the universal favorite. It is an entirely distinct formation. The petals are long, generally straight, at other times incurved and presenting the most irregularly regular appearance imaginable, if this term will be allowed. They embrace a complete range of coloring and there are now a number of striped, tipped and blended varieties. The formation of the cactus dahlia is such that the colors show to a much greater advantage than in the show or fancy. Up to the last few years, the cactus dahlias have been indifferent bloomers, excepting in a few varieties which have very short stems. Lately they have been blooming much more profusely, blooming in fact as early and as profusely as the show dahlias, but their main drawback has been a weak, drooping stem. This has been overcome the last year or two and we now have a few cactus dahlias with strong stems and the flowers face up, and at the same time they have such substance that they will keep as long as show dahlias after being cut. These are the most valuable ones, and I predict inside of five years that the cactus dahlia will be as widely known as all other classes combined.

The decorative dahlias are intermediate in form between the show and the cactus. They have the loose, open outline, in many cases irregular. The petals are sometimes pointed, sometimes incurved, and mostly reflexed, although in some cases, like Wilhelm Miller and Grand Duke Alexis, they are quilled. They are of the largest size, especially in such types as William Agnew and Clifford W. Bruton. The color is the grandest. With a very few exceptions they are all self-colored, but clear and vivid among the dark varieties and exceedingly delicate and chaste among the lighter ones. They are extremely early and profuse bloomers and continue in bloom the entire season. As their name would imply, they are the most valuable for decorative purposes, as they are strong, vigorous growers and can be cut on long stems.

The single dahlias are rapidly gaining a wonderful popularity. The color of these is marvelous. There is also as much difference in the color and size as among the other classes. We have the single cactus, the stellate, the show, fancy, orchid-flowered, anemone-flowered, the gloria, French collarette, and many other types or sub-divisions which are generally all classed together as single dahlias. A collection of a few hundred varieties of single dahlias in full bloom is certainly a most beautiful sight. The plants grow in height from one foot to ten feet; the flowers in size from one inch to eight inches in diameter. Improvement in the single varieties the past few years is wonderful. Most of the older varieties of high growth have been superseded by dwarf, low branching, long-stemmed varieties, and these in turn are now rapidly being superseded by the orchid-flowered or Twentieth Century class. This last bright colored, mammoth-flowered single is now found in all of the colors.

Various Items.

Hydrangeas are about over. C. A. Dunn & Co. were able to fill an order for 1,000 heads of this showy flower on Saturday last.

John McIntyre says that his house (Edward Reid) had a record-breaking day on fine roses this week, also that a shipment made recently to a far distant point, Niles, Mich., reached its destination in good order.

W. A. Murray, Atco, N. J., is sending in some very fine white carnations, Queen Louise, to Samuel S. Pennock.

William Berger, of Germantown, has improved his store and enclosed his office, putting in a Fisher typewriting and billing machine. This machine is very popular in the department stores, proving itself a great labor saver. By its aid bills are made out in duplicate as fast as sales are made, so that bills are ready at any time for the customer and work at the end of each month is greatly lessened.

The September meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society was held last Monday evening. Peonies and asters were the subjects for discussion. George C. Watson spoke on peonies. He was followed with close attention by those present.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society held its dahlia show on Tuesday evening and kept it open all day Wednesday. It was the best and most instructive dahlia show ever seen here, and was greatly enjoyed by all who saw it.

R. G. Palmer had another of his pleasant parties to Doylestown last week. He was accompanied by Leo Niessen and Charles E. Meehan. They report Mr. Palmer's new houses in fine condition, well put together and full of good stuff. While describing John F. Andre's place, Mr. Niessen said to the writer: "He has eight houses averaging about 140x20 feet, all in Brides and Maids, except one in Beauties. Everything looked well; the plants were strong and vigorous, all neatly tied up, beds and walks clean. In fact, you should be happy if your place looks like it; I hope it does." So do I.

B. Eschner, of the firm of M. Rice & Co., returned last Saturday from a very successful business trip through the south and west. PHU OBITUARY.

John C. Pickelman.

John C. Pickelman, who died at the German Hospital, Buffalo, September 3, after an illness of several months, was well known to older Buffalonians. Mr. Pickelman was 74 years old. In 1854 he came to Buffalo and some time after opened Orchestrion Hall with a big greenhouse adjoining. It was a unique place, frequented by many of the best people in Buffalo. The orchestrion which helped to make it famous cost $5,580. Mr. Pickelman was born in Bavaria, and came to this country when a comparatively young man. He was particularly well known on the East Side. He was married twice and is survived by his second wife, three children, and by John Pickelman, the Chippewa street florist, who is an adopted son.

Z. K. Jewett.

The demise of Z. K. Jewett, of Sparta, Wis., is announced. He was a pioneer nurseryman and florist, and was widely known in the trade. In recent years he had done a large business in gathering and shipping sphagnum moss.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Such a market as we have had this week the stock exchange reporter would describe as "ragged" and "spotty." Some of the houses report nothing doing, but in others, principally those which do a shipping trade, there are evidences of considerable activity. Indianapolis and Cincinnati have been large buyers, a state fair at one and a fall festival at the other occasioning the demand. Small orders from other outside points have also been numerous, showing conditions in this market to be general over a wide territory, for in nearly every case the call was for something on which the weather has shortened the supply. Beauties are wanted, but principally good tea roses are called for, and few are to be had, with simply wagon loads of the short, soft and open flowers encumbering the wholesale houses until jobbed off to the Greeks.

The increase in the orders for asters is also very noticeable. Not long ago, when there were plenty of good asters, the sale was almost entirely local, for all the country buyers had asters of their own, but now that the heavy rains have spoiled the flowers for the out-of-town grower he wires in for a supply, and is disappointed at the quality of the goods he gets, forgetting that it rains alike on the just and on the unjust. There are still plenty of asters here, such as they are, also gladioli. Auratum lilies are again plentiful and longiflorums are to be had.

The carnations are pretty good for so early, good flowers and fair stems, but there are too many poor ones here also. The fall openings are taking considerable stock, both green goods and cut flowers. If the florists through the country would look for this work they would get much more of it and could handle it at a nice profit, getting their supplies in this market.

The cold wave which the weather man has been predicting arrived Wednesday morning, and will do much to shorten supplies of undesirable stock. If the low temperature holds for any length of time there should be a marked improvement in the average quality of roses, although much mildew may now be looked for, many growers not having begun firing in time.

Various Notes.

Peter Reinberg and John Muno will be of a party to go to Sleepy Eye, Minn., next week for two weeks' hunting.

E. C. Amling shipped out 2,000 valley on a single order on Tuesday.

Geo. Harrer, of Morton Grove, is sending E. H. Hunt small quantities of Queen of Edgely rose. It is seldom seen in this market.

There will be a final meeting for the settlement of convention entertainment accounts at the Union restaurant this evening at seven o'clock. All committeemen and subscribers have been notified to be present.

Wietor Bros.' greenhouses were struck by lightning in the storm last Sunday night, but only a little damage was done.

C. L. Washburn says people who stay in town have no idea of the amount of water that has fallen in the last few days. The fields along the Burlington from Chicago to Hinsdale are all flooded and the rivers as high as during the spring floods. It has practically drowned the outdoor flowers.

D. W. Brant, of Brant & Noe, Forest Glen, has been confined to his bed for two weeks by illness.

A. Dietsch Company has been incorporated to manufacture greenhouse material. Carl Ickes is one of the incorporators; authorized capital stock, $30,000.

S. Muir has another fine stock of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine this year.

W. N. Rudd is making preparations to distribute his light pink carnation, Phyllis, this season.

Klehms' Nursery is sending in a big cut of auratum lilies.

H. F. Halle has returned from a two months' trip to Germany, but his health does not show the improvement for which his friends hoped.

Henry Payne, of Hinsdale, the "greens" grower, has returned from a fishing trip to Northern Michigan.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. has several hundred very good chrysanthemum plants in 6-inch pots, which they are just moving in from the field, where they have been plunged all summer.

August Jurgens says there was a great call for valley beginning last Saturday. Monday and Tuesday it was impossible to supply the demand.

E. F. Winterson Co. is handling many plants. On Tuesday they got in a full carload of Boston ferns.

J. A. Budlong has 10,000 chrysanthemums in about fifteen varieties, all in fine shape and many showing color. The space will be used for propagating when the flowers are cut.

George W. Wienhoeber says that fall business is starting in pretty briskly.

Clifford Pruner is back at Winterson's fully recovered from his severe illness.

The Beckers, at Rogers Park, are reverting to vegetables.

Fred Klingel, at Peter Renberg's, is again on duty, after an all summer's illness.

H. Hansen, on North Clark street, has most of his carnations housed, all except some Hill and White Cloud, and looking fine. He ships to Bentley & Co.

W. S. Garland, at Des Plaines, says he has had fire in his rose houses nearly every night this summer. His stock shows the benefit.

A. C. Kohlbrand, of E. C. Amling's, has been ill for a week.

Visitors: J. J. Curran, with Von Bochove Bros., Kalamazoo, Mich.; L. Wasserman, Muskegon, Mich.

BUSHNELL, ILL.—E. D. Lauterbach is building a new greenhouse 25x100.

ELDORA, IA.—John Pollard, formerly of Des Moines, is removing his plant to this place.

ATHENS, O.—Simon Brouwer, formerly of Chillicothe, has bought land here and will start in the greenhouse business.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The long delayed "good old summer time" arrived just as we are reading of frost and snow in the northwest, but here it is and the market is glutted as a result of the hot wave and prices are receding at an alarming rate. Trade is fair for the season, however. The schools and nearly all of the theaters opened on Monday and their influence was evident. Every handsome teacher and actress had a hand in the floral pie, but the market supply was enormous and not even a flurry was created. Asters, dahlias and gladioli are abundant. Violets arrive regularly. Chrysanthemums have begun and there is nothing lacking. Roses are abundant and were of superb quality until the hot weather hit them. Carnations increase in quantity and improve in quality daily and the windows of the retailers are ablaze with color. All the autumn outdoor flowers and grasses are at their best. Hydrangeas and golden rod are much in evidence. He is only an apology for a florist who cannot make his window display gorgeously attractive now.

Various Items.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Reed, mother of Mr. Reed, of Reed & Keller.

Mr. Nash is an interesting fellow to interview these days, with his instructive stories of "Hold Lannon, don't cher know." He says they can't teach us anything about the flower business but decries our torpidity in not having an established market, like Covent Garden, where every department of the trade could congregate, and up-town, say at the corner of Forty-third street and Sixth avenue, where a splendid site for a market is obtainable, and where the very center of the business interests of the metropolis must ultimately be. In London they are now building a market, through private enterprise, for the floral products of France and the Scilly Islands. The market in London opens at 4 and closes at 9 a. m. in summer; in winter from 5 to 9. In no other respect save as to its market conveniences can floral London compare with New York. Mr. Nash is much benefitted in health by his trip abroad. His son, who has been attending school in England, returned with him.

On September 6 the home of August Millang was honored by a visit from the stork, with a baby boy in the basket. As the "Beauty King" seems to be a confirmed bachelor, the new arrival will carry the name of Joe, after his uncle, Joseph Millang, manager of the New York Cut Flower Co.

Mr. Ford is back from his fishing trip to Barnegat and his visit to his violet growers at Rhinebeck. At the latter place he found over fifty new greenhouses erected since his trip a year ago, and as an illustration of "the nerve of some people," as he expressed it, he cites the case of one man there who has just built three large houses and benched 22,000 plants, and "he never was in a greenhouse but twice in his life."

Alex Guttman has about doubled his ice box capacity and storeroom and is still handling an average of 4,000 asters and gladioli daily.

Jacobs & Son, of Brooklyn, have had a great year and even now cannot catch up with orders. They supplied the materials for the Bobbink & Atkins recent addition and have just completed six large greenhouses for Rowehl & Granz, Hicksville, L. I. They also built a 2,000-dollar conservatory for the Isabella Heimath Home in Brooklyn, three 350-foot houses for Wendelberger, of Yonkers, and three for McMillan & Son, of Hudson Heights, N. J.

Park Commissioner Young, of Brooklyn, who is a thorough Scotchman, has built a "green" through the suggestion of our own Davy Mellis, whereby the florists and others may indulge in the old English game of bowls, at which William Elliott is an expert and in which his club won the silver cup. There will be a grand opening soon, at which the regular S. A. F. bowlers will have an opportunity to demonstrate their lack of knowledge.

Elliott & Sons won the silver medal for the exhibit at the "Volkfest" at Ridgewood Park, L. I., last week, a great annual festival, where the customs of the fatherland are perpetuated and the German florists illustrate their artistic ability in carpet bedding, lawn decoration and plant groupings. The judges of exhibits were Anton Schultheis, of College Point; Carl Woerner, of Flatbush, and Carl Zill, of Weehawken, and among the prize winners were Bobbink & Atkins, A. L. Miller, Aug. Schraeder, John Baumann, Jaques Webber, E. T. Buckingham, Henry Botzer, H. Maenner, J. Miesem, Charles Albrecht, F. Marquardt and F. Dannhauser. Wm. Aichmann is president of the society and the attendance reached 25,000 a day.

J. P. Meehan, with Mackintosh, Broadway, has returned from his week's outing at Saratoga. Mackintosh saved his sixth drowning case at Long Branch a few days ago, one of his "salvage" victims being a lady weighing over 300 pounds. If she had got her arms around his neck, as she tried to do, she would have sunk him sure, but he managed to have her postpone her gratitude and towed her to safety.

Phil Ditzenberger, of Ghormley's, will marry a week from next Wednesday, with appropriate fireworks by his associates.

The new firm of Slinn & Hughes should make considerable stir this winter. B. S. Slinn, Jr., has been conducting a successful business for some time, and Walter Hughes, who has been salesman for Jerome Ruydam, of Flatbush, is well and favorably known. They will handle Mr. Ruydam's fine carnation stock as usual and have some other good growers on their list. Their headquarters will be with the New York Cut Flower Co., in the Coogan building.

The regular board meeting of the Cut Flower Company was held yesterday. The company has just installed a new switch board with numerous trunk wires, so that each of their many departments is now connected with the central office, thereby increasing their conveniences and facilities.

To illustrate the enormous shipments of asters to this market, Mr. Ghormley showed me 9,400 from one shipper on Saturday last, and the same glut prevails in nearly every wholesale establishment in the city. In several of the wholesale stores 15,000 to 20,000 asters are handled daily.

C. W. Ward reports every carnation plant disposed of already and the same scarcity prevails all over the east, the supply nowhere equalling the healthy demand.

W. C. Mansfield, of Lexington avenue, has returned from the Thousand Islands with some big pickerel stories. He was accompanied by Messrs. Roberts and Grunewald, the retailers of Columbus avenue, and left them there still fishing in these prolific waters.

John Young reports a continuous demand for orchids of all kinds, especially Cattleya labiata.

A. H. Langjahr, of Brooklyn, who has conducted a wholesale cut flower business there since 1891, has decided to try the "store in two cities" idea and will shortly open at 53 West Twenty-eighth street, New York, first floor left, a splendid location. Mr. Langjahr will continue his Brooklyn store as usual.

Mrs. Siebrecht, wife of Henry Siebrecht, Sr., has been very ill for some weeks and is still suffering from an attack of pleurisy which at one time threatened serious results. Hopes are now entertained for her recovery.

Henry Siebrecht, Jr., and wife and Will Siebrecht and wife have returned from a pleasure trip to Montreal, Quebec, the White Mountains and Saratoga.

Mrs. P. Reidel is rapidly recovering from a serious operation at one of the hospitals.

The bowling captain has returned from a summer in the Catskills ready to kill the pins this winter, and anxious to get together a team that will bowl as well as he does, and trim the pride of those Philadelphia absorbers, who are never happy unless they win everything in sight. It's a long lane that has no turn. I predict at St. Louis the descendants of William Penn will not be "one, two, three," as Billy Kasting scientifically expresses it. Meantime, if any members of the New York Florists' Club will send their names to Captain Lang and express their willingness to join the bowling club, it will be only a few days until the nucleus of a winning team for 1904 will be at work, and New York, when it gets its mind thoroughly made up, can whip any two teams in the country.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business begins to show some improvement. The retailers report that they were fairly busy during the past week, while a great deal of funeral work, with a few weddings, kept some of us on the jump for a few days. The shipping trade also begins to show improvement among the wholesalers. The weather is fine; warm, bright days and cool nights, which they say is just the kind of weather to make the young stock grow and which improves the cut blooms. Night firing has not yet become a necessity. Nearly all the growers are busy putting in their fall bulbs.

Roses are coming in with improved foliage and blooms. The demand for high grade stock is good, but supply is limited as yet. Good Beauties are still somewhat scarce, but plenty of shorts are in the market; $2 per dozen is the top price. Meteors are also better and Brides and Carnots are of good quality. Maids, Perles and Gates are small as yet, but promise better soon. The best roses bring $5 per 100 and there seem to be plenty for the demand. Carnations are fairly plentiful, but cannot be called choice. They clean up fairly well, but, like outdoor stock, the stems are short, although the blooms are fair. The best grade does not bring over $1.50 per 100, while some of the ordinary stock is sold at 50 cents. The supply of fancies is very limited.

Lily of the valley sold somewhat better the past week, owing to the fall weddings. Asters have shortened up, but enough are shipped in to supply the demand at $1 and $1.50 per 100. Heads of hydrangea when clean sell well; so does Clematis paniculata. The long sprays of the latter would be effective in decorations, but very little of that kind of work is now on hand. Cosmos is coming in, but not in sufficient quantities to make a quotation on it. Gladioli are about gone. These, with other outdoor stock, sell slowly. In the line of green, adiantum has some demand. Smilax also moves well. With galax, Sprengeri and plenty of fancy ferns, the green market is in good condition at the present time.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its September meeting in Edwardsville, Ill., at the home of Fred Ammann. It was the most enthusiastic meeting held by the club this year, and thirty members were in attendance. The members were met at the Court House square by Mr. Ammann and his foreman, Mr. Blixen, and were escorted to their place. After the inspection of this well kept establishment all were of the same opinion, that everything was in fine shape. The young rose stock, especially the Perles, Beauties, Ivory and Brides, looked fine, and the short-roof Dietsch houses were voted a success; the Wolf ventilator was also well spoken of.

The meeting opened up at 3 o'clock, with President Dunford in the chair. All committees reported and were discharged with thanks. Mr. Ammann was requested to read his Milwaukee speech. Frederick Balthis was elected a member of the club, and Wm. Bouche, landscape gardener, made application for membership. All essays left over will be read at the next meeting. The installation of officers took place. With a few appropriate remarks President Dunford left the chair, which he has so ably filled the past year to J. J. Beneke, the newly elected president. Vice-President Winter, Secretary Schray, Treasurer Koenig and Trustees Ammann, Halstedt and Dunford were duly installed. The trustees were requested to have the list of essays for the fall meetings ready at the next meeting of the club.

The president then read a letter from W. J. Stewart, secretary of the S. A. F., and said that by the next meeting of the club the committees which will have charge of the S. A. F. entertainment next August will be named, and that the place for the meeting, exhibition hall and bowling alleys had already been spoken for. Every member present signified his willingness to work, and work hard, for the success of the convention next year.

The question box contained a lot of interesting queries and a big discussion was brought out on stem-rot in carnations, in which Messrs. Fillmore, Guy, Halstedt, Ammann, Herzog and Dunford had a lively mix-up, but it ended happily and made the meeting quite interesting.

After adjournment Mr. Ammann invited the members to a fine lunch, which was spread on the lawn and which was served by Mrs. Ammann and her daughters, assisted by Mrs. Blixen. After lunch speeches were made by those who attended the convention, and nothing but good words and praise were heard for the Milwaukee and Chicago florists for our entertainment. The hour was growing late, and, drinking the health of Mr. Ammann and his family, the members started for home, voting this one of the best meetings held by the club this year. On the way home the members had lots of fun at the expense of Frank Fillmore, the joker of the club.

The next meeting of the club will be held on October 8, at 2 o'clock, in Odd Fellows' building, and the entire membership is requested to be present, as convention matters will come up which will be of interest to every member of the club.

Various Notes.

Fred Ammann, who is known among the craft as the "Perle King," distributed a fine lot of well grown Perles to those who attended the club meeting last Thursday, which was much appreciated by members.

Mr. Felter, on Lexington avenue, will have a fine lot of pot chrysanthemums for the fall trade.

At Berning's all hands are busy making preparations to move to their new location at 1402 Pine street.

The St. Clair Floral Co., of Belleville, Ill., is building five Dietsch houses, 16x100, for roses. These, so Dr. Halstedt, who is the head of the company, says, will be finished by November 1.

A. L. Vaughan, the representative of E. H. Hunt, of Chicago, is a visitor this week. The boys are all glad to see Lloyd and no traveling man has more friends here than Mr. Vaughan.

Bowling.

The wives of the florist bowlers are arranging a bowling club, of which no one can become a member unless connected with the trade. They will have their weekly bowling, the same as the men, only they will have it in the afternoons. Anyone wishing to join will please send her name to Mrs. F. C. Weber, 4326 Olive street, at once. Mrs. Theo. Miller and Mrs. F. M. Ellis are fast becoming expert bowlers. The object of the ladies' club is to be in trim for next year's convention.

The two florists teams bowled Monday night at the Blue Ribbon alleys. The night was cool and pleasant, and the rolling fair. The score follows:

BUFFALO.

Current Comment.

We are at present sweltering amidst a horrid humid spell, hard for a northerner to bear. Business is gradually awakening from its torpid, midsummer, condition. I don't know how the retailers get rid of all the asters and gladioli, but I do know from personal observation taken but a few hours ago, that our very energetic commission man, Mr. Kasting, seemed to me to have enough to supply western New York.

I have not heard of any considerable addition to our florist establishments this summer, except the entire rebuilding of Louis H. Neubeck's place, corner of Main and High streets. As this is within a block or two of the very best residence district, and, of course, within the fire limits, nothing but the most substantial of material, stone, brick, iron and glass, will go into it. It will be one of the best equipped places in the country, too small to reckon much as a producing place, but fine as a show and business place, and Louis knows how to run it.

A Visit to Toronto.

I was again honored with an invitation to judge the cut flowers and designs at Canada's great fair and promptly accepted and tried to fulfil the position last week. It would have been very pleasant to have been in Toronto the week before, for then the Canadian Horticultural Society met. It was very pleasant to know that the newly elected president is our very old friend, Edward I. Mepsted. The Toronto fair is the greatest annual exhibition on the continent, by long odds. While the New York State Fair had 30,000, with President Roosevelt as a star attraction, Toronto had days of 70,000, 80,000, 90,000, and on Monday, November 7, 110,000. While ornamental horticulture is but a small feature, it is most creditable. I can remember when, some fifteen years ago, I thought the Toronto florists behind the times, especially in designs. No longer can that be said, for many of the baskets, etc., were as rich, elaborate, and withal, as artistic, as I see anywhere. I wish, Mr. Editor, that all your readers could have seen "The Vacant Chair." It was truly a work of art. There were in competition with it several most costly and beautiful pieces, costing much more to build and fine in every respect, yet the chair had the perfection of shading and taste of arrangement. The roses exhibited by John H. Dunlop were wonderful for this season, about as perfect as you expect to see in February.

Sorry I could not call on everybody, but that was not possible, so in the company of that most companionable of men, Dr. Rowlands, of Utica, who is a most ardent florist on the side, with carnations his specialty, I ran up that little twenty-four miles to the mammoth Dale Estate, at Brampton. This place is always worth a long journey to see. They are just adding a trifle of 120,000 feet of carnation houses, which will be rather late in planting, but as they have an acre or two of summer-grown-under-glass, looking very fine, they will likely not run short. Of all things in this twelve acres of modern glass, the most remarkable are a number of 300-foot beds on tile, of Bride, Bridesmaid, Perle and Canadian Queen planted in the middle of last April, just now cutting their second crop. It would be idle to talk of thousands of flowers. I can only compare it to a fine crop of carnations in the month of April, standing up four feet from the ground. It is too large a place to see in two hours and too much to describe in these pages.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

During the past week, notwithstanding the very hot weather, our market did not show any decline. Business is still very good, and no one about this city has any cause to complain. Funeral work still holds the lead, but other branches of trade are rapidly picking up, as the summer vacationists return home. Though there is still a good supply of stock, with the exception of carnations, it is not quite so heavy as a week ago. The fancy asters sell on sight. Roses are about the same as last week, both as to supply and price. The hot weather has been pretty hard on Beauty. There is a brisk demand for them, though, and the price obtained is held well up to quotations.

Club Meeting.

Saturday was the regular meeting of the Florists' Society. A committee was appointed to look up plans for our winter flower show, and report at the next meeting. Ben George and D. Rusconi were appointed to plan entertainment for the next meeting. A lunch will be served and all members are requested to make a special effort to be present, as business of importance will be discussed. S. S. Skidelsky was present at the meeting.

Flower Show.

The first flower show given at the fall festival under the direction of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held September 10 and without doubt it was the best exhibition of cut flowers and plants ever held at this time of year. The arrangement of the tables, general effect and the quality of the stock exhibited could scarcely have been improved upon. Theo. Bock, of Hamilton, O., was the judge and did good work.

The prizes were awarded as follows: Best general display, W. K. Partridge, Lockland, O., first prize, $150; George & Allan, second prize, $100; J. W. Rodgers, third prize, $75, and Chas. McCrae, fourth, $50. Best display roses, George & Allan, first; Chas. McCrae, second. Best display carnations, J. W. Rodgers, first; Chas. McCrae, second; R. A. Betz, third. Best display gladioli, Cushman Gladiolus Co., Sylvania, O., first; J. W. Rodgers, second; George & Allan, third. Best display asters, George & Allan, first; T. W. Hardesty, second; H. Konzelman, third. Best display lilies, George & Allan, first; T. W. Hardesty, second; H. Konzelman, third. Best display dahlias, R. V. Price, Home City, O., first; Wagner Park Conservatories, Sidney, O., second; Cushman Gladiolus Co., third.

The city greenhouses made a display of crotons occupying the center of the hall. They were arranged in a pyramid and the colors and effect were beautiful. E. G. Gillett deserves great credit for his work on this exhibition, for had he not given so much of his time it would never have reached the success that it did.

Various Notes.

J. W. Rodgers has just returned from a short vacation spent at Madison, Ind. Max Rudolph has been cutting some of the finest asters seen hereabouts. They were grown indoors and were about as good as you ever see them.

There were a good many visiting florists this week. Among them were: J. T. Herdegen, Aurora, Ind.; H. Behans, Middletown, O.; Theo. Bock and John Lodder, Hamilton, O.; Chas. and Frank Dieterich, Maysville, Ky.; S. M. Harbison and brother, Danville, Ky.; Chas. Weltz, Wilmington, O., and S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia. C. J. OHMER.

MADISON, N. J.

Current Notes.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Club had its usual monthly meeting on Wednesday last, and completed all the final details for the annual show, to be held on November 5 and 6. This society welcomes outside competition and does not deduct any percentage from the winnings of successful competitors, who are not members, the general feeling being that if a grower can win a prize he is entitled to it, no matter where he comes from.

Roses generally are looking well in this section and good competition can be looked for in spite of a wet, cold summer, while as for the chrysanthemums, the Madison show has for years been famous. The flowers annually set up by such growers as A. Herrington, of Florham Farms, and W. Duckham, gardener to D. Willis James, are ample testimony to the fact that Madison can't be beat in floriculture. Chrysanthemums this year seem to be even finer than usual, and this section will be heard from, as usual, when the New York show begins.

Building operations this summer were not very extensive in this section, although quite a general overhauling can be noticed around.

Righter & Barton erected two houses of the new galvanized construction of the Pierson-Sefton Co. They are unquestionably splendid houses, although expensive for the trade grower. Stock in these houses is in very fine condition, the American Beauties particularly, and taken altogether this is a model establishment.

A. L. Schultz & Co. put up one new house, 22x300, and modernized their heating plant somewhat, putting in two of the largest Hitchings sectional boilers. The boys believe in being up to date, and are constantly making improvements.

Jeff Doremus only started in the business last year, but this year he added a new house, 20x200 feet, of the best type of construction, also by the Pierson-Sefton Co. The stock all through his place is in good shape, and there seems a prosperous winter ahead of him. The genial Jeff has a well of very fine water on his place, but I venture to predict that his water will never make him more famous than has the brand of apple jack he for years manufactured. VISITOR.

TORONTO.

The Market.

During the last few weeks trade has been picking up wonderfully and with the great scarcity of stock it keeps both retailers and wholesalers at their wits' end to know how to fill orders. As we are sending these notes, a decided change in the weather has taken place and we are plunged from a decidedly cool August to what would look like a very warm September and might be classed as July weather. This, we presume, will have a tendency to rush stock along. Asters are exceptionally plentiful and some very fine stock, especially in white; long stems and blooms all that could be desired. Carnations are commencing to come in fair supply. C. Turp is sending in a nice cut. W. L. Lindsay, of Tilsonburg, is also sending in some good stock.

Notes.

John Milligan, late of Dunlop's, who has taken over the greenhouse at Mimico Industrial School, loomed up the other day with his first cut of carnations. He reports stock looking very promising.

We were favored with a call the other day from W. J. Peake, of J. H. Rebstock's, Buffalo, N. Y.; also A. F. Luhr, St. Mary's, Pa. D. J.

GRAND RAPIDS.

Prices remain the same as at my last report, except asters, which vary from 25c to 50c, according to quality.

The weather still continues humid. We have had such an abundance of rain that it has interfered seriously with housing carnations; eleven days of continuous rain, and at the present time it is still raining. Business is quiet, except funeral orders and shipping, which keeps all flowers cleaned up close. Carnations are very scarce, but field-grown flowers are beginning to come in fast, while the earlier planted stock inside is also beginning to flower, although the stems are, of course, rather short. This is the kind of weather that is rough on violets, and forms the right conditions for black spot. Look sharp after the ventilation and don't forget to keep the other eye on that pesky little rascal, the black fly. Violet troubles have begun early this season.

This week will see the balance, or nearly so, of all carnations planted, and it is fair week here, too. The floral exhibit will, as usual, be a "help us out" kind of an affair, when anything, even the poorest trash, goes, just because of poor management and leaving things go till just before fair time, then run around to see who can be secured to help out. This year Henry Smith, Grand Rapids Floral Co., and Bruins-Slot & Sons are the martyrs, and will do their best to make that department attractive.

Such a strong opposition has developed against the city acquiring the Macnama forty acres, adjoining John Ball Park, that it has been decided advisable by the council to submit the matter to a vote of the people.

Pleasant memories cling to us from the Milwaukee convention, and we should like to see a gold medal awarded that man or woman who suggested that delightfully convenient and practical lunch basket on board boat. G. F. C.

GARDENING UNDER GLASS

MUELLER BROS., St. Joseph, Mo., have built a fine range of four houses for lettuce.

LAWRENCE BECKER, 1240 Bryn Mawr avenue, Chicago, has dropped carnations and planted his place to lettuce.

JACOB PHILLIP, Rogers Park, Chicago, has discontinued forcing cucumbers and lettuce, and planted his houses to carnations.

CUCUMBERS.

Please give me a few points on raising cucumbers under glass, the best variety to force, time to plant, etc. M. G.

The variety most generally grown here under glass for the trade is the White Spine. Why it is preferred to the more tender English forcing varieties I have never been able to discover, as it does not begin to compare with Telegraph or any of its numerous types, but the fact remains that the eastern markets want only the White Spine, and it does not pay a man to grow what he cannot sell. Many private growers, however, grow the English varieties for home consumption, and it may be that they will some day be more extensively handled.

Cucumbers may be grown under glass the year around, the winter, of course, being the time when they are hardest to grow and most profitable. For a winter crop sow the seed now. Put two or three seeds in a 3-inch pot and thin out to one before planting out on the benches. Use new, fibry loam, well enriched with rotten manure. Set out the plants three feet apart and train up on a wire trellis near the roof. Some of the large New England growers set out the plants right in the soil that forms the floor of the house, no benches being used. For winter forcing I would prefer to set out plants on benches, as they would then get more light and air. To set a crop of fruit in the winter the White Spine has to be hand pollinated, a simple matter when one knows the difference between the male and female flowers. Sometimes a hive of bees is put into the house for the purpose of pollinating flowers and this is perhaps the quickest way if one has lots of plants.

Greenfly is sometimes troublesome, but if tobacco stems are kept in the house from the first the fly will never become numerous. If they do, a light fumigation will do no harm to the plants. Mildew sometimes appears in the winter, but may be controlled by the use of sulphur. The temperature may be 60 degrees at night, with a rise of 20 degrees during the day if the weather is bright. C. T.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres. F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. O. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

L. A. BERCKMANS, of Augusta, Ga., is visiting northern nurseries.

MANY western nurserymen and fruit growers are at the Irrigation Congress at Ogden, Utah, this week. The work of the congress means much for the tree growing interests.

THE Association of American Cemetery Superintendents held its seventeenth annual meeting at Rochester, September 8 to 10, John C. Dix, of Cleveland, being, as has become the practice, advanced from the vice-presidency to the presidency. There was a good attendance and many hospitalities were extended, the members of the association being large buyers of ornamental nursery stock. Chicago was selected for the 1904 meeting.

POMOLOGISTS' CONVENTION.

The twenty-eighth annual meeting of the American Pomological Society was held at Horticultural Hall, Boston, September 10 to 12. There was a large attendance and a long and interesting program. Among the speakers were L. H. Bailey, J. Horace McFarland, G. H. Powell, C. L. Marlatt, John Craig, F. M. Hexamer, W. C. Strong, J. B. Brackett, W. C. Barry, W. H. Ragan, Wm. Craig, W. T. Macoun, R. H. Starr, J. H. Hale, W. A. McKinnon, W. D. Bigelow, F. W. Taylor, E. W. Wood, J. B. Ward, H. E. Van Deman, L. R. Taft, F. A. Waugh, H. W. Collingwood, S. W. Fletcher and others. There were many lively discussions of interest to the fruit growers.

C. L. Watrous declined a renomination to the presidency and the election resulted as follows: President, J. H. Hale, South Glastonbury, Conn.; vice-president, C. W. Garfield, Grand Rapids, Mich.; secretary, John Craig, Ithaca, N. Y.; treasurer, L. R. Taft, Agricultural College, Mich.

The exhibition contained over 2,000 plates of fruit and was one of the best shows the society has yet made. The Wilder silver medals were awarded as follows: To Minnesota State Horticultural Society for seedling apples; Miss E. J. Clark, Pomfret, Conn., grapes, etc.; Michigan Agricultural College, collection of fruit; New Hampshire Horticultural Society, apples; G. P. & H. W. Miller, Pawpaw, Mich., apples; Ellwanger & Barry, Rochester, 300 plates apples, peas and grapes; E. B. Wilder, Boston, for pears from the Marshall P. Wilder homestead. The Wilder bronze medals were awarded to the exhibits of C. C. Shaw, Milford, N. H.; A. A. Boggs, Waynesville, N. C.; Grand Rapids Fruit Growers' Association, West Virginia State Horticultural Society, Horticultural Department University of Wisconsin; C. A. Arnold, Arnold, Me.; Wm. Craig & Son, Abbotsford, Que.; John Rock, Niles, Cal.

During the convention the Society of Horticultural Science was organized with Prof. L. H. Bailey president.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 23d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

RADISH seed promises to be a fairly good crop in the Michigan sections.

It is stated that the Everett B. Clark Co., Milford, Conn., is to build a warehouse at Sister Bay, Wis.

THE Albert Dickinson Seed Co., Chicago, is erecting a seed warehouse and elevator midway between St. Paul and Minneapolis.

THE Minnesota Field Seed Growers' Association was formed at St. Paul, September 2, with C. C. Thompson, Farmington, president.

VISITED PHILADELPHIA: Alfred Emrich and Le Comte d'Estienne d'Orves, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, France. They will make a tour of the southern and western states and return to New York by way of Niagara Falls.

It looks now as though the position of the French bulb growers was more or less warranted by crop conditions. The market at Toulon and Ollioules is reported well sold out, closing prices on Romans, 12 centimeters and up, being about 80 francs. Some American jobbers have had many cancellations on orders for early delivery and American consumption is likely to be considerably reduced if this season's prices are maintained.

ALFRED J. BROWN, Grand Rapids, Mich., writes, September 5: "The prospect for a crop of beans is not as good as it was a few weeks ago. We have had entirely too much rain and many crops have been damaged to a large extent. Even with the most favorable weather from now until harvest, the crop will be short, while, on the other hand, if we should have unfavorable weather or an early frost, it would be very disastrous. The weather at the present time is cold and the prospects are somewhat gloomy."

A. LE COQ & Co., Darmstadt, Germany, report under date of September 1 that the crops of natural grass seeds, with the exception of the later sorts, are now harvested and in most cases crops have turned out larger than last year. Prices in general will be about as last year, but festucas lower. Phalaris arundinacea will see higher prices because of small crops, also Agrostis stolonifera and A. vulgaris, Bromus inermis and Cynosurus cristatus. Qualities will differ widely because of recent bad weather.

PHILADELPHIA.—As previously indicated, the vine seed crops in this locality are not more than twenty-five per cent of the expected yield. This coupled with the fact that very little or no vine seeds were carried over makes the outlook for 1904 very dubious. The crops of early tomatoes are now being cleaned up and the yield is only from twenty to twenty-five per cent of that originally provided for. Pepper and okra seed will even be of a lower average than tomato. All bulb deliveries are much later than usual.

Some of the Holland houses are refusing to deliver orders booked at the prices quoted last March and April, and refuse to ship unless the revised higher prices be accepted.

J. M. LUPTON, Mattituck, L. I., writes that Long Island seed crops have been generally light. Spinach was not more than twenty-five per cent of an average crop, and deliveries on contract have been about 25 per cent of orders. Kale, Siberian, has done fairly well, and is sufficient for demands, but the surplus stock is small. The Dwarf Curled Scotch winter-killed badly, and was almost a complete failure. On cabbage the crops of most standard sorts will meet the demand, although not large, and there is not much surplus stock in sight. There are a few varieties which will not be delivered in full, the deliveries on them ranging from 50 per cent to 80 per cent. Most notable among these are Early Winnigstadt, Early Spring, Danish Ball Head and Mammoth Rock Red, none of which are better than 50 per cent of a crop.

S. M. PEASE, of the Cleveland Seed Co., Rochester, N. Y., writes that they "have had very unfavorable weather during the past ten days for the maturing of sweet corn and beans. They have made but very little progress. Some crops of beans that were pretty well advanced have started to grow from the pod, on account of excess of rain. The harvest of beans will be very uneven, on account of the difference in planting. The late plantings will doubtless be caught by frost unless it holds off for a remarkable length of time; and we fear that sweet corn will receive the same treatment, as there are many fields that are just coming into ear. We do not know of any that have passed the danger point. Field after field of oats can be seen, in passing through the country, some uncut and some in the shock, and a large portion of them growing or sprouting."

EVERETT B. CLARK CO., MILFORD, CONN., says they cannot report very good crops this season. The weather has gone from the one extreme, early, to the other extreme, late. Early in the season it was very dry—latterly it has been altogether too wet. The dry weather all during turnip growing season made that a very light crop. Kale was fair. Parsnip, which received rain in time to save it from the same fate as that which turnip met, was from eighty per cent to a full crop. The wet season caused beet to have a very large growth of stalk, which, if it had seeded out, would have made a very large crop, and as it was made a fair crop. Carrot is very light. Onion, which up to the last looked like a fine crop, disappeared in the last few days on account of blast, and some which happened to escape blast we could not harvest at the proper time on account of long continued rains, causing a loss there. Hence onion will be very light, i. e., strictly Connecticut-grown onion seed. Lastly, sweet corn is still in the balance. A warm September and freedom from early frosts will give us a good crop and, the acreage planted being so great, the product of this section in the aggregate would be large. But weather continuing the same as we have so far had, a great many pieces cannot mature at all for seed. An early frost would surely bring this result. Only the very earliest plantings and the best land would then produce seed, and the aggregate product would be very light.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The market has slightly improved since my last report; stock is not quite so plentiful. Good roses are somewhat scarce but the shortage is not serious, as asters are so plentiful and they fill in any existing shortage. Carnations are arriving in better condition. Society folks are returning to their city homes much earlier this year and an early and a busy season is looked for.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams reports business very good. A large decoration at the Pittsburg Exposition and several weddings opened her season very encouragingly.

The marriage of Gilbert P. Weaklen and Miss Sadie E. Totten is announced. Mr. Weaklen is manager of Randolph & McClements' retail store.

E. C. Ludwig has been very busy with funeral work.

T. P. Langhans, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., reports business good and the outlook for fall very encouraging.

Wm. Flemm, of Breitenstein & Flemm, is at Atlantic City.

The Rose & Carnation Co., at Bakers-town, is sending in quantities of album and roseum lilies. Hoo-Hoo.

BOZEMAN, MONT.—M. Langohr is building two new houses 16x76 feet.

AURORA, ILL.—The Natural Guano Co. has just completed the rebuilding of its factory, destroyed by fire some months ago, and started up again last week.

HARTFORD, WIS.—C. B. Tremain has been in business here only three years, but has built up a nice business. He is again thinking of enlarging his green-houses.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—W. T. Hempstead is adding two houses to his plants, one of them being about finished. He had a poor season with his stuff in the field, and as a result will have to buy quite a number of carnation plants to stock the houses.

The market resembles the tide in its ebb and flow, its ups and downs, except that it is low tide most of the time. A temperature of 80 degrees and bright sun are not the most seasonable of influences, and the market is glutted with average values on the enormous receipts cut down from twenty to fifty per cent.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

September bids fair to be our warmest month, the same as last year. We have had no rain since April and only a few showers in that month, and things look rather dry in consequence. Business is extremely quiet, as it has been for the last two weeks. Flowers are very plentiful and very slow sale. Asters are on the wane and chrysanthemums will be here in full force in a couple of weeks. I have never seen asters so cheap as they were this season. They are cultivated and sold almost exclusively by the Chinese gardeners in the neighborhood of San Mateo, and it is hard to understand how they can make any money at the prices the flowers were bought for during the last four weeks. Today I saw twenty dozen Semple's pink, large flowers and long stems, just as good as it is possible to grow them, sold for 50 cents. The celestials have taken all the aster growing in their own hands and they are welcome to it. Most of the growers of carnations seem to be off crop at present and good flowers are not overplentiful. Roses are scarce enough, except white, and they are of good quality. Some very good Brides are seen from Burlingame. Beauties, however, are not up to form or color. Bridesmaids and Testouts seem to be badly affected with mildew, although I saw some fancy stock today from Ferrari Brothers.

We have had a few Princess of Wales violets for the last couple of weeks, from Ocean View, but they are weak and flabby and will not be good until we get cooler weather. Valley is in good demand and Lilium longiflorum and the various Japanese lilies fill in nicely for large sprays or bouquets. Smilax is more plentiful and is very cheap. Florists in general seem to anticipate a good season's business as soon as the fall trade commences, and I think there will be enough trade to go around in a few weeks. I do not think that, on the whole, business was as good for the past three months as it was twelve months ago, but we may more than make it up in the three or four months to come. G.

CINCINNATI, O.—Stewart Shillito will build a $1,200 greenhouse at his place in East Walnut Hills.

THERE is no paper that comes to me which is read with more real interest and benefit than your excellent publication, and I trust it may remain with us long, and continue to improve.—WM. M. LINDSAY, Birmingham, Ala.

A black and white photograph of a large, feathery palm plant, possibly a Parlor Palm, in a pot. The plant has several long, arching fronds that are finely divided. It is positioned in the center of the frame against a textured, mottled background that resembles a wall or a backdrop. The lighting is dramatic, with strong highlights on the fronds and deep shadows in the pot and background.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business was very fair last week. Quite a lot of good flowers came in and more could have been used. Lots and lots of poor ones came in, and no more of that kind were needed.

Vacationists are rapidly coming back, and Jack Frost returns among them. He has been seen in quite a few places.

Bulb men are conversing among themselves because of the non-arrival of the French and Dutch bulbs on schedule time. Tailby says nothing, but is busy sticking a lot into the mud that he was lucky enough to get hold of. Violet situation not so slow as with the bulbs. Sam Twombly had a matter of 300 or 400 of them in his box on the 12th.

And the auction sale of stalls on Columbus avenue came off! And with more "ecclat" than any other social function since the latest Vanderbilt wedding. It far exceeded the expectations of the most sanguine. (Philadelphia papers please copy.) First, two at $75 and $80. Then a slow but steady decline all through the long list of 160 stalls, till the last one sold at $12.50. Nearly $6,300 was realized as premiums alone, but since buyers get better accommodations for less money per stall than during late years, no complaints are being registered. However, since there were stalls enough to go around and but little choice really as regards location after a score or so were sold, it is quite a question why growers insisted upon paying so much premium. I credit the able auctioneer, who so blithely caroled forth the business capacities of each stall as it came under his hammer, with a good share of the financial results.

J. S. MANTER.

DENVER, COLO.

The Market.

Trade has been pretty fair, with a scarcity of good roses and carnations. Prices are about the same. The florists all have their stock well along, but some of them have had to rush on account of the extra work caused by the severe hail storm, and I must say a word of praise for the Hail Association. They have had a hard time here in Denver on account of the severe hail storms both last year and the present season, but they have come forward and adjusted the losses very promptly indeed. We certainly wish them much better success in the future and trust that they will not have to stand any loss here for the next hundred years.

Various Notes.

The boys have come back from the convention in the best of spirits, and have some of the most astounding stories to tell.

Wm. Eickeworth has leased the Fremont greenhouses, on Broadway, and is preparing for an extensive spring trade in plants.

Claude Hurt has leased his greenhouses to Mr. Work, for growing vegetables.

Lyle Waterbury has started a commission house, much to the satisfaction of the florists in general, and expects to do a large business this winter.

Berry, Lewis and Rushmore report having been elegantly entertained by the El Paso County Horticultural Society at Colorado Springs, on the occasion of their annual flower show, at which they acted as judges. In their rounds of the floral establishments they found that William Clark had torn down some of his smaller houses and was replacing them with structures thirty feet wide. At Evans' new place, with Ed Johnson in charge, everything was in fine condition. The arrangement of the houses, shed and office is fine. At Crump's everything is in nice form, and especially good were the potted chrysanthemums grown by Ernest Flohr. THORN.

THE Milwaukee Sentinel of September 6 printed C. C. Pollworth's portrait and a very interesting account of the growth of his business, and the florists' industry in Milwaukee. It notes that Mr. Pollworth is something of a "joiner," for he belongs to all the trade societies, and is also an active Mason, Knight of Pythias and member of the Fraternal Alliance.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting and exhibition of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held September 4. The usual bright display was rendered more brilliant by a display of named dahlias by J. C. Williams, of Montclair, and Japan lilies by Peter Duff, whose vegetables secured the highest number of points in the contest for the silver cups to be awarded next December. President George Smith showed a collection of fruits, among which was the Brighton grape. John Hayes brought Lawson carnations which showed skillful growing for this season of the year. Mr. Williams' dahlias were not entered for competition, but the exhibition committee awarded him a certificate of merit. The judges for the evening were J. C. Williams, Andrew MacArthur and J. B. Davis.

Notice was given that Mr. Gardiner, of Jobstown, will be the speaker for the October meeting and Professor Britton will probably visit the society in November. Professor Apgar, of Newark, made some remarks upon the habits of plants, noting the desmodium the flowers of which have a peculiar movement in bright sunshine, and the nymphæa, which disappeared for 400 years from Egypt and then appeared again.

The trade features here are good for this season. The sale of flowers shows a marked increase for table use, funerals and weddings. James Hayes, for sixteen years in business at Topeka, Kans., has been visiting his brother in Llewellyn Park, on his way to Europe for a two month's vacation. Jos. B. DAVIS.

We feel that we could not get along without the REVIEW, as it gives us valuable information we need every day in our business.—ADGATE & SON, Warren, Ohio.

MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.

Yours very truly, ROBERT C. BANCROFT.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Watering.

There are so many different conditions to be met and often difficulties to overcome that it is impossible in a short article to cover the many points connected with this all-important operation. There are, however, a few rules which may serve as a partial guide:

First.—Water only when the plants require it.

Second.—Supply no more at the root than is necessary to thoroughly moisten the soil.

Third.—Choose such a time as will allow moisture applied to the foliage to evaporate before night.

Very elementary rules and easy to follow, would be the opinion of a novice, and very true this would be were it not for changes in weather, difference in soils, requirements of certain sorts and situation or arrangement of houses and benches in same. These are matters which demand thought, observation and sound judgment at all times. One can certainly study his soil and know the advantages of his houses, two things out of my power to touch upon. From your knowledge of the composition and nature of your soil, construction of bench as regards provision made for drainage, whether raised or solid, you can judge the natural capacity of a bed to retain moisture.

Daily observance of the rate at which plants are growing will show those making the most rapid strides, and these require the most water, all things being equal. This is owing to roots extending their system in search of food, and a proportionate consumption of moisture may be expected.

During the next month we are likely to have some warm days, accompanied by wind and with ventilators and doors open to allow free circulation of air, transpiration is a matter to be considered.

With the above in mind and occasional examination of the soil to the depth of three inches, one ought not to go wrong in deciding whether or not water is needed. As to quantity, I have already touched upon that. Any surplus which must drip or drain away is a waste of water, a shiftless manner of being sure that at least enough has been supplied, besides being a means of carrying out available plant food in solution.

The manner and, in connection, it may be said, the exact time of applying water, depends much upon the state of the weather. In the early forenoon of a bright day is the ideal time to water and it is well at this time of the year to let the foliage receive its share in the form of a gentle shower. This is especially beneficial in case the sun comes out strong after two or three days rain or cloudy weather, and should signs of wilting persist in showing, a second gentle spraying early in the afternoon is advisable.

There will be dark, stormy periods, preceded by a warm, drying out spell during which the soil has become almost devoid of moisture. Proceed with caution, watching the plants closely and, if possible, delay watering until pleasant weather; but should the plants give signs of suffering, water sparingly between the rows without wetting the foliage. Oftentimes the plants next the side of the bench are in need of water while the center ones are not, as is proved by examining the soil in both places. This condition is often found in the middle afternoon of a bright day and should be remedied by a slow stream from the hose or, in some cases, a water pot can be used to advantage.

Care should be taken now that the paths and space under the benches are not heavily sprayed or by any means allowed to become watersoaked. During July and August, when the newly benched plants are getting established, this wholesale use of water is made to cool the atmosphere, but with the plants under way and the nights growing cooler and longer it is not necessary, besides there is a dampness produced at night which is undesirable in many ways. GEO. S. OSBORN.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Temperature and Ventilation.

We are having some cool nights now and occasionally the mercury drops close to the freezing point. Those who grow roses or other plants requiring fire these nights will do well to run a line of pipes in each carnation house to keep the air dry towards morning, when the mercury drops the lowest, and the atmosphere becomes moisture laden. If the temperature in the house rises above 50 degrees on account of the steam pipe you should open the ventilators enough to keep it down. In fact, nothing is more beneficial to the carnation than plenty of fresh air at all times.

It is not absolutely necessary, however, to have steam around every night when the temperature drops below 50 degrees, and unless you have to get up steam for some other stock, I would not urge you to do so specially for the carnations. On our place we do not grow anything that requires a higher temperature than the carnations, and we have never found it necessary to raise any steam before September 20, and often not until well into October. While it would never do to allow the temperature to drop to 40 degrees or lower regularly every night for a week, yet we do not consider it harmful to the plants if it drops to 40 degrees in the houses occasionally, providing there is plenty of ventilation on the houses and it is not raining.

The ventilation is an important factor from now until regular hard firing commences, and at every opportunity you should have the ventilators open, more or less, according to the weather. Don't think on a cool evening after a bright day that you will close the house tight and keep in some heat to prevent the temperature from dropping too low in the morning. You can make no greater mistake. Always remember that a pure, fresh, crisp and dry atmosphere a few degrees low is always preferable to a stuffy, moisture laden atmosphere raised to the proper temperature. I would rather have my houses at 45 degrees five nights each week with the ventilators open than to have them at 50 degrees with the ventilators closed and no steam up.

Of course, in case you have a rainy, wet spell you must turn on the steam to keep the atmosphere dry, even if it does not get very cool. A little later on when your plants are in full crop you would not risk such a variation in the temperature, as it would cause too large a percentage of split calyxes, but at present the sun is strong enough to counterbalance the effect of the variation in temperature, and if a few do burst the loss is small as compared with the cost of firing, etc. Few of your benches are in full crop, either, at this time. Nor could I ever see that it harmed the plants for the future. The carnation enjoys a cool temperature, and the plants in the field seem to take on new life as soon as the nights are cool, after having stood almost dormant for a couple of months in the hot, broiling sun, and through the warm summer nights. You can see it in the houses, too. As soon as the nights become cool and the sun is less intense the blooms open out better and larger, and the growth becomes heavier and crisper, and covered with that powdery bloom which covers the foliage and stem when the plant is in perfect condition.

Close the ventilators at night and allow the temperature to run up during the day, and soon you will see weak stems, small, sleepy-looking blooms and transparent foliage, and worst of all you will invite into your place all the ills that the carnation has fallen heir to. There is hardly a carnation disease that does not enjoy a close, stagnant atmosphere to develop in, and a weakened plant to attack. With plenty of fresh air, a liberal supply of water and an abundance of sunshine your plants should make a fine strong growth, and by the time dark weather sets in they will be loaded with buds which will develop slowly into magnificent blooms. These three things belong together and when they are to be had in abundance it is difficult for an intelligent grower to go wrong, but when one or the other fails you, then you must be careful in gauging the one to conform with the other. During hot summer days the fresh air is lacking, and you syringe to freshen it as much as you can, and you shade the houses to keep out the strong sun. Pretty soon you will try to get all the sun you can and you will be sparing with the water. Conditions keep changing and your treatment must continually change with them. Judgment is needed every day.

PRICE FOR CARNATION CROP.

Relative to a price for a season contract for a crop of carnations, C. W. Ward, of Queens, writes: "It is impossible to know what would be a fair price to contract a crop of carnation flowers for until one is familiar with the market in which the flowers are to be sold, and the quality of the flowers grown, as the same varieties produced by different growers differ very much in value. Considering the skill of the grower and the quality of the crop produced, as well as the market in which the flowers are to be sold, is the only true way of getting at the value. For instance: Prosperity, Enchantress, Lawson, Roosevelt and other fancy varieties, as produced by the best growers and sold upon the New York market, might bring two to three times the price that the ordinary grower would receive for the same varieties if he was obliged to sell them in some of the markets where the purchasers of flowers feel that they cannot pay beyond a certain limited price for carnations."

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

The very changeable weather we are having this month will no doubt leave its mark in rose houses, in the shape of mildew and black spot, and the greatest care should be exercised to avoid the conditions favorable to the germination and spread of these fungi. With this end in view we must be extra careful in the use of water, so that the foliage will be dry before nightfall, giving ample ventilation on all favorable occasions, more particularly during the night, while firing is practiced.

Even when not absolutely necessary to have fire to keep the temperature up to the normal, it is essential to have heat to keep the air in circulation, so that it remain in a sweet and healthy state until sunrise.

Shutting down the ventilators to keep up the temperature to save a few barrow-loads of coal results in the moisture in the house becoming condensed, which will show in the morning in the form of dew drops on the foliage. If this is permitted to occur frequently it will so affect the leaves that they will become susceptible to nearly all the ills the rose is heir to and induce the very conditions we are trying to avoid.

To keep spider in check we frequently require more water than is actually so often to such matters, and if they were not of the utmost importance to young growers I would gladly skip them, as they seem so much like repetitions. But even some of the more experienced growers are the better of such reminders, not that they are likely to get into trouble through lack of knowledge; procrastination is, however, equally fatal.

We may see a few specks of mildew or a few black spots in the morning, and instead of attending to it at once it is left till some more convenient time, entirely forgetting how rapidly it makes headway at this season, so that when we do find time to attend to it we are astonished to find that instead of a simple matter it has assumed such serious proportions that we are likely to have a hard fight to come out ahead.

By keeping a careful watch for the first symptoms of trouble and attending to it at once we may escape much of the worry, labor and loss attending an attack of either of these pests. RIBES.

GREENHOUSES BUT NO CHIMNEY

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken by O. A. C. Oehmler at Gregson, Mont. Is there another greenhouse plant anywhere in the country which hasn't a smokestack? The Butte Floral Co. has neither smokestack nor boiler, the heating medium being water from springs naturally hot. They need a little heat at night all the year around, and the hot springs give them all they need all the time. In fact they sometimes have trouble in keeping the control. Last winter they nearly cooked the stock when it was 46 degrees below zero outside. The greenhouses of the State Nursery Company at Helena, Mont., are also heated by water from hot springs, but the water is not hot enough in cold weather, so they have to use boilers also.

A LEAF MINER.

I am sending you some chrysanthemum leaves and you will see that there is a maggot between the tissues that soon works in the same way among celery leaves. Its scientific name, I believe, is Tephritis. It may also be found on the common burdock, and I have also seen cinerarias considerably damaged by its agency. There may be different varieties, but the insects are undoubtedly of the same species.

As to the question of a cure, the only remedy I can see is to remove entirely, and burn, all the leaves that can be spared and then either squeeze the maggots between the thumb and finger or pick them out with the point of a knife on the remaining foliage. This is a tedious job, but I know of nothing that can be applied strong enough to kill the maggot without killing the foliage. S. M. H. says he has already used kerosene without effect, as may be expected, because the maggot is protected by the skin that it leaves while eating away the interior of the leaf. Poisons are useless unless the leaf be first punctured, which would be an impossible task. If I were S. M. H. I would not worry too much over the matter. With colder weather coming the operations of most insects largely cease and I think it will be so in this case. While I have often seen odd leaves injured, as were the ones sent, I have never seen them in sufficient quantity to affect the sale of the crop.

BRIAN BORU.

GARDENING UNDER GLASS

THE English vegetable forcers are contending with a new cucumber scab which it is feared will prove a very harmful scourge. It seems that the mycelium thoroughly permeates the fruit and the spread is marvelously rapid. Immediate burning of the fruit is advised where the infection is detected.

FORCING TOMATOES.

Where a continuous supply of tomatoes has to be kept up, plants must already be under way, so that the fruits will be ready for use when the outdoor supply has given out. Successional sowings should be made as the supply demands. Although the length of time that the plants will continue to bear may be extended by allowing them to keep on growing and setting fruit, it is better to stop them after six or eight trusses of fruit have been set on each stem, and keep all after-growths pinched off as they appear. This gives larger and better fruit and induces them to ripen up in a shorter space of time, so that they can be got out of the way and replaced by fresh plants.

The plants may be set eighteen inches apart and trained to a single stem, or four and a half feet apart and three stems taken from each. Of the two systems of training we prefer the three stems, as it induces the setting of fruit nearer the bottom of the plants. The side shoots prevent the center shoot from growing too gross, inducing it to flower before it has attained any great length, whereas in the single-stem system, if the plants are growing vigorously, two and sometimes three feet are often lost at the bottom of the plants before any fruit can be set. Fruit can usually be set on the side shoots from where they take the upright turn, thus giving fruit from top to bottom.

Numerous varieties of forcing to-necessary to sustain the plant in health, and if this extra supply is not evaporated either by sun or fire heat before night it will bring about conditions favorable to black spot. The fight to keep down spider and keep the houses from getting so wet as to favor black spot will keep us busy for a week or two.

It seems almost unnecessary to revert ruins the entire leaf. They are very numerous, especially on Glory of Pacific, Fee du Champsaur and Helen Bloodgood. I have used kerosene emulsion but without effect. What is the remedy?

S. M. H.

This maggot is caused by a fly and is very similar, if not the same insect that matoes are being introduced from time to time. Some do fairly well, while others prove unsatisfactory, but for a reliable, free growing and free setting variety for general use, I have not found anything to surpass the old. Sterling Castle is good, though the fruits are not so large. It is a free grower and abundant bearer and is not very susceptible to the attacks of fungous diseases, which render many otherwise good varieties unprofitable.

TEMPERATURE OF CUTTING BED.

What method is usually employed to keep the temperature down in the propagating beds? Ours, although shaded, have stood from five to ten degrees higher than the temperature of the soil. We are losing a high per cent. of the rose cuttings put in.

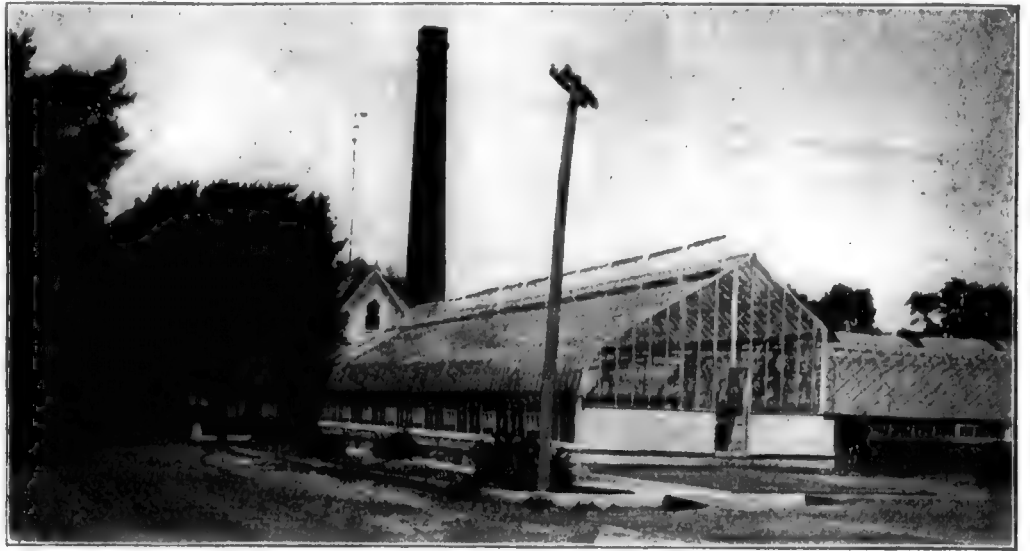

B. N.

From an inquiry at this time it is evident that B. N. is propagating now and using beds under glass, and also, presumably, without any fire heat. If the glass is shaded with lattice or a white-wash of some sort, and ventilation is given, that is about all you can do. The day temperature will go up in spite of all you can do and it will affect the temperature of the sand. To explain more definitely what I mean, if the temperature of the house ran up to 70 degrees every day and receded to 50 degrees every night, the sand would be found to remain at about 60 degrees. As long as you have no heat beneath the sand it is impossible to keep it as warm as the atmosphere on a warm day. These are not the ideal conditions for propagating, except it be for some tropical plants. I don't know anything about the climate of Oregon except what I read, but I fancy that the same methods which we follow in the east would be successful in the mild and beautiful climate of the north Pacific coast. In the east August or early September would be considered a very unfavorable time for propagating roses, from the fact that it is too warm. By the middle of October we can begin fire heat and warm the sand while the atmosphere of the house is cool, and then we have the conditions that give us good results. I have seen hybrid perpetual roses propagated very successfully at the end of June and in early July in hot-beds heavily shaded, just as all the hardy shrubs will propagate from the young spring growth. As I don't know whether it is hybrid perpetual or tea roses that B. N. is propagating, I had better not enlarge on that and will conclude by saying that tea roses from the middle of October until the middle of May are, in the east, about as sure and easy to root as any plant we grow.

TROUBLE WITH FERNS.

A subscriber, whom we will call "Mr. Altoona," sends a portion of frond of Cyrtomium falcatum which was too much dried up before it reached me to tell much about it, yet I could see that the edges were more withered and dried up than the middle portion. He says he has eighteen varieties of table ferns and most of them have the appearance of having been burnt by the sun. He says he shades from bright sun and waters daily. Gardeners don't water daily; they water when a plant needs it. It may be every day and it may be that they want water only once in three days. Yet over watering, unless it were carried to great excess, would hardly account for the condition he describes. Altoona adds that on examination he found "small green bugs the size of a pin head, ten to fifteen close together on different leaves, also hundreds of little, long, narrow, black bugs that cannot fly, but crawl on the under sides of the leaves." These green bugs are not aphids, he says. He can find none on any of the plants except the ferns mentioned.

Now, I am sorry I cannot help Mr. Altoona, for I know of no crawling creature that troubles ferns. Scale, which does not crawl, infests some of the larger ferns, and the common aphid or greenfly is sometimes troublesome on the adiantums, but I have never seen or heard of "crawling bugs" on ferns, and the leaf sent was not injured by anything eating it. You must look to some other cause. Is your soil what it should be? The best adiantums I ever saw grown on a bench were planted in good rose soil, a heavy loam with a fourth or fifth of cow manure. A good, fresh loam will grow almost any ferns.

Mr. Altoona says he used a formula for hydrocyanic gas that was published in the Review last July, in a house 20x80, keeping the house closed all night, and in the morning was surprised to find that little white fly still very much alive among his heliotropes, fuchsias, etc. If he had read that formula carefully he would have seen that the five ounces of cyanide, one quart of sulphuric acid and one quart of water was the quantity for 2,000 cubic feet of atmosphere in the house. He does not give height of house, but if it is eighty feet long, twenty feet wide and of ordinary height, side walls, say four to five feet, this house would have 12,000 cubic feet and would need six times that quantity. Measure the gable end of your house, find out how many square feet there are in the end, and then simply multiply by the length and you have the cubic air space of your house. And for every 2,000 feet of air space the formula quoted above is safe, except it be for such plants as are easily hurt by tobacco smoke. For those use one-half quantities and operate on two successive evenings.

A TRIP TO THE GAS BELT.

Having finished planting and establishing our carnations, I had a few days to spare and I took a flying trip up to the "gas belt" to see how the boys up there are behaving themselves and what improvements have been made since I last visited that neck of the woods. My first stop was at Anderson, where Stuart & Haugh are doing a fine business. Both of the proprietors were out of the city, so their able foreman, Mr. Hyatt, showed me around. Their stock, from beginning to end, looked the picture of health and showed the careful growing it has received. Their carnations had just been housed and were taking hold nicely. The plants are fine. Avondale, which originated on their place, is their favorite pink variety, although they grow a bench of Lawson and a few hundred of several other pink ones. A couple of hundred plants of McKinley were in fine shape. They still find a limited use for those two old varieties, Daybreak and Lizzie McGowan. The rose houses were showing some fine growth, both of young plants and second-year stock. Only the teas are grown here; lack of room forbids the growing of Beauty. Exhibition 'mums have been given up, as they did not pay as well for the room they took up as other crops do. Not that they do not win any premiums though; they always won their lion's share and we shall miss them at our show this fall. There is, of course, the usual variety of miscellaneous stock found on every retail place, which needs no special mention. This firm believes in expansion, as is shown by ground they have leased next to their own place.

From there I moved down to New Castle, which has been named the "rose city of the west," and after looking through the several ranges you can but say that the name has been well chosen. The first place I struck out for was that of our good friends, the Heller boys, and a warm welcome is always in store for any stranger who happens out there. They take great pleasure in showing you through their large place, and well they may, as you can see only the finest kind of stock all through the place. I found Herbert Heller at the place (his brother was in New York buying, not green goods, but dry goods) and if you are acquainted with Herbert you will know that I was well taken care of. They were just finishing up a fine lot of funeral work, of which they do a lot, he told me.

The American Beauty range is a sight; strong, healthy growth all the way from two feet high up to the tall, blooming shoots five and six feet high, and not a sign of black spot or spider anywhere to be seen. Thrips show on a bud here and there, but Mr. Heller says that all they want is a few cool days to stop them. House after house of Bride and Maid were in various stages of growth, according to the date they were planted, and several houses of two-year-old plants were making fine breaks. This firm has had extraordinary success with this carried-over stock in years past. A house of Liberty looked fine, but Mr. Heller says it has not been a profitable rose with them. A house of old Mme. Cusin looked nice and they find ready sale for the blooms on account of their beautiful color. Franz Deegen enjoys a house to itself and is doing well. They like it and would have planted more, only it sold too well last spring. Several houses are planted to Golden Gate and they think well of Ivory, of which they have several houses. Sunrise also has a house to itself.

In one of these houses we came across a bench planted with a red rose which will interest rose growers pretty soon. The variety is not owned by them but is the property of Storrs & Harrison, who bought it from the E. G. Hill Co., the originators. It is called Gen. McArthur, and I understand it is to be offered to the trade next spring. Here is a red rose you can grow successfully in the same house with your Brides and Maids and it needs no expert, either, to grow it. There are many other interesting features about this place. The large sheds, the coal cellars, the boilers and heating system are all interesting, but time and space forbid. Just now they are trying to figure out how they can do with two of their boilers what it now takes six boilers to do, and do it easier, as certain heating experts tell them. Mr. Heller says that greenhouse heating is to be revolutionized in the near future.

After dinner we drove over to the Benthey place, where we found Otto Benthey and his force of men engaged in fierce combat with an army of aster bugs which were determined to devour the finest batch of asters I have ever seen. It is a new variety of their own and these plants are being raised for seed. The blooms are pure white and four inches across without any disbud-ding, and they look like white chrysanthemums. There is also a pink one just like the white, save for the color. The stock in the rose houses is all in full growth and healthy throughout, showing a high degree of cultivation. The arrangement of this place is ideal. The houses are built on a gently rising hill-side, not steep enough to tire one, and the boiler shed is on the lower side. No trouble in getting the water to return to the boiler on that place. Their pipe threading machine must have saved them many a backache while they were fitting up their heating system.

From here we drove across town to Reinberg & Weiland's place, where Peter Weiland holds the fort. He was getting ready to drive out, so while he was making his toilet his foreman showed us through. Here again it was roses, roses, roses, and roses again, all in tip-top shape and prospects for a big cut this winter. This place used to grow quantities of carnations, but roses have evidently been found more profitable.

Just across from the depot is L. A. Jennings' place and here we found

Mr. Bender, the grower, busy with his roses, of course. All looked fine, and after spending a short half hour I had to hurry across for the train going down to Richmond, without having time to go back to see Wm. Dittman's place, where I am told he is growing very good Beauties. Oh! yes! I saw many interesting things at Richmond, but this is enough for this time and I am going over to Richmond again soon and will perhaps have something to tell then.

I just want to say one more word, and that is I was glad to see the genuine friendship that exists between the boys at New Castle. You do not find it so in all cities where there are several establishments competing with one another, although competition in business does not necessarily need to make personal enemies.

O'MARA TO THE RESCUE.

ED. FLORISTS' REVIEW:—In common with the rest of your readers I am always interested, entertained, instructed and amused by the contributions from "W. S.," our own "Great Scott." Very seldom, indeed, is there anything in his writings to criticize or amend. But in his witty rejoinder, "Mr. Carmody's Humor," which appeared in your issue of September 3, is the following: "Irishmen, so numerous and prominent now, have been coming here only for the past sixty years. There were a few scattering ones before, but not enough to leave any mark on the national character." Now, surely Mr. Scott did not give much thought to the matter when he made that statement.

The Irish began emigrating to the Colonies as soon as they were formed, but the first great exodus took place when they were "assisted" out of Ireland by the late, but not lamented Mr. Oliver Cromwell. The commissioners appointed by him in 1652, to get rid of the native population in Ireland, did their work only too well. Bruodin estimated that over 100,000 souls were expatriated to the Colonies. Dr. Lingard estimated the number at 60,000. Prendergast states that the total number of Irish transported to the Colonies from 1651 to 1660 exceeded the total number of inhabitants at that period. The emigration did not stop there, but continued through succeeding reigns. The next great exodus took place from 1771 to 1773, mostly from the North of Ireland, owing to Agrarian troubles, the total number in these two years being estimated at 25,000. Spencer estimated the number at 17,350.

The total number of Irish in the United States in 1790, by birth and descent, is given as 1,141,920. That vast number must have left and did leave their mark on the national character. It would be tiresome to enumerate the men of the Irish race who took prominent parts in winning the freedom which we now enjoy. Twelve of them are signers of the Declaration of Independence. One was the "perpetual secretary" of Congress. Famous in the annals of the War of the Revolution are Sullivan, Wayne, Hand, Reed, Moylan, Morgan, Fitzgerald, Barry, Knox, Maxwell, Stark, Montgomery, Jasper, Stewart, Conway, Dooly and many others, all Irishmen or descendants of Irishmen. The rank and file of the Continental army was largely Irish. That fact was settled beyond dispute by the investigations of the committee of the House of Commons appointed to investigate the cause and conduct of the war. The traitor, Jos. Galloway, who was a delegate to the first Continental Congress was examined by that committee on June 16, 1779, and in answer to the question: "What were the troops in the service of Congress chiefly composed of? Were they natives of America or were the greatest part of them English, Scotch or Irish?" Galloway replied: "I can answer the question with precision. There were scarcely one-fourth natives of America, about one-half were Irish, the other fourth English and Scotch." Major General Robertson, testifying before the same committee said: "I remember General Lee telling me that half the rebel army was from Ireland." Lord Mountjoy, in the House of Commons, told the ministers: "You have lost America through the Irish." Even Froude admits the same general fact. As early as 1737 a Charitable Irish Society was founded in Boston. Washington was an honorary member of the "Friendly Sons of St. Patrick."

I might go on and recite much more showing that the Irish race was a factor in forming the government of this country, but am not writing a history. Sufficient has been said, I hope, to disabuse Brother Scott's mind of the delusion that hardly any Irish came here before the days of Tapscott and Castle Garden.

In the council and on the forum, as well as on the tented field and watery main, Irishmen were prominent in the conflict following "the shot heard round the world." As a matter of fact Sullivan's capture of Fort William and Mary was the first real act of war, long before Lexington; and, by the way, Major Barrett, of that immortal day, was of the Irish race.

Patrick Henry it was who boldly cast all petty subterfuge and suggestions of compromise to the winds and demanded liberty. When the first Continental Congress assembled and the issue was in doubt, his was the mind and his the tongue which fused the body into one mass for independence. Sam Adams, almost in despair of the result before Henry spoke, exultantly cried when he sat down that now the die was cast. When the infant republic was struggling with the royalist tendency which threatened to make it a weak imitation of monarchy it was Matthew Lyon, an Irishman born, who began the movement which ended with Jefferson's election and made of the republic a true democracy.

A few words more and I have done. In Saint Paul's church yard, New York City, the remains of three distinguished Irishmen are laid, over whose ashes a grateful country and admiring citizens have erected monuments, viz: Montgomery, Mac Nevin, Emmett. Speaking of the latter the late Abram S. Hewitt said: "Next to Washington and Lafayette I think that Emmett has exercised a wider influence on the formation of American character than any other man with whom our history is at all connected. His associates who found a refuge in this country were men of very remarkable elevation of character and exercised a powerful influence in the formation of a pure democracy."

I will not venture to indicate the source from which American wit has sprung, but am satisfied that if it is as stated by Brother Scott, then undoubtedly it has been clarified by and derives its pungency from the sons and daughters of Ireland.

SPARTA, WIS.

Death of Z. K. Jewett.

The announcement of the death of Mr. Jewett, which occurred at the hospital in Rochester, Minn., September 11, came with the force of a shock to the community, the hope for his recovery having been so strong. He was taken to the hospital in Rochester something over two weeks before, his ailment, affecting the intestines, having assumed a phase which it was thought would necessitate a critical surgical operation. He underwent a partial operation and rallied at once to so marked a degree that his certain recovery was looked for, and he was about to return home, when all at once his strength apparently failed and there was hardly time to notify his friends before the end came. He passed away peacefully and without pain.

Mr. Jewett was one of our best and most substantial citizens, and more than that, one so much identified with the life, the business and society of Sparta that hardly a resident of the city but feels his death as a personal loss. He was one of the older class of citizens, having come here in 1865. His birthplace was in Aurora, Portage County, Ohio, but most of his early life was passed in and around northern Illinois. He went to California in 1858, remaining about five years. Coming here, Mr. Jewett located on a farm in Lafayette at first, but subsequently, in company with his brother, A. H. Jewett, established a nursery. He purchased his brother's interest in 1873, and developed a large and growing business in nursery stock. His son, Arthur, and daughter, Miriam, came into the business, the former managing a branch, dealing in packing moss, a conspicuous feature, while extensive greenhouses were established in 1897 and developed a large business under charge of Miss Miriam Jewett. The Jewett nursery and greenhouses acquired a wide reputation, and enjoyed a large trade.

He was married in the spring of 1866 to Miss Eliza Judd, whose home was in Antioch, Ill. She survives him, together with Arthur J., son, and Misses Miriam and Maude, daughters. His brother, A. H. Jewett, resides at White Salmon, Wash., and a sister, Mrs. L. C. Morehouse, at San Leandro, Cal.

NEW YORK.

Institute Exhibition.

The seventy-second fair of the American Institute of New York began yesterday (Tuesday) afternoon, and will continue until 10 p. m. on Thursday in the Berkeley Lyceum building. The prize list includes flowers and ornamental plants, fruits and vegetables, farm crops and implements, and an aggregate amount of over $800 will be distributed in prizes, besides medals and certificates. This promises to be one of the best exhibitions the society has ever given. The entries are numerous and the opening day demonstrated an unusual public interest. The limited space of the Lyceum for exhibition purposes is again apparent, and the necessity for a horticultural hall in New York city becomes more and more evident every month. The grand room which will be tested this fall by the Chrysanthemum Society, will demonstrate to the satisfaction of all, I am confident, the necessity for such a building and the appreciation of a critical public.

The Market.

Following the summer temperature of a week ago came one of the greatest storms of recent years, almost local in its character, but strenuous to a damaging degree. Following this has come a period of New York autumnal glory, with sunny days and chilly mornings that will fill humanity with hope and ambition, and make its influence felt in improved quality of flowers and activity in the business that has been so long delayed. The supplies of cut flowers during the past week have been enormous, and there seems to be no end to the quantity. Everything is abundant and the surplus each day would supply almost any city in the country with a sufficiency for its regular requirements. Violets have recovered from the set-back of summer temperature, and there are now too many, even of greatly improved quality. Chrysanthemums grow in number and beauty daily. Before the end of the month the autumn queen will again be enthroned. Some fine Enchantress are in the market, and novelties must again be added to the weekly quotations.

Various Notes.

Langjahr's new store will open about October 1. He is refurnishing, painting and making necessary alterations, having had possession of the premises since last July.

Mallon's, in Brooklyn, under the superintendency of Louis Michel, is receiving its annual renewing and promises to look as good as any store in the city of churches in time for the fall opening next week. Lou has been summering at Fort Lee, and his genial employes have been at Brighton and Saratoga.

The primary elections made a busy scene at Bradshaw & Hartman's last week. This firm has a splendid lot of Boston ferns on exhibition, and intends to maintain a wholesale plant department this fall as usual.

Young & Nugent are making their big store spick and span with paint and electric lights, and J. K. Allen's annual house renewal is over, and enough white paint has been used to beautify the Flatiron building.

August Rhotert arrived yesterday from Europe on the Kaiser Wilhelm, and A. Dimmock floated in on the Umbria last Saturday.

Cassidy & Sons' greenhouses burned last week, with a loss of several thousand dollars, and Frank Miller, of De Kalb avenue, Brooklyn, had a fire in his store that ate up the profits of several Saturdays.

Enchantress carnations and Crowe-anum ferns at Raynor's last week, were much in evidence, the former reaching the top price for the new season.

The auction business began its season at Elliott's on Tuesday last, and now every Tuesday and Friday until the snow flies the voice of the auctioneer will be heard in the land. About a dozen of the wideawake retailers were present and picked up some palm bargains. The prices realized were very satisfactory, and among those who consigned their goods to the tender mercies of Mr. Elliott, I find the familiar names of Louis Schmutz, Siebrecht & Son, George Lorenz, Pankok & Schumacher, Will Siebrecht and Anton Schultheis.

A. Scollay has just completed the building of two houses for Hession, of Flatbush, two for Charles Weber, of Lynbrook, L. I., and his largest contract of the year, the conservatory at the private estate of millionaire George A. Sheldon.

Mackintosh has just installed a handsome 200-dollar electric sign over the doors of his new store, which gives it a very metropolitan appearance.

Bowe's new wagon is a beauty and in keeping with his growing business.

John H. Carroll, of Thorley's, has returned from his two and one-half months' stay at Atlantic Highlands, where with golf, swimming and other outdoor sports he has had a strenuous time, winning five out of six swimming races, and the silver cup in the golf tournament on July 4. He has some novelties up his sleeve for Christmas that will throw his trunks, chariots and automobiles of other years in the shade.

Julius Roehrs, Sr., who has spent the summer in Europe, returned last Saturday. During his absence J. R., Jr., has demonstrated his ability to conduct the immense establishment safely and enterprisingly. Eight large houses have been rebuilt, and a great increase in the orchid output established. Every variety of stock for florists' use is here in unlimited quantities.

The Cut Flower Exchange in the Coogan building is putting on some new clothes for the coming season, and now lacks only one of the century, having ninety-nine stand holders on its list. The life and hubbub of a busy morning there can be imagined.

Fred Atkins is looking remarkably well after his European trip, and his big stock of bulbs was being unloaded and repacked for shipment when I called. Three new houses, 30x135, have been completed this summer, and are stocked with large kentias, the stock of which in Europe, he tells me, is becoming depleted. The nursery department has not been forgotten and immense additions and importations are provided for. The big storm nearly precipitated a catastrophe, swaying the palm houses dangerously near to a complete collapse. But fortunately rapid bracing saved them, and the valuable stock they sheltered. Bobbink & Atkins have their own cypress tub factory, employing several hands, and finding a ready sale for all they can manufacture.

W. H. Gunther has enjoyed an added outing for a few weeks with his family at Highlands, N. Y. While there he took a trip among the violet growers around Poughkeepsie and found an epidemic of typhoid fever in the Bahret and Knauss families, eleven of the growers being down with the disease, and C. G. Knauss, unfortunately, one of its victims. These gentlemen have been shipping violets to Mr. Gunther since 1893. Then he could see his growers in that section in a day. Now it takes two weeks to visit all of them. All the wholesalers who have visited the violet section of the Hudson report the stock as never having looked better, and an enormous output is predicted.

William Sampson, the wholesale florist of the Coogan building, has decided to forego the strenuous responsibilities of the cut flower trade this season and has arranged to join the forces of Thomas Young, Jr. Mr. Sampson was with Mr. Young for nearly ten years, so that it will be like returning home to get back to the old duties again.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business during the past week was fair and there is considerably more life in the cut flower market than there has been for some time, still several leading retailers report that they find trade slow to open. Several large wedding orders have been booked by them for October. Some smaller wedding work was done the past week, but nothing elaborate in the way of decorations was noted. The call for light colored material has been quite good, and some days the market was entirely cleaned up on white stock, as there was a lively demand for funeral work.

Last week there came a cold snap, which necessitated firing at night, and stock shortened up considerably. White roses became very scarce the latter part of the week, although in colored roses there were enough for the demand. Bridesmaids are of better color since the cool weather began, but some mildew is noticed on them. Meteors are showing better wood and color. The top price for good stock is about $5 per 100, and $3 for the second grade. Quite a lot of Beauties are coming in and are of good quality, with longer stems. The demand for these is good, the best always selling well at any time. The choicest bring $3, and from that they grade down to 75 cents per dozen. Carnations are improving every day, with fancies still very scarce. There is plenty of outdoor stock coming in, which is very small and sells slowly. Most of our growers are not cutting much yet from their housed stock. The best sell at $1.50 to $2, and the outdoor stock at 50 cents per 100. No chrysanthemum blooms are in, but some are promised in a week or ten days. A few violets have been seen, but no regular shipments are as yet noted. Lily of the valley continues good and the demand is fair at $4 per 100. Very little outdoor stuff is coming in. Hydrangeas and asters are good; dahlias are few and poor, and tuberose stalks are about the only good outdoor stock that comes in at present. The green market is in good condition, plenty of everything to be had at the usual prices.

Various Notes.

The members of the Florists' Club will please take notice that owing to the next regular meeting of the club falling on October 8, big Thursday of fair week, it has been decided to hold the meeting a week later, which will be Thursday afternoon, October 15, at 2 o'clock, in Odd Fellows' building.

Twenty-five years ago last Thursday the St. Louis Floral and Horticultural Society was organized, from which sprang the present St. Louis Florists' Club. Among the most prominent of the organizers at that time were the Hon. Henry Shaw, Carew Sanders, E. A. Michel, Eli Foster, J. M. Jordon, Charles M. Ellerd, Dr. Enno Sanders, John J. O'Fallon, Dr. Louis Boisligniere, Palus Gast, Charles Cannon, A. S. Mermod, James E. Yeatman, Norman J. Coleman and others. Most of these have passed beyond, and the one left, who is now a member of the St. Louis Florists' Club, Carew Sanders, is at the present time enjoying the best of health, having just returned from a month's pleasure trip with his wife through Colorado and Kansas.

R. H. Walker called on the trade last week, representing the McCray Refrigerator Co. Mr. Walker says that their sales have been big from their advertisement in the REVIEW.

F. W. Maas, of the Plant Seed Co., and Adolph Corneli, of the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co., have returned from their trips to Chicago. Both firms are busy with bulb orders.

Rudolph Windt, son of J. F. Windt, the Bayard avenue florist, will leave this week for New York to accept a position in one of the large establishments in that city. Mr. Windt is an energetic young man and a willing worker. The firm which secures his services will not regret it.

J. L. Irwin, who has charge of the Philippine Island World's Fair exhibit, will house his orchids and palms for the winter at Old Orchard in the house owned by the Michel Plant and Bulb Co.

The Bentzen Floral Co., on Marcus avenue, reports that it is shipping a great many plants through its advertisement in the REVIEW. A fine lot of pot chrysanthemums at this place will soon be ready for the market.

The St. Louis Fair Association will open its annual fair on Monday, October 5. Colonel John Ayres, who is superintendent of Floral Hall, says that the usual prizes will be given for plants, designs and cut flowers, and that quite a few entries have already been made by the local florists. Our friend, Max Herzog, has again been selected as judge of the exhibition.

William Lamar is still keeper of Forest Park and it looks as if he will remain. Mr. Lamar is a Republican, working under a Democratic administration, and is perhaps too good a man to dispense with, and is kept to help out those who know very little about running a big park like Forest.

The Cannon Floral Co., at Webster Groves, is sending in some good roses and carnations. John Cannon reports that he is much pleased with the outlook for the coming season.

Ostertag Bros. furnished the floral decorations at the opening of the Missouri Athletic Club on last Saturday. The decorations were elaborate and much admired. Henry Ostertag reports trade good in that line.

Charlie Ford, who represents A. Herrmann, of New York, is in town booking supply orders and reports trade very satisfactory in his line.

Bowling.

The Bowling Club had a delightful night for bowling. Three games were rolled and most of the scores were good. Carl Beyer was high man, followed by Beneke and Kuehn, all being in the 500-class. The scores:

Player—	1st.	2d.	3d.	Av.
Carl Beyer	180	156	200	178
J. J. Beneke	171	179	178	176
C. A. Kuehn	190	163	162	171
F. C. Weber	114	185	163	154
Theo. Miller	150	184	141	158
F. M. Ellis	147	146	148	147
Will Adels	141	144	141	142
John Young	125	120	168	137
Fred Meinhardt	121	126	131	126

The ladies of the bowlers will roll their first games on Wednesday afternoon at the Blue Ribbon alleys, Jefferson avenue and Locust street, and every Wednesday hereafter at 2 o'clock will find the ladies bowling.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business continues to improve in all branches of our great industry. The weather has at last been kind, it really owes us something, bringing in flowers of a higher grade, which brought advanced prices. This is especially noticeable in Beauties, Maids and carnations—Queen Louise and Enchantress ideal. Jacob Becker's new pink rose has made its appearance. The first single violets are in, but are hardly at home yet. Dahlias are arriving in immense quantities. W. P. Peacock sent in 5,000 to S. S. Pen-nock on Monday. The demand for them is excellent. Valley goes rather slowly now; it should be different next week. W. J. Baker is receiving some nice yellow daisies. Robert Craig & Son are bringing some nice Harrisii lilies to the Flower Market. Greens are selling better.

East vs. West.

A keen rivalry has sprung up between the two great centers in the wholesale cut flower business divided by Broad street. For a long time the western district has held almost undisputed sway, but lately the eastern has been gaining in strength, while today the leading wholesalers in that section claim that the business center has shifted and that the volume of trade done there is even greater than on the other side. It is stated that P. J. Hauswith, of Chicago, who visited all the principal wholesalers last Saturday, said there was more business done about Twelfth street than near Sixteenth. Whether this is a fact is difficult to ascertain. At any rate, competition is the life of trade and both sides will do their very best to keep up healthy rivalry.

Fifteen years ago W. P. Peacock made up his mind that success was most likely to reward the efforts of a specialist. The dahlia had not been specialized up to that time. Situation, soil and the beautiful variety Nymphæa, decided him in favor of that flower. He devotes his entire attention to dahlias and has persevered steadily, aiming to produce the best. The advance has been marvelous and today his dahlias are known all over the country for their high quality. The principal business is in the roots. Six thousand dollars worth was sold in one month, March. Plants grown from cuttings and seed are also sold in quantity, as well as the cut flowers. Two hundred thousand seedlings were grown this year, but very few prove better than standard varieties. In hybridizing a double cross is always made, contrary to the method employed by carnationists. The erect flowers of the cactus varieties, and the French collarettes seemed to me especially beautiful. An interesting point is that the tops mixed with commercial fertilizers are plowed under each season, so that manure is only needed every third year. Mr. Peacock's skill and integrity have won him the confidence of all our leading seedsmen, who send to him their varieties to test with certainty that everything possible will be done to develop them and that their confidence will be guarded. A force of from twenty to forty men is at work throughout the year, and from their intelligent efforts Mr. Peacock gains excellent support.

Various Notes.

Edward Reid is just returned from the west.

C. A. Dunn spent several days this week in northern New Jersey.

Stephen Mortensen, of South Hampton, is sending in very fine Brides and Maids to S. S. Pennock.

G. C. Watson's address on peonies for the Germantown Horticultural Society last week was full of interest. He told his hearers that fifty-four of the best varieties had been planted, correctly labeled, in Fairmount park, and that he hoped in time that the tangle of names would be straightened. He was followed by Edwin Lonsdale, who gave some cultural ideas. Mr. Lonsdale expressed himself greatly pleased with the size and appreciativeness of his audience.

Last week's dahlia show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was well attended. Besides the magnificent display of dahlias, the finest ever seen in this city, there was a perennial exhibit of seventy varieties from the Riverton nurseries of Henry A. Dreer.

A. Farenwald, of Hillside, will ship half his stock of Beauties and Liberties to Leo Niessen. The balance goes to Young & Nugent, of New York. As Mr. Farenwald has doubled his plant this season, this city will see as many of his roses this season as in the past.

Harry Schröyer, of Lancaster, was in town last week. His buyer followed.

Charles E. Meehan is greatly encouraged by the success of the Flower Market. The growers are supporting it in fine style, and many of the best buyers come there each morning.

Edward Fancourt, who has charge of S. S. Pennock's ribbons and novelties, states that their business is unusually heavy this fall. He has some beautiful violet pins, hampers, and some new cat-tleya and Meteor ribbons.

Leo Niessen has reason to be proud of the roses he has secured for the coming season. With Beauties from George Burton, Liberties and Beauties from Farenwald and Brides and Maids from Andre and Bevis, he will have a collection hard to equal.

William Wunder is cutting some fine Enchantress.

Edwin Lonsdale recently spent a week in the south and west. He visited fifteen states, returning home well satisfied with good old Pennsylvania.

It is charged that the horticultural press of this city is becoming a sort of parish register or announcement column, chronicling the arrival of "the people one ought to know." As W. P. Craig cleverly puts it, of course this is indignantly denied by Robert Kift, by David Rust and by PHIL.

MADISON, N. J.

Current Events.

The Pierson Sefton Co. commenced this week the erection of a range of green-houses for Dr. L. D. Ward, of this place, which will, when the plan is finished, give a complete series of model houses for private use. They include rose, carnation, fruit and general houses, grape-ries and melon houses, and are to be all of the new galvanized "U" bar construction. Dr. Ward is one of our millionaire residents and has an estate of several thousand acres which he is constantly adding to. His gardener, W. F. Ross, has a fine batch of chrysanthemums which he is hoping to flower in the new houses. A series of lakes and water-courses form a prominent feature of the landscape effects on this estate.

I called on J. R. Mitchell the other day and found him busy top dressing his benches of carried over roses. He is a firm believer in two-year-old plants, and certainly his record as an exhibitor and grower of the highest grade of tea roses entitles him to speak with authority. A bench of Ivory was noticed here, and while on this subject I may mention that Beauties, Brides and Maids are almost the only roses grown in this vicinity. The novelties have got to prove their worth in a very decided manner before the Madison grower will take them up. Some few growers have a house of Meteor, and at the Holmes establishment, where Benjamin Gary holds the fort, one may see some very fine stock of President Carnot and Bon Silene, but as a general thing one sees only Brides and Maids, with the large growers running mostly to Beauties.

One not acquainted with the town can hardly realize the magnitude of the rose growing business here. There are some sixty different growers, all shipping from the Madison depot to New York, and the scene on a winter's morning is an animated one. Holiday times the stock is shipped by the carload and now there is a wagon express that runs down by road.

One cannot see half the establishments in this vicinity unless he comes here to stay a few days, and takes a horse and lots of time. The fertilizer drummers and members of that fraternity stay for a week. VISITOR.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The market has taken a brace and lively times have been the rule. The cool weather at the end of last week, which reduced supplies, may have had something to do with the skirmishing for stock, but since summer returned demand has continued brisk. Monday was a big shipping day and on Tuesday the market felt the influence of the Jewish New Year.

There are some good Beauties coming in, fair stem and large bud, but a little bleached. Brides are fair, but Maids off color. Meteor is hard to get in quantity, and only a few Liberty are seen. Golden Gate is the most easily obtainable rose, but with continued bright days the cuts will increase all along the line. Carnations are already coming in heavily, and of fair quality for the season, but the demand this week has been equal to all receipts. Asters are practically out of it. A few chrysanthemums are seen, and a small box of violets now and then. There is a brisk call for green goods.

To Rejuvenate the Club.

At a meeting last Thursday evening a report was made of the financial end of the S. A. F. entertainment. Approximately $1,500 was raised and there will be a rebate of about one-third. Subsequently the matter of the status of the Florists' Club and Horticultural Society was discussed at length, the unanimous opinion being that it would be a misfortune to the craft should the autumn exhibition cease to be an annual event. It was agreed that the only way to insure the continuity of our shows is to have at least one live society to keep the trade interest up and it was decided to place the matter in the hands of a committee of seven of the more than twenty present, to report at a special meeting of the Florists' Club. The supper table around which the discussion was held was decorated with some fine blooms of W. N. Rudd's light pink carnation, Phyllis.

The committee met at the Union on Monday evening and it was decided to call a special meeting of the Florists' Club for Friday evening at the Sherman House, and a large attendance is pledged. All members and those who have the good of the trade at heart should be on hand.

The first regular meeting of the club for election of officers is on Wednesday, October 14.

Various Notes.

Among those who are disappointed that the Kansas City flower show has been abandoned and that the Chicago exhibition cannot be held in the event of failure to find a hall speedily, none are more seriously affected than H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, and his foreman, C. W. Johnson. Not only have they a fine lot of single-stemmed blooms in prospect, but one house, 22x150, has been devoted to specimen plants, and better could hardly be asked. John Reardon, too, gardener to Martin A. Ryerson, has an unusually good lot of plants, or had until he stopped training them, when he learned the status of affairs. The old Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co. building, corner Wabash and Lake, is suggested for the show.

The express companies have united in serving notice on the wholesalers that there will be no "pick-up" after six p. m. Out of town buyers will therefore take notice, and get the orders in early enough to give time to get the boxes packed before the last call of the wagons.

J. Mendel has opened a store at 422 W. Eighteenth street.

A new store at Fifty-first and Woodlawn has been opened by a Fleischman who has no connection with the State street firm.

The property at the corner of Madison and Wabash, now occupied in part by the Anderson Floral Co., has been leased to Otto Young for a term of years at a price which makes it the most valuable lot on Wabash avenue. A big office building will be put up next summer.

Paul Kopanka, of the Chicago Carnation Co., has received word of the safety of a brother long thought to be dead.

George Reinberg reports a constantly increasing demand for carnation plants.

James Hartshorne rode the Elks' goat at Joliet a couple of weeks ago, and upon dismounting found a mere scratch on his foot, but it kept him in bed for a week with a touch of blood poisoning.

P. J. Foley is figuring on getting some time to "mix" with the trade this winter, for he has his brother, J. P. Foley, here from Seattle to take charge of the office end of the business. He is an old Chicago newspaper man.

B. E. Gage, of the Peterson Nursery, is out after a two weeks' siege of the grippe.

Swain Nelson & Sons are building a new greenhouse at their west side nursery.

Visitors: Simon Dumser and Miss Dumser, Elgin, Ill.; T. L. Metcalfe, Hopkinsville, Ky.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Cold weather arrived with a vengeance during the past week, the temperature dropping over 30 degrees in one night. It was not quite cold enough for frost, but there was a decided shortening in stock. This was noticed in all lines, but in asters the supply seemed to be cut off between two days. The demand for them, which had been very good right along, did not diminish, so there was a decided rush for what few were to be had. The supply of American Beauties also went down and the quality of the stock was also affected. Brides are not sufficient to fill orders. Maids are more plentiful and some of them are very good. Ivory also is good and the short-stemmed ones sell well for funeral work.

Carnations are coming better every day. The floral world would be a sorry one without this flower and its return after the summer months meets a hearty reception. Some blooms of Enchantress are very good and there is no trouble in disposing of them. Many other varieties are showing up well and soon will be up to the standard. Some cosmos is coming in now and it sells well. The market is still well supplied with green goods.

Table Decorations.

On September 17 the contest for the prizes offered by the Fall Festival Association for the best decorated table was decided. This brought forth the finest examples of the florists' art in this kind of work ever seen in this city. The tables were truly beautiful, and the judges, five society ladies of this city, had all they could do to decide which was the best. As everything on the table was taken into consideration in judging, there was some beautiful cut-glass, silver and china shown. The table winning the first prize of $200 was decorated by Hardesty & Co. American Beauty roses and valley were the flowers used. The winner of the second prize, $150, Julius Baer, showed a table of very pretty design. Kaiserin roses and valley were the flowers used. The green and white made a very pretty effect, and the detail work was well done. Miss Edith Kyrk and Charles Gardner won the third prize of $100. Their table was made up of plants only and was a model in that class of table decorations. The plants used were adiantums, pandanus, begonias and crotons, with favors of valley.

There were seven entries competing for the prizes, and those who, according to the judges, failed to win, still received much praise from the public and their exhibits were truly worthy of it.

Notes.

Jos. R. Goldman, who has been spending the summer months in touring California, is at home again. He is in much better health and was well pleased with what he saw.

Visitors during the past week, most of whom came to see the table decorations at the fall festival, were, Louis Elsass, of Chillicothe, O.; Geo. Wiegand, Indianapolis, Ind.; Miss White, Lexington, Ky.; H. H. Ritter, Dayton, O.; Theo. Bock, Hamilton, O. C. J. OHMER.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The reports from different retailers indicate that fall trade has opened up quite satisfactorily and that the society calendar shows many social affairs and weddings for the next two months. This looks very encouraging for a good season's business. Growers in this vicinity say the stocks of roses, carnations and Beauties were never so good. A sufficient supply of carnations is now arriving; the color of the flowers is almost perfect and the blooms are remarkably good for so early. Most all the newer sorts of carnations planted this season are doing finely. Asters are no more a glut and in about one more week they will be done for this season. Gladioli are still numerous and sell slowly. Some dahlias are arriving but meet with poor sale.

Various Notes.

At the Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Company's place at Bakerstown the Beauties, Maids and Brides are looking good and show promise of an abundant crop in the near future. Some space is also devoted to that oldtime rose, Cusin. With them last year this rose produced large cuts of first-class flowers. They are growing the following varieties of carnations: Boston Market, Queen Louise, Flora Hill, Lawson, Hector, Nelson, Joost, Goethe, Adonis, Lillian Pond, Morning Glory, Genevieve Lord, Enchantress and Peru. This place is the largest in this section and the best constructed. They consign the cut to the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Company.

The first chrysanthemums reached this market September 17. Marquis de Montmort was the variety, shipped by Henry Eichholz, of Waynesboro. F. Burki is now shipping the Cut Flower Company some good Fitzwygram.

B. L. Elliott, of Cheswick, is branching out as a dahlia grower. He is cutting some good blooms of this flower.

Ernest Fisher has opened a flower stand in the Pittsburgh Market.

Frank Faulk has started a new enterprise in the Allegheny Market. He is manufacturing a very good red immortelle bell.

Breitenbaugh & Brother recently made a floral freight car, six feet long, two feet wide and three feet high. The work was well executed.

Gustav & J. W. Ludwig are displaying a very fine pink dahlia which they have named Ludwigana.

Henry Blind acted as "our host" last Tuesday. The affair was a "corn roast" and about thirty florists and their wives enjoyed the fresh, sweet green corn.

E. C. Ludwig entertained his friends at his home September 17. The affair was a stag card party and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

Mrs. E. A. Williams is on a business trip to Boston.

Recent visitors included J. W. Glenn, Kittanning; T. Malbrony, Johnstown; H. G. Flemming, Fairmount, W. Va.; Max Schreiber, McDonald; Edward Reid, Philadelphia. Hoo-Hoo.

THE INDIAN PIPE.

I forward herewith a plant I found growing near Detroit, which no one can identify. There were a number of clumps in a damp, shady place, the stalks growing directly out of the ground.

B. H. G.

The plant forwarded is a fine specimen of the Indian pipe, Monotropa uniflora L., the type of the fourth sub-order of the Ericaceae, a singular little plant which is always something of a pleasant surprise to the collecting botanist. Its pure white color and graceful shape and its waxy texture at once distinguish it from the rest of nature's handiwork. The Indian pipe is a low, fleshy plant which grows parasitically on the roots of the trees under which it is found, in this region mostly under lindens, in deep, rich woods. The stems bear scales instead of leaves, and spring from a dense mass of gristly-looking, matted fibrous rootlets. Each stem bears one pendant flower turned to one side, making, with the waxy stem, a pretty model of a tiny calumet, or pipe of peace. This strange plant has, besides, a host of popular names. It is called American ice plant, bird's nest, fit-plant, one flowered wax plant, corpse plant, etc. The Indian pipe, being a root parasite, can hardly be transplanted, and the chance of growing it from seed is exceedingly small.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market

In speaking today to one of our most prominent Sutter street florists, he complained that never since he had been in business had good flowers been so scarce as they have been during the past four months. He called my attention to his windows, in which were displayed a half dozen jars of carnations and about the same number of roses, and surely they were a sorry lot. "Now that the asters are gone and the chrysanthemums will not be plentiful for several weeks," said he, "we are especially unfortunate. They are the best to be had and there is not a larger display seen anywhere in town, but there seems to be something the matter with the growers for the entire summer and I cannot get any good stuff." I found that all our retailers are of the same mind and many of them claim they have been utterly unable to fill the orders sent them by their regular patrons. It is a fact that good roses are impossible to get at any price. They are either covered with mildew, are weak and puny or they are off-color entirely. I have not seen any fancy Beauties for months and Bridesmaid and Testout are of very poor quality also. With carnations we have had only fair flowers to offer and some of our swellest florists have had to fill up their windows week after week with asters and other common truck to make any showing whatever. I am in hopes that with the cooler weather that will be here shortly I will be able to say something more pleasant about the quality of flowers grown in and around San Francisco.

Notes

P. McDonnell, of Alden; A. Galloway, of Fruitvale, and Wm. Bennett, of Tamescal, are all building carnation houses at present.

One of the largest and most elaborate wedding decorations ever displayed in California was that at the Hearst county seat at Pleasanton. The occasion was the marriage of Miss Apperson, a cousin of W. R. Hearst. The Misses Worn were given carte blanche regarding material to be used and the verdict of every one was that it was the largest and most artistic house decoration ever seen in this neighborhood.

Sievers & Boland have been extremely busy for the last two days. They have made almost all the designs for the funeral of I. Schwartz, the Gautemalan millionaire, who was buried here. This firm arranged a pall of orchids and ferns that was about the finest piece of work I have seen. G.

GREENFIELD, O.—Robert Buck, who within the past year has built up a successful florists' business here, was married recently to Mrs. Lizzie Ensworth, matron of the Soldiers' Orphans' Home, Xenia, O., where Mr. Buck was formerly employed.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres. F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

THE American elm, in sizes from 4-inch up, is a scarce article.

STOCKS of flowering shrubs are low in the East, because of large demand last spring and the poor growing season.

A CALL is out for a meeting of Illinois cemetery officials at Springfield, September 29, to form an association for mutual benefit.

WARREN H. MANNING, the Boston landscape architect, has been visiting Minneapolis, Milwaukee and other western points where he is doing work.

THE Hawks Nursery Co., of Rochester, N. Y., has filed articles of incorporation to do business in Wisconsin with $5,000 capital. T. J. Ferguson, of Wauwatosa, is vice-president of the company.

THE Jonesboro, Ark., Nursery and Plantation Co. has filed articles of incorporation, capital stock $2,500. J. W. Ligon is president, P. S. Hudspeth, vice-president, and C. M. Galeener, secretary and treasurer.

CHARLES J. DAWSON, of the Eastern Nurseries, Jamaica Plain, Mass., died quite suddenly September 15, aged 32 years. He was the son of Jackson Dawson, of Arnold Arboretum, and was very popular with the trade.

THE late Z. K. Jewett, of Sparta, Wis., was a charter member of the American Association of Nurserymen, Florists and Seedsmen, when all branches of the trade were in one society, and attended every meeting of the nurserymen's organization except in 1901 and 1903.

AT the recent New York State Fair at Syracuse Prof. F. A. Waugh, of Amherst, Mass., awarded first premium, $300 for best and largest display of fruits to the New York State Fruit Growers' Association, although the Western New York Horticultural Society, winning second premium of $200, had 2,300 plants in its exhibit.

SCALE ON CYCAS AND KENTIAS.

Kindly let me know the safest, quickest and most effective remedy for scale on cycas revoluta and Kentia Belmoreana. H. C. C.

The safest, quickest and most effectual remedy for scale on these plants is to sponge them carefully with a solution of whale-oil soap, or tobacco soap, and if the leaves are hard and thoroughly developed the solution may be quite strong, for example, two to three ounces of the soap to a gallon of water, but I would not use so strong a dose on a young kentia leaf. The cycas is subject to attacks of the large brown scale, and in that case a careful sponging would effect at least a temporary cure, but if the plant in question is badly affected with white scale it might be better to cut off the fronds than to attempt to clean them, for this pest would leave the foliage badly spotted after cleaning. W. H. TAPLIN.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 23d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

VISITED ST. LOUIS: W. H. Crossland, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis.

ROGERS BROS., Alpena, Mich., have ninety hands at work in their sorting room.

F. BARTELDES, Lawrence, Kan., will be in Chicago September 26 for the centennial celebration.

THE L. L. Olds Seed Co., Clinton, Wis., has been incorporated with $50,000 authorized capital stock.

IF "time is money" the onion set grower who is waiting for the "thick necks" to bottom will probably get rich.

THE Haven Seed Co., South Haven, Mich., reports that hail, flooding rains and blights have caused very serious damage to the seed crops.

It is reported that the D. M. Ferry Seed Co., Detroit, took 151.36 bushels of American Wonder peas off of one four-acre tract at Charlevoix, Mich.

VISITED CHICAGO: George Tilton, of A. Tilton & Sons, Cleveland; J. G. Peppard, Kansas City, on his way to New York; J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.

THE freeze at Rocky Ford, Colo., which cut the melon crop there, is likely to add to the seed supply of that variety. Frosted melons do not stand shipping, but they may make seed.

A. RINGIER returned to Chicago this week from a trip to Colorado. He reports business west in a very healthy condition. W. W. Barnard is on an eastern trip for two weeks.

THE fine weather of the present week will add something to the bean crop. It will also help late varieties of sweet corn, and may change the situation on other seed staples which have not been promising of late.

RECENT reports from Utah point to a more liberal supply of alfalfa. The extremely high prices this seed commanded during last spring causes farmers to expect good figures this fall and indications are that they will get them.

It is very late, but in some places the harvest of onion sets is not yet completed. Up to the middle of the past week quite an acreage was still unharvested at Chicago. Unfavorable weather is responsible in part for the delay, but the variation in the ripening of the sets is the main reason for the lateness of the harvest.

ON September 20 the Western Seedsmen's Association issued its crop bulletin No. 2, which gives a general idea of the crop situation, and the association's judgment as to what seed values are likely to be the coming season. It puts sweet corn and cucumber prices high, and states that the deliveries on peas will probably fall ten per cent lower than former estimate on earlies and from fifteen to twenty-five per cent lower on late varieties. In the general summing up the bulletin advises that dwarf peas, wax beans, late sweet corn, cucumbers and other vine seeds, should be advanced and prices held firm.

WORD was received at Chicago September 23 that the John H. Allen Company's plant at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., has been destroyed by fire. No particulars are at hand, but the loss, if total, may have considerable effect on the prices of peas, as quite a quantity of Alaskas and early wrinkled sorts had been taken in by them, and it is hardly likely that any large shipments had been made at this date.

THE cucumber situation has not improved. Present reports from Nebraska, New York and Michigan make things look worse. Fields that two weeks ago gave promise of fairly good yields are now in such shape as to be almost failures. The reports at hand cover nearly all the growing sections, and indicate that the crop generally will be as short as last year. With little or no surplus carried over, the proposition is serious.

FRANK T. EMERSON, Waterloo, Neb., writes September 18: "We beg to report having experienced a rather severe frost throughout the vine seed growing section of Nebraska the night of September 15. We were in hopes the frost would hold off until at least October 1, thereby allowing a great many small, undeveloped fruits on the vines to become matured for seed purposes, but the frost has checked all growth of small fruit and it looks to us as though the general crop will be much shorter than heretofore estimated, as in making estimates we have figured on the most favorable season possible. At the present moment our estimates are all out of line and it will be impossible to form anything like a correct idea until we complete another tour of inspection. The early varieties of seed field and sweet corn were practically out of danger from frost, but second early and late varieties were in a great many instances hard hit. We cannot say until time has demonstrated the matter how much these crops have been damaged. A great deal will depend upon the balance of the season. If we have a number of heavy frosts in the near future, quite a large percentage of the late varieties will be injured beyond redemption."

VALUES OF SEEDS.

The New York Commercial of September 16 says: "Judge Waite, of the Board of United States General Appraisers, gave a hearing today to representatives of the D. M. Ferry Seed Co., of Detroit, at which testimony was submitted purporting to show the values upon which duties should be estimated by the customs authorities. The Ferry Co. imports large quantities of seeds, and the collector at Detroit levied duties on the basis of the contract price on seeds shipped from France, though the market price dropped before the time of shipment. The questions at issue are of much interest to the seed-importing trade, and the outcome of the controversy is being watched by importers. Judge Waite took considerable testimony in the case last spring and, with the additional testimony supplied today, it is hoped a decision may be made soon. It is reported that the Ferry protest involves customs duties aggregating $250,000."

BOILER SCALE.

In the FLORISTS' REVIEW I see some one wants to know how to remove scale from a boiler, so I take pleasure in writing this note. My husband has for twenty-five years been used to locomotive and stationary boilers. He says if the boiler is small use half a pound of powdered slippery elm bark; if a large one use a pound. Wet the powder over night, stir it up in the morning, pour in the boiler. Run it a week or ten days, then blow it out and the boiler will be clean. He has often practiced this himself and never knew it to fail. No pounding or scraping is needed.

RANDOM NOTES.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y.—J. G. Tully is around after a long siege of illness following a strained leg, which happened just at the busiest time. Mrs. Barnes reports a good season and has prepared a well-grown stock in anticipation of a first-class fall business.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.—Messrs. Roney and Worden returned from the convention right side up, and well pleased with what they saw at the cities by Lake Michigan. Mr. Worden has a retail business and learned some new ideas for that branch. Mr. Roney saw much that interested him in the mammoth establishments adjacent to the western metropolis, but was not convinced that stock of higher quality was grown than can be produced right here, and there is no reason why there should be, for more favorable conditions than we have would be hard to get. Stock at the Lake View Rose Gardens is in excellent shape. Palms have much improved of late, and are giving entire satisfaction. Walter Mott has been visiting the craft in Canada and Buffalo. I understand the bulb business has been good with his firm and that his second year showed a flattering increase in business over the preceding one.

BRADFORD, PA.—G. L. Graham has been busy during the summer, rebuilding a range of houses, which will give him a handy, complete plant. He grows entirely for a first-class retail trade, which is handled at his down-town store by his genial manager, Mr. Valentine. W. C. Rockwell intended giving up the retail branch and going into wholesale entirely, but the vexed question of reliable help has made him change his plans. He has a handsome store, ably managed by his wife, a most pleasant lady. Will Graham and wife, of Binghamton, were visiting G. L. Graham at the time of my call. They reported a good season.

OLEAN, N. Y.—D. R. Herron is making preparations for a busy season; stock is in excellent shape; considerable wholesale business is done. Llewellyn & Son are growing roses for the first time and have a promising stock. In fact, many of these small concerns can give the big folk pointers when it comes to growing fine stock. Mrs. F. H. Johnson has one of the neatest places possible. Her business embraces the cream of the trade. I was shown a fine specimen of lemon and sampled a cooling drink flavored with the fruit. It was delicious and fully appreciated with the thermometer at 90 degrees in the shade. We have had a few days of real hot weather, grand for the corn, but not just what the florist is looking for just now.

HORNELLSVILLE, N. Y.—W. A. Wettlin is away for a brief spell, exploring the wilds of Canada. His stock looks well and at the time of my visit everyone was busy rushing out a big order for funeral work.

CORNING, N. Y.—A. H. Woepfel is finishing a new place which will be the most complete plant in the section. It is a Lord & Burnham construction, five houses, each 20x100 feet, with frontage of 100 feet. Houses run north and south with offices about twenty-five feet square in the northwest corner. The cement cellar beneath will afford excellent cold storage. A work shed runs through the rear of the houses, with ample storage for coal near the boiler. Four acres of fine, loamy land adjoins, located directly opposite one of the largest cemeteries, with a second close by. The location is an excellent one and Mr. Woepel feels justly proud of this, his latest venture. The old plant will be kept to grow green goods for the present. M.

VARIETY OF FERN.

I send a fern frond and would like the name of the variety! G. H. M.

The fern in question is Nephrolepis rufescens tripinnatifida, a very beautiful fern that has been in cultivation for twenty years or more. The fronds of this fern are divided in a manner slightly resembling those of the Pierson fern, but the stems of N. rufescens tripinnatifida are more woolly than those of the above, and it is probable that the Pierson fern is somewhat more hardy. This is, however, a valuable fern, and worthy of more extended cultivation.

W. H. TAPLIN.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The first annual fall show of the New Bedford Horticultural Society was held September 17 and 18 at the City Hall. There were several groups of plants arranged for effect, these in the center of the hall, and along the sides were the tables of cut flowers, principally dahlias, H. F. Burt, of Taunton, winning most of the firsts, but losing on general display to J. K. Alexander, of East Bridgewater. S. S. Peckham had the best roses, heliotropes and geraniums; W. A. Johnson was first for groups of eighty feet, A. H. Jahn second. R. H. Woodhouse was first for groups covering forty feet. The amateurs contributed largely to the exhibits and success of the show. Arthur Cowee brought a first-class lot of gladioli from Berlin, N. Y. Nephrolepis Piersoni, in the group of J. H. Garthley, gardener to H. H. Rogers, was given a certificate of merit. The judges were John Farquhar, of Boston, and William Winters, of Mansfield.

HUNTINGTON, L. I.—Wm. O'Hara is cutting some very good Kaiserin roses.

ORCHIDS AT ST. PAUL.

Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann, of St. Paul, is an amateur orchid collector who is fast drifting into the commercial end of the industry, having built up a larger stock than is desirable for merely enthusiastic reasons. At the time of my last visit he was potting a late importation of cattleyas from Brazil. A collection of phalaenopsis brought from the Philippines two years ago is said to be the largest in the United States, if not in the world. For a period of ten years and more he has been collecting rare varieties from all quarters of the globe, sparing neither time nor expense to secure the best and rarest. Hybridizing is carried on in a systematic manner, a correct record being kept of the date of fertilizing, the parent plants, the date the seed matures, the date it germinates, etc. If one out of fifty experiments along this line produces a promising variety he feels well repaid for his work. As it takes from six to eighteen months for the seed pod to develop and mature, and the same length of time for the seed to germinate after sowing, and the plant is two years old or older before blooming it is readily seen that the work is slow.

Dr. Schiffmann is very enthusiastic over his "pets," as he considers them, and in time hopes to have the finest collection in the world. Mr. Wharton, an English grower of wide experience, has charge of the plants, and rarely has a failure. Each year the weeding out process at this place puts a lot of good commercial varieties on the market at moderate prices. If an importation of 1,000 plants this year contains ten plants of an improved type the proprietor feels well repaid for his effort. X. Y. Z.

A SIGN THAT BRINGS BUSINESS.

The following is an extract from the Chicago Inter-Ocean of September 12:

In these days, when every one who can travels, when the wealthy Americans go to Europe to be married, just as the poorer Chicagoans go to St. Joseph, Mich., the merchants who furnish the matrimonial frills have found a way to extend their business even across the sea.

"Flowers delivered by telegraph in any part of Europe." Is a sign in a State street florist's window. And it is a sign that brings business. At a recent London wedding, in which a Chicagoan figured as one of the principals, a large box of flowers was received from several "friends at home." The flowers were delivered by a London florist as the result of an order called by the Chicago florist.

If a Chicagoan wishes to send a floral token to any social fete, to a son graduating from a German university, or to a funeral being held in Italy, all he has to do is to go to the florist in Chicago, pay for the bouquet and the cablegram, and before he can get back to his home on the North Side or in Evanston the flowers have been delivered on the other side of the Atlantic.

ST. PAUL.

Bright weather has succeeded rain and frost and the flowers are putting on renewed life and energy, and making up for lost time. Outside stock is about all gone. Roses are becoming more abundant and of better quality. A few carnations are being cut, and the first Fitzwygram mums were seen the past week. As usual, they sold very readily.

Firing has been a necessity, while mildew and black spot are prevalent.

L. L. May & Co.'s greenhouses are looking especially fine and in good shape at this time. All of the older houses have been renovated and repaired, while the entire range has been repainted inside and out. Beauties are in crop now. Liberties are old plants, which have sent up a very strong new growth. As grown here this is certainly a peerless variety. The new Ivory seems to verify all the good words said in its favor. The growth is strong, while its blooming qualities are just as good as the old Golden Gate. The carnations are strong and thrifty, though, but very few are showing bloom. Enchantress is the strongest growing variety and promises to sustain the reputation it made last season. It has always been a favorite on this market. One house is devoted to Adiantum cuneatum and kindred sorts. Other houses are devoted to the Boston fern and its improved form, Piersoni. Several houses are planted to chrysanthemums, which are followed by roses and spring bedding stock.

H. J. Puvogel has built one new house this summer, and rebuilt one of his old ones. His houses are located in the best residence district, where he enjoys a large trade in bedding plants. He grows carnations, violets, mums and roses during the winter. These are sold principally at wholesale. He also forces a large number of bulbs.

Chas. Vogt, who was injured in the tug of war at the picnic, has nearly recovered, and is able to attend to business.

Richard Alston, of Winnipeg, was a recent visitor. X. Y. Z.

HARDY HERBACEOUS PLANTS

Are coming into more general use every year. They are particularly valuable for border planting, as well as for cutting, and a judicious selection of varieties will afford a rich display of color for the border, and a generous supply of blooms for table decoration from June till November frosts destroy all vegetation.

The strong clumps we offer are extra heavy and will produce maximum effects the season of planting.

Those varieties marked (*) are particularly suitable for cut blooms.

HARDY AZALEAS.

The most useful of our spring flowering shrubs, many of the varieties having persistent ever-green foliage. The newer Japanese varieties, such as Amoena and Hinondigire, are very hardy, and especially valuable in edging beds of Rhododendrons, as they are densely covered with brilliant-colored flowers during the month of May and the early part of June. They are also valuable for forcing, particularly the new variety, Hinondigire. Of this we have a splendid stock of fine plants which have been grown upon our premises, transplanted a number of times, and perfectly hardened to our climate.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

Dale Estate May Locate Here.

What is looked upon by the local craftsmen as a Canadian invasion, in the line of cut flower raising, is the rumored location of our neighbors from Brampton upon a tract of land not far from this city, comprising sixty-two acres, part of which will be covered with a million feet of glass. At the time of my visit negotiations were about completed and unless Dame Rumor has made a big mistake we shall soon look upon a mammoth plant, equaled only by Peter Reinberg. The local craft looks favorably upon the scheme and hopes to get good roses in a locality where the sun shines on an average one day in seven.

Grove P. Rawson is as strong as ever on chrysanthemums. The damp, dull summer has caused them to run to leg more than usual.

H. N. Hoffman makes a specialty of violets and carnations. Estelle, White Cloud, Lawson and Queen Louise are leaders. Stock looks fine.

John Rudy, at the J. Sloate Fassett greenhouses, has a very promising lot of seedling carnations, No. 22, a beautiful soft pink, and No. 23, a clear white, being the best of the group.

Higgins & Son is the name of a new retail house that has started up with good prospects. M.

ITHACA, N. Y.—John Foote's personal property has been levied on to satisfy a judgment for $144 in favor of the coal dealer, and there are claims, including a mortgage on the real estate.

HUNTINGTON, L. I.—The Huntington Horticultural Society will hold its first annual fall exhibition October 7. Nicholas Hallock, of Queens, and C. L. Allen, of Floral Park, will be the judges.

LINCOLN, NEB.

The floral display at the state fair this season, while perhaps not so large as some years, was of fine quality and filled every inch of the space provided. Frey & Frey, of Lincoln; W. J. Hesser, of Plattsmouth; Dole & Sons, of Beatrice, and C. H. Green, of Fremont, were represented by fine displays. In plants Frey & Frey were first, Green second and Hesser third; on general collection of palms, Frey & Frey, first, Green second and Hesser third; on collection of ferns, Green first, Frey & Frey second and Hesser third, with the lesser premiums pretty evenly distributed. In cut flowers Green was first and Frey & Frey second; on floral design Frey & Frey were first and Green second; on basket of flowers Green first, Frey & Frey second; on wreath Frey & Frey first, Green second. The lesser premiums were awarded principally to Frey & Frey, with Green second.

Prof. E. H. Barbour staged a very interesting collection of canna blooms that attracted considerable attention. Mrs. H. T. Whitlock was represented in the amateur class by a modest display. The awards were placed by F. C. Cross, superintendent of greenhouses and grounds at the state asylum, and his work demonstrated that he was the right man in the right place and, for perhaps the first time in the history of the society, everyone was satisfied.

REMSSEN, N. Y.—Edward S. Pirnie has started in business with a house 20x100, and an annex 12x30. He will grow carnations exclusively and the stock looks good. Mr. Pirnie is also postmaster and justice of the peace.

BOSTON.

Poor week; lots of poor material coming in and a fair supply of quite good material. Dealers claimed they could sell neither until the very last part of the week, when things brightened up wonderfully. The crop of outdoor lilies seems to be ended and other outdoor stock is in rather poor shape.

Jackson Dawson, who lost his wife only a few weeks ago, is bereaved again in the loss of his son, Charles, aged about 32 years. The young man has been well known in connection with the trade.

For curiosity drop into the old market room on Park street. If it does not well repay you it is my treat. It is the queerest mixture of old ideas and new ones I ever saw. The only new ideas, however, are the difference in goods now exhibited from what you have been accustomed to see, the new manager and the absence of the crowd and its cosmopolitan phases. All the fixtures remain unchanged and make fine display platforms for a high collection of antiquities. The proprietor makes no objection to your tour of inspection, but probably will not act as if he recognized that you ever had any particular importance in connection with the room. He may not think florists amount to much, anyway, you know.

Late improvements in some of the stores may be noted. Penn keeps up the general fine appearance of his Bromfield street place by generous use of white enamel paint, and Welch Bros. have given their ice chests a good overhauling. It looks like business all around now.

Timothy Waters has joined the selling force at Welch Bros. and is to represent that firm on the road. J. S. MANTER.

AURORA, ILL.—Mrs. W. L. Smith is visiting her daughter at White Plains, N. Y.

CANANDAIGUA, N. Y.—Fred C. Hawley has purchased an interest in the McKerr greenhouses and the firm will be known as McKerr & Hawley. A new house 30x85 will be built this fall.

JOLIET, ILL.—A preliminary premium list has been issued for the flower show to be given here November 4 to 7. The offers are liberal and the Joliet florists are barred from most of the cut flower classes. Copies of the list may be had by addressing Jas. H. Ferriss or any of the local florists. There are excellent railway facilities for putting exhibits and visitors on the scene without delay.

Current Events.

Business in all lines, for the past week, has been very slow and the market flooded with cut flowers, most of which were of very poor quality, owing to the extreme heat, and could not be moved at any price.

Robert Hughes, of East Prospect street, had the misfortune to be thrown from his wagon on September 14, breaking his leg and bruising him badly. He is now confined to his bed in Lakeside Hospital, and has the sympathy of his many friends in the trade.

Smith & Feters and the J. M. Gasser Co. are painting and housecleaning and will have everything like new when the fall trade opens.

The Grant-Wilson Co. had the decorations for the opening of the Wm. Taylor Sons' large dry goods house, and it made a very nice showing.

Harry Addicott is back from his vacation trip through southern Canada. The rest did him good.

The F. R. Williams Co. is receiving consignments of very fine asters from the east, some of them being equal in size and quality to early chrysanthemums. E.

KRAMER'S POT HANGERS.

Neatest, simplest, most convenient and only practical device for converting ordinary flower pots into hanging baskets. They fit all standard made pots from 2 to 10 inches in diameter. The illustration shows how they are attached. Just the thing for hanging up Ferns, Begonias, etc. You can make room and money by their use. Try them.

Price with wire chain, as shown in cut, $1.00 per dozen by express. Sample dozen by mail, $1.25.

MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

SCREENS AND THEIR TREATMENT.

Having frequently found one's self dissatisfied with the setting for a decoration which the usual order of things presents, it is necessary for the decorator to manufacture his own surroundings and background. There is scarcely any place that cannot be made to blossom like the rose if proper environments are created. We must get behind things. It is often necessary to spend two-thirds of the time and material in producing a good background. With the proper setting every leaf, flower and spray may be made to stand out in relief.

The most practical decorative backgrounds are to be found in the use of panels and screens. Screens hide a multitude of such things as unsightly views of old grates, walls or doorways. A number of screen frames ready for such emergencies should be found among our accessories. As many kinds of material as there are screens are all the better. The covering should be removable, for sometimes it is desirable to form a solid background, and at other times a light, semi-transparent effect is better. When covering is to be retained, a plain (not figured) goods should be used.

And now for some of the uses of a low screen, as is shown in the first illustration. Instead of attempting to fill in a grate with plants—for it really cannot be done, and amounts to no more nor less than crowding the plants into unnatural positions, with the space even then not filled—according to the space in the grate, use one, two or three sections of the screen. This screen is made by a florists' wire worker. The first section is left uncovered to show its construction. The second is of fabric drapery, with tracery of wood ferns. The third section is covered with green burlap, on which is a design of goldenrod and asters. Sheet moss also makes a very good covering for a screen. The wire frame and feet of the screen are bronzed. Out on the hearth in front of the screen is where the plants should be grouped, if used at all, so far below the eye line.

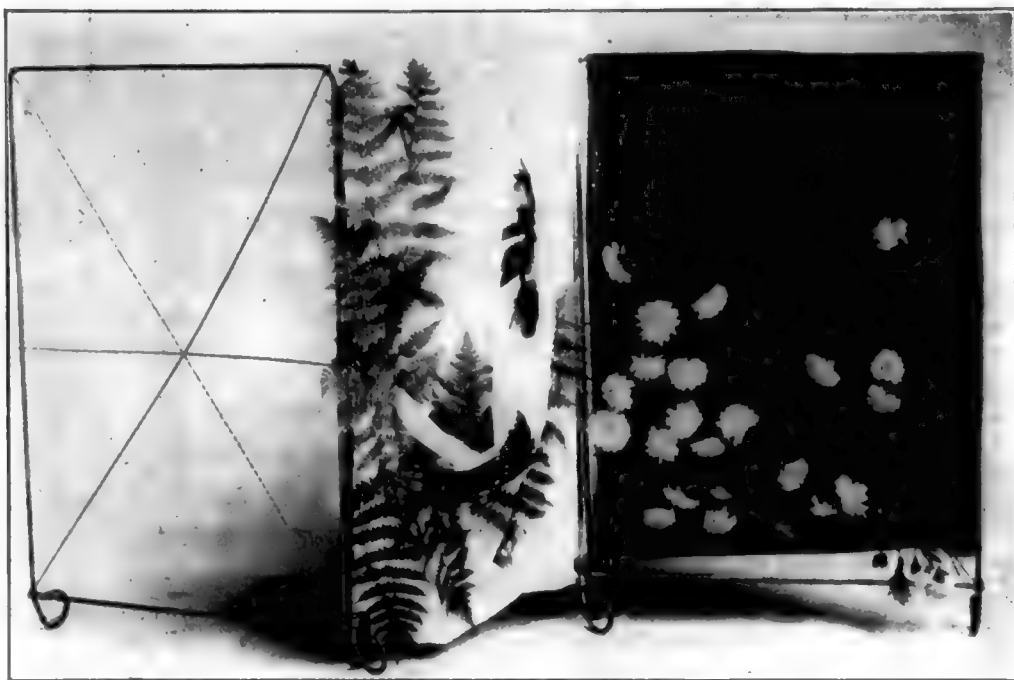

Another treatment for such a screen would be to provide a background of burlap upon which is spread a design of autumn leaves and branches. Oak leaves and sumac may be used effectively here. To add to the color effect a group of autumn lilies may be attached in a bamboo pocket.

Before studying the design of the smilax screen, let us consider for a little how to prepare the smilax for this kind of work. Smilax as it is cut in solid strings is too heavy for any decorative effect, except for draping in large, high-ceilinged rooms. The strings should be separated to make it soft and light and graceful. The effect is not only better, but so much more can be accomplished with the material in hand. To be sure, it takes time, as does everything else worth doing. The string, as it hangs separated, all except a knot, makes a pretty design unit for the corner of a table, a mirror or picture frame, etc.

There is another mission, though it is ignoble, for separated smilax. In outside work at residences there is usually a helper or a squad of helpers detailed by the hostess "to look after the decorations." On first application for work on the part of the helpers I hand out a string of smilax or asparagus apiece to be separated or untangled. One dose is guaranteed to cure, and ere long the decorator will be in sole possession of the fort.

Well, to resume, the heavy string so prepared will fit into the screen frame quite naturally, as pictured in the second illustration. The addition of another small string will complete the light tracery of the design. The opposite section of the screen required the use of three more strings similarly treated, this time keeping the heavier portions at the side, as before the heavier part was at the top.

The back of a piano or organ may be treated like a screen and used as a background for a wedding party. A satisfactory decoration of this kind was arranged last June. The instrument was placed across the corner of the room, back to view, and served as a starting point for long sprays of Weigela roses, smilax and Bridesmaid roses, until from the ceiling to the floor was stretched a delicate partition of pink, white and green, the wedding march stealing from its perfumed depths.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

The general work of caring for the stock will be greatly increased during the next few weeks. Mulching, to be of any use in helping the early winter and holiday crops, will have to be applied soon. While speaking of mulching, I have found it profitable to give the surface of the soil a sprinkling of wood ashes before applying the mulch. This helps to stiffen the stems and will most certainly give better color to the petals. Our Canadian brethren are more liberal in the use of this material than we are, and their blooms have long been noted for their intensity of color. If the soil is deficient of calcareous matter, and most of our soils are—for rose-growing purposes, a generous sprinkling of air-slaked lime would also greatly benefit them during the dark weather.

It should be remembered not to use bone and lime in combination, as this will release more ammonia than the rose can use, so it is not safe to use bone on limed benches for at least one week, or until the strength of the lime is dissipated.

Where plants are in good health and vigor there will be a generous crop of lateral wood to look after. This should be removed while yet young and soft and not be allowed to remain till the growths are so hard as to require a knife for their removal, using the sustenance which should feed and develop the bud and destroying the gracefulness of the stem. This should be attended to at least twice a week.

Tying also will require frequent attention, so that the stems may be straight and do credit to the bud, as it counts for little with the buyer, however fine the bud may be if the stem is weak or crooked. So we should direct our work and skill to produce a fine stem with a shapely, well developed bud at the end of it. To give free circulation of air among the leaves so that they may dry out quickly after syringing, it is necessary to tie each shoot singly, giving as much space between each as the room will allow. It will facilitate tying to have an overhead wire stretched over each line of plants so that the extra long stems which may reach above the stakes may have some support to prevent them being bent by the action of the syringe. These are usually the prime blooms and it is worth an effort to have them perfect.

With the shorter day and decreasing sunshine watering will have to be more carefully studied and the supply regulated to keep pace with the slower evaporation and growth. A careful examination of each bench previous to watering to ascertain its wants may save a deal of after trouble, which is sure to follow careless and indiscriminate use of water at this season.

RIBES.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Storing Cannas.

Before the frost destroys the flowers of your cannas or kills the leaves they should be looked over for any that are not under their correct name. It takes an expert to distinguish the many varieties in the spring when the plants are small and not in flower, and it is annoying to find three or four of the wrong variety in a bed that is otherwise most satisfactory. Label them now, while you know what they are. Cannas are just as well left in the ground until the tops are killed, but not so late that frost enters the ground. Large growers may have root houses or especially constructed basements for the wintering of these important plants. The smaller grower has not. I have never lost five per cent of the roots when placed on boards on the floor beneath a bench where the house was kept anywhere from 40 to 55 degrees, provided there was little or no drip from the bench above. A drip on the roots will rot them, and don't forget the boards. They will prevent the clumps of roots from starting into growth and save you the trouble of frequently moving to prevent starting.

Boxing Dutch Bulbs.

Two or three weeks ago I said I would have more to say about forcing tulips, etc. There is no particular reason for putting off the boxing of these bulbs after the middle of October, and when any quantity are forced the boxing and labor connected with it should be done out of doors. I can only repeat what I have so often said: Use a box or flat of uniform size. Twenty-four by twelve inches and three inches deep we find very satisfactory. Any old soil will do. The soil that was used for last year's carnations would be just the thing. Plant thickly. It is a waste of space and labor not to do so. A box the size described above will hold seventy-two La Reine or sixty or perhaps sixty-six Yellow Prince, or fifty Von Sion. We fill the flat full of soil without much firming and then squeeze in the bulbs, which leaves the top of the bulb only a trifle above the top of the box. One good man, with help to bring in his flats filled with soil and another to wheel them away and place them on the ground where they are to remain for the winter will box a good many thousand tulips in a day.

Place strips of board under the flats in the beds. Thoroughly soak the soil in the flats and, when the water is soaked in, shake over the least bit of straw or hay, or buckwheat husks will do very well, and then cover with three inches of earth dug out from between the beds. I like the beds not over six feet wide and six feet between the beds. This gives you soil enough between the beds to cover the flats. This is all there is to do for the next two months, except to soak the soil above the flats every week if rain is scarce. Remember there is no natural moisture arising from the earth beneath; the bottom of the flat prevents that. While on the subject of watering, don't neglect the Paper Whites and Romans which you boxed two or three weeks ago. I have tried cellars, cool basements and root houses for storing these flats of tulips, narcissi and hyacinths, but they were never so good as those put on the ground out of doors.

Freesia.

Last winter the freesia was in good favor, and so it may be, for it is a sweet, delicate flower. Some growers plant them along the edge of a carnation bench; others grow them in flats, and some in pots. The finest freesia blooms I ever saw was last winter, and the bulbs, or properly corms, were not of the largest size. They were planted across a five-foot bench in five inches of good, rich soil, a light loam. The rows were six inches apart and the bulbs three inches, and that is the way I shall grow them in future, and plant, say 200, every two or three weeks throughout the fall and winter. A great number can be grown in comparatively small space. I may add that the temperature of house was about 50 degrees at night.

Carnations for the Border.

There has been in the past, and always will be, a good demand for carnation plants in the spring to plant out in the border to give the owner a carnation blossom when he feels like it, and these plants are seldom to be had in any decent shape. You can root cuttings now. They root easily and surely in the cold sand and you can grow them on during winter and spring and by next May they can be in 4-inch pots and make good flowering plants. Another way is to dig up the plants in the field that were not good enough to put on the benches. Plants of small or medium size are better for this purpose.

Screen filled in with Strings of Smilax.

Pot firmly in 4 or 5-inch pots and plunge in a cold frame, well protecting the pots with leaves, refuse hops or tanbark. After ten days with the sash on remove them and expose to the full sun and air, and except in heavy rains keep the sash off until you expect 10 or 15 degrees of frost. You know the carnation is almost a hardy plant and if given ventilation on bright days and double sash or mats in the most severe weather, these plants will come through all right and be excellent plants for the garden. They will give you more and earlier flowers than the fall struck cuttings.

If you are a grower of fuchsias and have had some plunged out during summer, they will now be ripening their wood and will be all the better for six weeks' rest in a very cool house, or even shed, or beneath a bench, before you shake them out and start up again for cuttings. The riper the wood the better cuttings you will get.

Hardy Plants.

The month of October, particularly the first two weeks, is an ideal time to plant or move the great majority of herbaceous plants. I can't very well mention the exceptions, but one in particular is important, viz., the beautiful Pyrethrum roseum. Always transplant or divide that in the spring. The peonies, so popular and attracting so much attention just now, should be moved at once and they will be far better off than if left until spring. Remember that with herbaceous plants you can only surface fertilize for perhaps years, so for a plantation of these the ground should be heavily manured and deeply dug, trenched or subsoiled. There is always more time in the beautiful month of October for planting than in the busy spring, when we often jump in a few days from winter into summer, most times to jump back again to our great discomfort, and what can be done with great comfort and safety in the fall should be done.

We are often asked to plant hardy roses and vines, such as lonicera, wistaria, bignonia, etc., in the fall, and our invariable answer is: "I should advise you strongly to wait until spring. You will have no pleasure from them this winter and will run a decided risk of losing them." But if they ask me to plant a hedge of berberis or privet, or plant a hundred common hardy shrubs, I do it, and if properly planted, there is little risk of losing them. Such shrubs as lilac, viburnum, spiraea, in fact, all the truly hardy shrubs, can be transplanted in October with perfect safety. Do it early, rub off all the leaves when lifting, and if the ground is dry, soak them in. Leave pruning until spring, as some killing of the shoots will be sure to occur.

Planting Tulip Beds.

While discoursing on the tulip I meant to remind you that as soon as the canbas and geraniums are dead, some of your customers will want you to fill the beds with tulips. Don't do it for a month. I am sure, and I have the opinion of one of the best men in the country on such matters, that late planting of tulips and hyacinths means larger, finer and more long lasting beds in the spring. Never mind if the beds are muddy with rain and snow; the winter will put all that right, but there is lots of time before that condition will exist; don't be in a hurry.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

Wedding Decoration by Joseph M. Smely, Aurora, Ill.

WEDDING DECORATION.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken in the New England Congregational church at Aurora, Ill., and shows the decoration put up by Joseph M. Smely for the wedding of Miss Fannie Hopkins, daughter of United States Senator Hopkins, and David Peffers, the senator's law partner and former private secretary. The residence was also decorated in the same lavish manner and the work did Mr. Smely much credit.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Early Firing.

Last week's reference to the objectionable dampness produced by excessive use of water in the paths and under the benches at this time of year leads us to inquire how this dampness is created in such form as will likely result in injury to the plants, also by what means can the danger be averted should unexpected conditions arise. With ventilators nearly closed in expectation of a frosty night, there can be but little chance of a natural free circulation of air, even when paths, etc., are in proper condition.

In case of the excessive use of water in places mentioned, the air will become heavily charged with moisture, as is evidenced by precipitation on the glass inside, and, while perhaps not noticeable, it is evident the plants are surrounded with an atmosphere not beneficial to their health. Having known cases where the ventilators were tightly closed and precipitation could be plainly seen on the foliage, I formed the above conclusion.

One reason for watering early in the day, other than that the foliage may become dry before night, is that the bench soil may exhale the least moisture possible, the air and sun during the day having helped to remove any surplus from the surface. Sudden changes in weather may catch us with soil and plants in such shape as to produce this very condition we desire to avoid and to make matters worse, a two or three days' cold rain may set in.

In any case be prepared to turn a little heat into the houses on short notice, to keep the air dry and in circulation through the ventilator at the ridge, the advantages of which are clearly set forth by Mr. Baur in last week's issue. Our four boilers connect with one main and by means of valves one or more can be run or cut out at will as the weather demands. The gentle heat needed early in the season can be supplied by one boiler, resulting in the consumption of less fuel than if each house had an independent boiler. I venture this digression to point out a matter for consideration when contemplating building new or rearranging old houses.

Seasonable Reminders.

Do not wait for greenfly to stake out a claim; fumigate regularly but not heavily as a preventive. Many diseases to which the carnation is liable gain their entrance to the plant through the punctures made by aphides. Should you discover a shoot here and there on which a colony of greenfly exists, it is better to remove the shoots than resort to heavy smoking.

There is no excuse for having red spider thus early, when every advantage is presented for their dislodgment and no hard firing, which assists their development and increase, has been needed. The use of grape dust can be recommended as a preventive of disease, also a destroyer of fungous germs and rust spores. Apply at the warmest time of a still, bright day, blowing it well over the plants with a bellows, when its extreme fineness will allow it to settle on every part of the plant, as well as on wood work and in cracks where lurking germs may be present.

TOPPING FOR CHRISTMAS CROP.

When should carnation topping cease in order to bring in the main crop for Christmas?
T. W.

There is a great difference in varieties regarding the length of time it takes to produce a crop of blooms, and I would be able to answer this inquiry much more accurately if I knew what varieties are grown. There are varieties that naturally produce their heaviest crop of blooms during midwinter, beginning at about November 1 to 15 and keeping it up until well into March, when another crop of shoots starts up and these come in during April and May. Among these varieties are White Cloud, Lorna, America, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Bradt, G. H. Crane and Lawson. The latter two varieties come into bloom quite early in the fall and bloom steadily until hot weather stops them. All these varieties will need little or no stopping in the fall to induce them to come into a heavy crop around Christmas. If the plants are of good size and well established you should give them all the encouragement you can to run up to blooms.

There are varieties like Flora Hill and Dorothy which produce a heavy crop of blooms in the fall and are then apt to be just off crop at Christmas. These you will have to watch if you want a heavy crop of blooms from them at that time. Both produce a crop of blooms in a shorter time than most varieties and if you can see the young shoots begin to run up by November 1 you can safely expect them to be blooming again by Christmas.

This is where the larger grower has the advantage over the smaller man. He can grow twenty-five varieties, and each in Christmas demand with a full supply, but he can select varieties that are naturally at their best at that time. Other varieties will be in full crop early in the fall or late in the spring, or just when these varieties are between crops, etc.

For instance, you may grow Crane for early fall and winter up to February 1, when it will likely be off crop. Mrs. Palmer does not come in as early as Crane, but it is a much finer bloom and is in full crop after December 1 and keeps up better in hot weather than Crane. America will fill the place of Mrs. Palmer, too. Flora Hill will come into bloom by September 1 if it is planted the first week in August, but it will be off crop by December 1, when White Cloud comes in and remains until April, at which time Hill takes it up again and keeps it up until replanting time. Dorothy and Crocker are both fine in the fall, when Lawson is still too short in stem to be of any account. Dorothy recovers itself quickly after the crop is cut and will give a fine winter cut, while Crocker needs considerable coaxing to induce it to run up to flower during midwinter. Mrs. Lawson comes to the front about December 1 and holds the boards until hot spring weather, when Crocker comes in again and makes all the other pink ones "look like thirty cents." You can easily see how much more difficult it would be for a grower to have a good supply of blooms from one variety through the entire season than it is from three or more varieties, and the more you add to the list the better your chances are for a continuous cut, providing you do not choose too many varieties of the same habit. You can, however, by careful topping in the fall make almost any variety come in with a crop of blooms for Christmas, but you must

THE U. S. CUT FLOWER CO.

I beg to advise you that the United States Cut Flower Co. has selected its location in Elmira, on which they propose to erect, in the course of two years, about two million feet of glass for the purpose of growing cut flowers to supply the trade of the United States.

I may state right here that the United States Cut Flower Co. has no connection, financially or otherwise, with the Dale estate, of Canada, but hopes to be always in friendly touch with the same. The system of construction adopted by the United States Cut Flower Co. is practically the same as is used by the Dale estate in Brampton and the general business will likely be conducted along the same lines. The excellent railway facilities offered by Elmira, and being convenient to the great fuel center of the United States, naturally makes that city a desirable location for a plant such as we contemplate erecting. The general management of the same will be in the hands of "yours truly." The principal stockholders of the United States Cut Flower Co. are residents of New York state and New York city. Believing that the demand for cut flowers is likely to continue for many years the stockholders look forward to a very profitable business in their new venture.

ASCHMANN IN EUROPE.

It was a pleasant summer Sunday, August 30, when, with my son Howard, I strolled through the beautiful city of Antwerp. The streets are wide and clean and shaded, and we came upon a lovely park, with a splendid band making sweet music and attracting immense crowds. The sidewalks in front of the taverns surrounding the park were occupied by people enjoying light refreshments and the florists of Antwerp had set up their tents along the streets and were making up bouquets and floral designs at remarkably low prices. Chrysanthemums, roses, carnations, dahlias, gladioli, tuberose and the beautiful tuberous rooted begonia were the favorite flowers. A beautiful bouquet, eighteen inches high and over, made up with roses, carnations and asters, and filled on the back with ferns and asparagus, could be bought for 30 cents in American money. In another part of the park the pot plants were exhibited and sold, principally araucarias and palms. All were doing a thriving business and we watched them with much interest. They were nearly sold out by night. The city of Antwerp grants the privilege of selling at the park only to the florists.

We went from Antwerp to Ghent, the azalea plantation of Belgium, where beautiful weather favored us. There are 700 to 800 florists in Ghent and vicinity, each having from six to one hundred greenhouses. We visited the principal places and were quite surprised to find them fitted up with all the latest improvements. The growers there are very accommodating, appreciating the American very highly. It was no trouble to them to show us around, showing us every nook and corner, explaining their heating, airing and watering arrangements, all of which were interesting. In the end we were always invited to some beautifully fitted up apartment, where refreshments were provided.

They are all doing a rushing business at Ghent, azaleas being very scarce and quantity, so that he is sure to have among his list varieties of widely different habits and he is sure at all times to have a few varieties in full bloom. He can allow each variety to choose its own time for blooming, merely keeping the plants in good health. By judging accurately the right quantity to grow of each variety, according to the time it is at its best, and the demand there is for the blooms at that time, he can manage to meet the market with whatever quantity it requires. He does not need to grow his varieties so as to meet the nearly all sold. The small growers sell their goods to the large ones and to the exporters. Owing to cold, wet weather Azalea indica did not grow much this year, and therefore prices advanced.

We also traveled through Holland, Germany, and we are now at Zurich, in Switzerland. Everywhere we find evidence of the love of flowers among the people, for every house has its flower garden, every window its shelf of pot plants. They also understand how to make good use of their pleasure grounds, for in connection with flowers many fruit trees are planted, especially pears.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society gave a complimentary exhibition of dahlias at the Palace hotel September 18, at which the display of flowers was really excellent. G. A. Pope, of Burlingame, won the prizes for best and most complete collection of dahlias, for twelve cactus varieties, for twelve show sorts, twelve decorative and twelve pompon. R. Lichtenberg, San Francisco, won the silver medal for collection of single dahlias and certificates of merit for seedling cactus, seedling show, seedling decorative, seedling fancy and seedling single.

The Leedham Bulb Co., Santa Cruz, received a certificate of merit for seedling dahlias. J. A. Carbone, West Berkeley, won a certificate with several vases of chrysanthemums, including Monrovia. Mrs. Fred L. Button, Estelle and Glory of Pacific, and some carnations. J. M. Halsted, Oakland, won a certificate for cactus dahlias, and F. Tillman, Fruitvale, received a certificate for cannas. Golden Gate park made a very large display of dahlias which received honorable mention. The same award was given to W. H. Crocker, Burlingame, for dahlias and flowering shrubs, and to H. Maier, Burlingame, for lilies. J. H. Sievers & Co. contributed a handsome central group of palms and ferns.

There was an attractive musical program and the room was thronged with visitors during the afternoon and evening. No admission was charged.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society certainly seems to be doing its share toward keeping the profession before the public.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

One for the best vase of Michigan seedlings, not yet disseminated. One for the best 100 yellow, any variety and open to all. One for the best vase of 150 blooms, not less than three nor more than five varieties, any variety permissible and the vase to be arranged for harmony and effect.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Seasonable Hints.

Routine work, watering, tying and feeding, is about all that is to be done from now on and about all a man can do is to wait for the flowers to develop. Feeding should be discontinued entirely as soon as the bud shows color unless the plants are growing in pots, in which case liquid can be administered longer without any bad effects. All growths should be neatly tied up so that the stems will be straight and clean. Be sure that the buds are free from black and greenfly before they open. Greenfly is very troublesome this year and is one of the worst pests to get rid of.

Some of the early varieties are coming in and in a week or so the season will be fairly under way. Mrs. T. W. Pockett is already open from early buds. It seems to me that there should be money in this variety. It can evidently be got in as soon as October Sunshine and while about the same color is a far more beautiful flower. I shall look for a more extended planting of this variety next year. The early flowers will be very welcome if we only get a good frost to clear away the outside crop of asters, dahlias, etc., and I suppose the dahlia men are hoping just as fervently that we don't get frost for a month. Coombs is almost ready to cut and another week will see several other varieties in good shape.

The nights are getting very cool and some attention is necessary as regards ventilation. One thing can be laid down as a never failing rule and that is, never close the houses down tight to try and economize on heat. Always leave a crack of air on and if the temperature gets down to 45 degrees run a line of steam around the house. This keeps the moisture from settling on the petals of the flowers and spoiling them. A damp, clammy atmosphere, such as one feels when a house is shut up close without heat, is the last thing one should have when the flowers are opening. A night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees is all right from now on, and if the buds are mostly good crowns 50 degrees is the better of the two.

Spraying overhead must be discontinued as soon as the buds burst open from the covering, that is to say as soon as a speck of color can be noticed around the outer edge of the bud. I have seen many flowers ruined by the water rotting the center of the bud, and this will not occur if spraying is not kept up too long.

The fall season so far has been very favorable to the opening buds. Bright days and cold, clear nights are ideal conditions for the chrysanthemum, but look out if the nights and days are both warm and the flowers develop rapidly and get soft. Then some shade will be necessary or the hot sun will burn the petals. We spray the entire glass with a coat of whitewash and this will be found the easiest way to shade. Under this covering the flowers will develop more slowly and give much better satisfaction.

BRIAN BORU.

TROUBLE WITH METEOR.

Will you kindly let us know through your valuable paper what is the cause of Meteor rose foliage turning yellow? The plants seem to be in vigorous growth, with perfect root action, although the shed this season has been something out of the ordinary. In some instances they act as though they had a touch of black spot; although not showing any symptoms of that disease. The foliage keeps shedding as fast as the new crop is made. We have been growing this rose ever since it was introduced and had a little trouble last season, but it did not start quite as early as this season. Could it be that our stock has run out, or is there anything in the soil? We are growing them in a trifle heavier soil than previously. C. R.

From the description of the trouble I should judge it similar to a case I had on my own hands some years ago and which I have seen duplicated in several other places since. After a very exhaustive examination I traced the trouble to irregular watering, they having been allowed to become bone dry at the boards and then overfilled with water. These facts I found applied to the other cases also.

Of course there are other conditions which could bring about a like result, such as too close or damp an atmosphere or defective drainage. I am satisfied that the heaviness of the soil would not induce this condition. We have been using a very heavy, clayey loam for some years, and with most excellent results. As the root action is good the trouble cannot be attributed to run out or degenerate stock.

The remedy we adopted and which was happily successful, although it took a couple of months to restore them to health, was somewhat paradoxical. We kept the roots even wetter than usual, temperature 68 degrees at night, 80 degrees during the day, giving ample ventilation. This treatment was also followed by the rest of the unfortunates, ending in success in each case. One house we tried to bring around by keeping it on the dry side, but this only aggravated the case. These are notes from actual experience. RIBES.

WHITE SCALE.

In a bench of Brides and Maids we have just one Winnie Davis rose. It is thickly covered with what seems to be white scale. Can you tell me why this is, as no others are so affected? What shall I do for it? C. M. B.

Why the scale should be confined to this one plant I cannot say; doubtless there are attending conditions which favor this which could only be determined by local investigation. Probably this variety is more to their liking than the others, or possibly they were brought into the house on this same plant and have not yet had time to disperse, as they are slow of movement and take a long time to crawl from one plant to another, this being their only mode of progression.

If these are the small white scale they can be easily dislodged by the syringe, if sufficient force is used. An application of whale oil soap will quickly destroy them. This should be applied with a syringe and is most effective when applied hot, about 120 degrees. This clogs the breathing pores along the sides of the body, literally choking them. Kerosene emulsion will also destroy them if applied in the same way. RIBES.

THRIPS.

What is the best remedy to apply for thrips on roses? Any information will be appreciated. C. R.

Fumigating lightly and frequently with tobacco smoke will, if persisted in, certainly destroy them, but to this practice there are objections; it bleaches the petals to such an extent that they are frequently unsalable, but where thrips have a good foothold there must be some sacrifices before they are cleared out.

Burning cayenne pepper is a most effective way of destroying them, but this also must be practiced frequently to accomplish the object. Heat some plates of iron till they are nearly red and place them along the paths, then put a tablespoonful of the pepper on each, beginning at the end of the house farthest from the door, and get out as quickly as possible, as the fumes are very disagreeable, even dangerous. Four such plates are sufficient to fill a house 25x100 feet.

All affected buds should be picked off and burned. Keep the paths and floor clear of weeds and rubbish, as these afford a shelter which it is hard to reach with any kind of fumes. RIBES.

THE SHASTA DAISY.

What is the proper treatment for Shasta daisy to have it in bloom for spring trade in Ohio? T. C. B.

I would say that is a question of what size plant you desire. Plants that were grown out of doors in pots this summer, or those planted out and lifted at this time and kept cool during winter, will make a splendid Easter plant. If a smaller plant is desired, then cuttings put in now and grown on with an occasional pinching and successive shifts would make a very neat plant in a 5-inch pot by next April. These daisies, or properly chrysanthemums, are most excellent house plants and we have noticed large plants sold to our customers at Easter flowering in great profusion in the windows six months later. Not many of our greenhouse plants will do that. I have never tried the Shasta daisy in pans, but the common Paris daisy makes a very salable 6 or 8-inch pan for Easter. For this purpose flowering tips from the large plants should be put in the sand in January and when rooted they should be planted two inches apart in the pan. If Easter is late, defer propagating until the middle of February. WILLIAM SCOTT.

AMARYLLIS.

I have quite a lot of Amaryllis vittata, Johnsoni, etc., and some bulbs of Crinum fimbriatum. Some of them are in pots and others planted out. Will they keep through the winter if dried and stored like spotted calla? I have always kept them in the cellar in the pots, but I have not room to store them all that way this winter. L. M. G.

Supposing these plants flowered the past summer, it would be poor treatment to shake off all the soil and keep them dry during winter. Those that have been planted out must, of course, be lifted before hard frost, as neither amaryllis or crinum could be kept out of doors, even with the greatest protection, in the state of Vermont. Lift them, preserving all the roots you can, and tread them in in flats with five or six inches of soil, and don't dry off too suddenly; withhold water by degrees, and a month after lifting the flats can be stored beneath a bench. Under a carnation bench would be an excellent place for them, as you would be starting them again in the spring before much water would be dripping through the carnation bed. Those that are in pots by all means leave in pots. From October to, say February, they can be stood beneath a bench in some cool house. Most of these plants are evergreen, and although they rest during winter they by no means want to be dust dry. WILLIAM SCOTT.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

To say that I am pleased with your valuable paper would be saying something very old. My wife and children also read the Review; it keeps up their interest and confidence in the business I am engaged in, which is of no small value to me some days when the sun does not shine. Am much interested in your articles on seedling longiflorum lilies, having experimented with them the last seven years with an aim to propagation, but with poor results. Am also in with peonies a little. When plants are advertised I often see the statement made that the varieties are not subject to any disease, but this year I notice a trouble which started at blooming time. The top leaves would show little black spots, as though punctured by a fly, which spots would grow in size, so that by now the tops on most are dried up and black. Some plants of officinalis dried up entirely shortly after blooming, apparently of the same trouble, and in consequence the eyes for next year are very feeble. Would spraying with Bordeaux mixture help if done during the growing season? I see that a four-year-old plant of the Chinese section has died this summer, one eye after another, until all the roots were found to be rotten, while the plants around it seem all right. C. C. ARNOLD.

MADISON, N. J.

Current Comment.

I had an interesting chat the other day with a veteran rose grower, and from him obtained much information concerning the early days of the rose growing industry in this town. It is now thirty-eight years since roses were first shipped regularly from here to New York, Mr. Littlejohn, the gardener for Judge Lathrop, being the pioneer, the Bryce place and E. V. Howard coming next. In those days Cornelia Cook was the great white and Bon Silene was also largely grown. The roses were shipped in small tin boxes, with a large padlock attached, a key for which was kept at each end of the line. Nowadays a 6-foot box is used and the padlock is no more.

One of the old time places still produces roses of the first class. This is the old Slaughter place, now leased by Elwood Brant. There are some seventeen houses here, accommodating about 30,000 plants. Beauties are the chief crop grown, with teas along the front benches. Two houses of Liberty and one of Meteor are also grown. The houses are antiquated compared with the modern standard, but the stock looks very good indeed and reflects great credit on Mr. Brant. He is a shrewd young man who is forging ahead and is part lessee with his brother of the immense rose houses of Peter Crowe, of Utica, N. Y.

Most of the largest growers here live, as Mr. Dooley would say, "beyond the thracks," or above the railroad. Just a stone's throw from Mr. Brant is the handsome range of Henry Hentz, Jr. It is a modern plant, complete in every particular, and is of the most enduring construction. Beauties are chiefly grown. One house that has been changed to solid beds shows up much finer than the benched stock. One smaller house of 'mums were fine, as even a lot of stock as I ever saw, Appleton, Helen Bloodgood and Bonnaffon being the varieties grown. Mr. Hentz is a partner of the firm of Moore, Hentz & Nash, which is the donor of the special medals offered at the show every year by the local horticultural society. These medals are awarded to the actual growers of the winning flowers and competition for them has always been close.

Not far from the last named establishments are the plants of Louis M. and Louis A. Noe, father and son respectively, the Beauty kings of Madison. Each has some nineteen or twenty houses 200 feet long and the stock can only be described as splendid. About 100,000 rose plants are accommodated in these houses and the product has for years been known far and wide. System, order and cleanliness are everywhere apparent and here, as everywhere else, it proves that the man who keeps his place painted and up-to-date is the man who makes the success of his business. The young Mr. Noe has a palatial dwelling commanding a view of as pretty a piece of country as can be found in this broad land. No visitor to this town should miss seeing this model establishment of the roses.

There are several other large places in this vicinity, but lack of time prevented any further examination, and one gets tired seeing house after house, nothing but roses. There is no reason why roses should grow any better here than elsewhere. While the soil is good it is no better than can be found in any section of the country, and the reason why the business has become so localized is simply because the early establishments have served as schools for the later fellows to graduate from. CHICAGO.

The Market.

The local retailers have been very much disappointed with the business this week, having anticipated considerable increase as the result of the centennial celebration, which has filled the city with visitors. Of course, there are a few large orders, resulting from the entertainment of prominent guests, and decorations for store openings, but nothing in which the trade at large can share. Shipping trade has been good, however, and the wholesalers are not complaining.

There has been a large increase in the receipts of Beauties and all requirements can now be met without difficulty and even with some concession in quoted rates. Good Brides and Maids are scarce, but there is plenty of low-grade stock. Chateau is plentiful, but good, and red roses are also in better supply. Carnations are very good for the season and are so plentiful that they leave little opening for the late asters. A few chrysanthemums are coming in, and sell readily at fair prices. Violets are in pretty regular supply, but are very small as yet, and very slow sale. Valley is good and green goods plentiful.

Various Notes.

There was a well-attended special meeting of the Florists' Club at the Sherman House last Friday night. The committee which was appointed at the recent supper at the Union reported a list of suggestions as to how a more general interest may be created in the affairs of the club. It was the consensus of opinion that the club's interests would be conserved by changing its name to Chicago Florists' and Gardeners' Club and that occasional supporters on the order of the one recently held would be desirable. A number of committees were appointed, principal among which are those on membership, the season's program and on co-operation with the Horticultural Society of Chicago. The next meeting is scheduled for October 14.

Gunnar Teilmann, of Marion, Ind., on Tuesday began sending E. C. Amling some very good chrysanthemums, Monrovia for yellow being remarkably good for so early in the season.

Peter Reinberg shipped 1,000 Beauties to J. M. Gasser, Cleveland, on Tuesday and also an order for 4,000 roses to Sunderbruch, at Cincinnati.

L. Coatsworth has been at New Castle this week, and is pleased with the way stock looks.

B. Eldredge, of Belvidere, is sending in some very good carnations.

The wholesalers have agreed that, as the express companies will not pick up packages after 6 p. m., there is no use keeping open beyond that hour.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Trade during the past two weeks has been somewhat irregular, yet on the whole very good. A few large weddings about the middle of September cleared up stock and, with small decorations, everything has been moving nicely. Retail and wholesale men, with scarcely any exception, claim a good margin over last year's business, while the prospects for October are very bright.

Notes.

The decoration put up this week by J. S. Simmons for the Canadian night at Masonic lodge was very unique. Maple leaves and palms were used for banking, while baskets of dahlias and roses were used for floral work. Some baskets in the form of ships and automobiles were used to good effect.

Geo. Gard, of Pape avenue, took unto himself a wife this week. They have gone on a trip through the eastern states.

H. Endean, of St. Lawrence market, reports prospects very good for the coming season. The new St. Lawrence market has not been a great success financially for those doing business there. However, Mr. Endean has stuck faithfully to it right through and notices a gradual improvement in business and others give encouraging reports.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade among the retailers is reported as slow in all lines. The cool spell did not last long enough, the weather having become quite warm again, and the cut flower displays have disappeared from the show windows of the retailers. The growers say that a good, hard frost is needed to start the business up for good. There is every evidence that the coming season will be an improvement over the last from a business standpoint. A look through the wholesale houses several times the past week showed plenty of well grown stock of all kinds, with very little demand, conditions just opposite to those of the previous week. The cut stock that is in is of very good quality, especially the roses, which have good color and foliage. Prices on choice Brides, Maids and Meteors range from $6 down to $2 per 100. Perles sell slowly at this time of the year. Beauties are selling fairly well, with a good supply in the market at present. The choice this week bring $3 per dozen and the shorts bring 75 cents. Carnations are more plentiful than they have been for some time, but the demand has been slow. Fancies sell well, but for common stock there is hardly any demand. Short outdoor stock nearly all went to the waste pile. The price opened this week at $2 for choice and 50 to 75 cents for short stock. A few chrysanthemums are coming in, but not enough to quote prices on. A few violets also are in, but they are not good enough to put on the market. Valley is of good quality and the market is fairly well supplied. Outdoor stock is about over, very little of it coming in at present. Single tuberoses are still selling well, at $4 per 100 stalks. Smilax is in rather good supply, but the demand is rather slow. In other greens the market is in a healthy condition.

Dan McRorie, representing W. A. Mandala, of South Orange, N. J., is in town, looking none the worse from his recent sickness in Chicago. Dan says business was never better in his line.

Harry, eldest son of A. Jablonsky, florist at Wellston, had his leg crushed in an elevator the past week. From last reports the young man is mending nicely.

Miss Theresa Badaracco left last Friday for Chicago and West Baden Springs for a ten days' stay.

George Brown, landscape gardener from England, has arrived to take charge of the landscape work at the English building at the World's Fair grounds.

The Civic Improvement League, at Tower Grove and Shaw avenues, awarded first prize to Richard Hatch for having the best garden plot in the five-acre tract managed by the Junior Horticultural school.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers, who has been sick so long, has about recovered and expects to be at her place of business in about ten days.

C. A. Kuehn and J. F. Ammann visited Springfield last Sunday and Monday, calling on the trade and attending the State Fair, which opened on Monday, September 28.

The show houses of some of the West End florists are very attractive, especially those of F. C. Weber, Mrs. M. M. Ayres and George Waldbart.

The lady florists' bowling club rolled their first games last Wednesday afternoon at the Blue Ribbon alleys. Sixteen ladies responded to the call. In the three games rolled Mrs. Theo. Miller was high, making an average of 100 in three games. Mrs. Carl Beyer was second and Miss Birdie Meinhardt third. Fred C. Weber and J. J. Beneke assisted the ladies and kept score. Miss Tillie Meinhardt was appointed treasurer. Visitors from the East Side who witnessed the bowling were Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Guy and daughter and Mrs. Fehr, of Belleville, Ill., and Miss Schnell, of East St. Louis, Ill. Every Wednesday afternoon will find the ladies bowling, commencing at 2 o'clock.

J. D. Carmody, of Evansville, Ind., is spending a few days in St. Louis, reading "O'Mara to the Rescue" and wondering what Brother Scott will have to say in the next issue.

The florist bowlers on Monday night rolled three games and the scores show a big improvement over the week before. Theo. Miller was high, Carl Beyer second and Will Adels third. Following are the scores:

Player.	1st.	2d.	3d.	Tl.
Miller	172	178	214	564
Beyer	184	194	171	549
Adels	175	197	176	548

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The weather has been slightly cooler for the past week, and as a consequence trade has been better. Roses and carnations show a decided improvement in quality, but these, with a few asters, are about the only cut flowers to be had here at present. Prices remain unchanged. The J. M. Gasser Co. cut the first chrysanthemums last week, and it will not be long before they can be had in quantities.

Notes.

Quite a number of our growers are talking of putting natural gas burners under their boilers and using gas instead of coal for heating their places. Bramley & Son and F. W. Zichman have it already in, and are prepared for cold weather. They think that it will be a great saving in both money and labor.

F. L. Evans is back from a three weeks' vacation, spent in the wilds of northwestern Ohio, on a farm.

Some very fine Kaiserin roses were seen this week at the F. R. Williams place.

The Cleveland Florist Club held its annual picnic on September 23, at Forest City park. While the date was late in the season, the day was fine, and a large party of florists, with their families and friends, had a jolly good time. E.

RICHMOND, IND.—The E. G. Hill Company is endeavoring to get title, by purchase or exchange, to twenty-two acres of adjacent property belonging to the city. A new heating plant and quite a good sized addition to the range of glass will be erected in case the deal goes through.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Business conditions in New York city in the cut flower department, both wholesale and retail, seem to reflect the condition of securities in Wall street. A bull market there is synonymous with prosperity in the florist business. That great barometer of trade is in the dumps and the effect of losses there by the men who spend their money lavishly for luxuries is felt first by the men who cater to the aesthetic in human nature, and one of the first retrenchments by these spenders is to cut out the flowers. Good times in Wall street mean prosperity for the New York floriculturists. Fortunately there is a bottom to everything and the financiers chose the dull time of the year to depress things, so that the natural swing of the pendulum will bring better times just about the period when chrysanthemums are ripe and the busy fall season actually begins. Watch things boom in October and expect a great holiday season. It is as certain as was the natural depression of the summer, and the commencement of the good times coming cannot be long delayed. The supply men have already had a splendid shipping season and all seem more than satisfied with what has been accomplished and the work in prospect from now on until the holidays.

Institute Exhibition.

The American Institute exhibition closed last Thursday night. The attendance was fairly encouraging and the display of plants, etc., satisfactory. The new 'mum, Opah, from Nathan Smith & Son, of Adrian, Mich., arrived late but made many friends. It is a decided acquisition among the early whites, strong stemmed, averaging five inches in diameter, a splendid shipper, and deemed worthy by the judge of a special prize. John Lewis Childs exhibited an immense assortment of crotons, fancy caladiums and other ornamental plants. Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, N. J., had their usual fine display of orchids in large variety, and Siebrecht & Son, of New Rochelle, and Julius Roehrs, of Rutherford, grand banks of palms, ornamental plants and orchids as creditable as any these firms have ever placed on exhibition. The showing of fancy and cactus dahlias was large and superb in quality. The new pink dahlia, shown by H. F. Burt, of Taunton, Mass., was especially handsome. Charles H. Allen, of Floral Park, again exhibited his new White Lawson carnation, and G. T. Schuneman, of Baldwins, L. I., violets. L. A. Martin, of Greenwich, Conn., Hugh McCarron, of Fair Haven, and G. P. Sorenson, of Stamford, staged fine displays of fancy grasses and hardy flowers. As is their custom, Ellwanger & Barry, of Rochester, had a grand exhibit of fruits of all kinds. H. F. Burt was one of the principal prize winners in the dahlia classes. W. P. Lothrop also figuring prominently. J. P. Sorenson, Stamford, Conn., J. Dowlin, Seabright, N. J., L. A. Martin, Greenwich, Conn., and others made good showings.

Various Notes.

Reed & Keller have a fine novelty in their folding Christmas bells and the demand has necessitated a second cable already.

James A. Hammond has returned from his summer home at Port Washington,

L. I., for the strenuous winter season. Mr. Hammond is handling palms and plants as usual and has some fine, large decorative phoenix on exhibition.

John J. Perkins reopens his branch store at 48 West Thirtieth street this week and his foreman, Hugh Nelson, returns from his European trip at the same time.

S. Masur, for five and one-half years with J. V. Phillips, has opened a retail store at 238 Fulton street, Brooklyn. Like many a retailer, he was stocking up the new store with palms and ferns at Elliott's last week, where the auctions afford many bargain opportunities.

Mr. Humphrey, of Thorlèy's, met with a painful accident at Bell Port, L. I., a couple of weeks ago—a fall from a porch that dislocated his shoulder and laid him on the shelf for six days. He is now in harness again. A large wedding out of town is under way, which will engage his best efforts early in October.

The Jewish holidays last week were a factor in the improvement in business early, which emphasized their value by the decrease noted before the week was over.

Chrysanthemums are asserting themselves quite prominently. On Monday Thorlèy had a window of them that was very effective, banked with crotons.

Rudolph Windt, of St. Louis, has come to town, backed by the excellent testimony of Vice-President Beneke, and has secured employment with J. H. Small & Sons.

H. Ramm, of Secaucus, is cutting some fine Bergmann chrysanthemums, which are consigned to John Young.

Mrs. Kelly, bookkeeper for the Rosary, has returned to New York after a seven weeks' visit at her old home in the Emerald Isle.

Dr. N. L. Britton, of the New York Botanical Garden, has returned from a month's horticultural tour in Cuba.

Arthur Cowee, the gladiolus expert, was in the city last week. His exhibit of Groff's hybrids at the New York State Fair at Syracuse was one of the finest displays of the great yearly exhibition.

Mr. and Mrs. Hauswirth and Miss Kreitling, of Chicago, enjoyed a four days' stay in New York on their way from the Atlantic City Redmen's convention.

A week from next Monday the opening meeting of the New York Florists' Club for the season takes place at its rooms in the Grand Opera House. Some novelties in flowers will be on exhibition and a large attendance is anticipated.

President Herrington was in the city last week, full of enthusiasm as to the coming chrysanthemum exhibition. There is no doubt of the show being a grand success.

A brief call at Tarrytown on Saturday demonstrated the influence of the S. A. F. convention exhibit as to Piers ni. boxes and crates of this great fern being in process of packing and shipment, and the demand growing daily for commercial sizes in 6 and 8-inch pots, of which there is still an abundance sufficient to last until the cold weather makes shipment risky.

Fred C. Chadborn, of Newburg, president of the Chadborn Automatic Ventilator Co., reports a growing demand for the ventilator since the convention, and the new factory seems to have made a wise provision, as well as a necessity.

Mr. Chadborn will be married October 6 and the trade generally extends congratulations.
J. AUSTIN SHAW."

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Carnations are increasing in quantity, all the wholesale houses having more flowers this week. The quality is very fair and their place is ready, asters being about over. Beauties are more plentiful and lower in price. The first chrysanthemums made their appearance last week, P. N. DeWitt, of Croydon, sending in Montmort to S. S. Pennock. Both yellow and pink have since arrived at E. Bernheimer's. Double violets have also come. Charles Black, of Hightstown, is sending in some nice flowers to W. J. Moore. Dahlias are popular and continue to arrive in great quantities, W. P. Peacock sending in 5,000 to 10,000 daily. The fancy sorts with long stems are bringing good prices.

Loss at West Chester.

A severe hail storm passed over West Chester about four o'clock on Sunday afternoon, doing great damage at the greenhouses of Joseph Kift & Son and Hoopes, Bro. & Thomas. The loss at both places was great to both glass and plants. Photographs seen at the city store of Joseph Kift & Son show a number of badly smashed houses. Neither firm, it is said, was insured. Much sympathy is expressed for the sufferers. The damage so late in the season is especially unfortunate.

Oxford.

Charles E. Meehan, the Flower Market's popular manager, visited the Oxford growers last week. He was pleased with the general condition of stock, which was strong and vigorous, having suffered but little from stem-rot. William A. Walton is very progressive and is trying a number of new varieties, among them Boston Market, The Queen and Governor Wolcott. He has increased his planting of Prosperity. He also has a fine house of Asparagus plumosus. Norman Wilson does Flora Hill exceptionally well. This variety seems thoroughly at home in Oxford. Lloyd & Son are also fine carnation growers, who will be heard from this season. N. D. Hutchinson, who lately embarked in the business, has two houses of carnations. Many of the plants were not yet on the benches, either just planted or still in the field, the Oxford men believing they get better results from late lifting. Stem-rot has done havoc at Kennett Square, a house of sweet peas here, tomatoes there, being made necessary by the shortage in carnations.

Bowling.

It was not to be expected that our bowlers would remain idle after their great convention triumph. "Never should the sword be allowed to rust in the scabbard" is an old saying that applies to many things, bowling among others. This week (Friday, October 2) a great match is to be started on the home alleys, wholesalers vs. retailers, best two in three, the former led by Walter N. Yates, who did such fine work in his maiden match at Milwaukee, and the latter, it was expected, by the redoubtable Robert Kift, whose eloquence when describing his team's victory so delighted the members present at the last club meeting.

Notes.

Samuel S. Pennock has just returned from Europe after a splendid trip. He will be followed by some novelties of interest to the retailers.

The club meeting next Tuesday evening, October 6, will be full of interest. A. H. Whetstone will read a paper on "Vacuum Heating," giving new ideas on economizing fuel, and Edward Reid will give his views about "The West from a Commission Man's Standpoint," which should be well worth hearing, as Mr. Reid is thoroughly posted on this home subject.

Edwin Lonsdale is cutting a few Queen of Edgelys now. They go to the Flower Market. Mr. Lonsdale will be an important factor in the production of this rose this season, having the greater part of his place planted with it.

A. J. Pennock is sending in quantities of fine valley to his brother.

Eugene Bernheimer is receiving fine early yellow and pink chrysanthemums.

C. A. Dunn & Co. are receiving pink bouvardia from Arthur Mallon, Jr.

M. Rice & Co. report a heavy fall business. They are working hard to get orders out.

Joseph Heacock reports September palm business the largest he has ever experienced, with many advance orders for October. Some sizes are all sold. One order shipped to San Francisco is the third received from this same buyer.

PHIL.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

It looks as if all chrysanthemums will be late about this city; even the earliest varieties are very backward and will not be in much before October 10, if then. During the past couple of seasons early mums have not been all that could be desired. Last year Estelle was the first of good quality and it sold well. This year the same variety is looking very promising and will doubtless keep up its record.

There is a lively demand for all kinds of stock, and, though the supply is somewhat limited, there is enough good stock to make the daily sales run up pretty high. The present weather is good on all kinds of stock and its continuance will greatly improve the quality. Beauties of very good quality are to be had. The longest stems run about thirty inches and bring $2.50 to $3 per dozen. Medium-stemmed ones always seem to have the call. Other roses are much the same as last week as to quality, but the supply has about doubled. Asters and gladioli are still holding on and some very fair stock is to be had. Carnation receipts are increasing daily. They sell readily. The B. K. & B. Floral Co., of Richmond, Ind., is sending in some very good blooms of Dorothy, Harry Fenn, Richmond Gem, Gov. Lowndes and Enchantress. Cactus dahlias are seen now and then and are the only kind that will sell. Lily of the valley is scarce at present.

Notes.

Mrs. Herman Schlachter, while riding to the city from her home on Spring Grove avenue, dropped a roll of bills amounting to $125.

Geo. Murphy is busy building a large greenhouse. His stock this year is looking well and a good yield is looked forward to.

Albert Gray was in a runaway accident and was badly used up. No bones were broken but his head and face were cut badly.

Wm. Speck has completed a new greenhouse 128 feet long. It is a modern structure and takes the place of several small houses which he tore down.

Fred Gear is spending a few days in Chicago. He will doubtless make his presence felt, as Fred is somewhat of a hustler.

Huntsman & Co. have about finished remodeling their plant. All the houses have been put in first-class shape and a new boiler has been installed. Stock is in very good condition, especially carnations. Mr. Huntsman's place is located in Kentucky, overlooking the Ohio river.

C. J. OHMER.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Death of Captain Hall.

W. H. Hall, of 20 Stewart street, Brooklyn, died September 19 after an illness of two years. He was born at Oyster Bay 72 years ago and was the captain of a whaling vessel for many years, retiring from a sailor's life about twenty years ago. Since that time he had successfully conducted a florist business near the entrance to Evergreen cemetery. He was very popular in the East New York section of Brooklyn, where he was familiarly known as Captain Hall. He leaves a widow and daughter. Interment was at Westfield, Mass.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Death of John Barclay.

John Barclay, the venerable seed traveler, died at his home at Providence, R. I., September 18, of heart disease, being found dead in bed. He was a native of Aberdeen, Scotland, born in 1830, and for many years traveled for Benj. Reid & Co. He came to this country about twelve years ago, and was employed by John Gardiner & Co., Philadelphia, and later by Vaughan. He had made his home at Providence since last April. He is survived by a widow and three grown children, all in Europe. J.

DAVENPORT, IA.—Allison & Littig have completed a new greenhouse. Koltzan & Meyers were the builders.

LAKE CHARLES, LA.—J. Neuvander has just returned from an extended trip to Central and South America.

STEUBENVILLE, O.—Miss Jennie McDowell will go into business with Miss Agnes L. Wells, the firm continuing at the present stand as Wells & McDowell.

IN the advertisement of James King, Elmhurst, Ill., in the issue of September 24, some of the type did not show up as it should, notably in the item regarding Pæonia alba plena, which is $2.50 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

PLEASE discontinue my advertisement; all my surplus stock is sold and I am getting handful of letters by every mail, all in want of the stock advertised in your paper. THE REVIEW is all right; I shall try it again when I have surplus stock.—JOHN BENNETT, Blue Point, L. I., N. Y.

BUFFALO.

Current Comment.

So far we have escaped frost, and yet outside flowers are on the ragged edge and will soon be all over. Dahlias are little grown in this neighborhood. As-ters are about over. Fine gladioli come in from Rochester. That most brilliant, fine keeping variety, 1900, seems unequalled in its class. Cosmos, that most beautiful decorative flower, is about ready to give us its pretty blossoms when Jack Frost appears. So we will soon be busy again with the same old reliables that form our stock in trade year after year. Roses are gaining in quantity and quality and good ones find a ready sale. A few violets are seen occasionally, but they are as yet only an excuse for the sweet little blue gems. Some very fair carnations are offered and find a ready sale. The best we have seen yet are Boston Market for white, the Marquis and Joost for pink, and of course the wonderful Enchantress in its color. A bunch of this just now reminds you of the joyous time when you first saw developing, day by day, the vigor, habit and bursting buds of the immortal Lawson. Later on we expect to feast our vision on a much larger bench of Prosperity, and perhaps Harlowarden will start us dancing the Highland Fling, but that is to come later.

There are a good lot of 'mums in this neighborhood. C. F. Christensen has a fine house of useful varieties. J. H. Rebstock, on Elmwood avenue, has several benches in good order. Mrs. Schoenhut, on William street, has a new house, erected last spring, filled with good commercial varieties, and William Eahman, who rents the Troup establishment at Corfu, has 12,000 very promising plants. David J. Scott, who runs papa's place at the above village, has 1,500 single-stemmed Robert Halliday. This fine yellow seems very early this year. Buds the size of silver dollars and showing color should mean flowers to cut by October 10. D. J. S. has also a very fine dark seedling, to which he is very attentive and which he has named Edith. It is his intention eventually to discard all other varieties.

It has not been our good luck to meet many of the visitors who have called late, but we did not miss them all. J. D. Eisele, of Riverton, and G. D. Clark, of Henry A. Dreer, both found their way out to Corfu and we felt honored; also Mr. Miller and wife, of East New York. L. I., just on a little holiday trip, and Edward Fancourt, who talks ribbons so glibly and artistically for S. S. Pennock. These were a few of the visitors, and there was another one, whom we are always glad to see, Phil Hauswirth, of Chicago. It is some weeks since he was here, but we still recollect his remarks. They did not seem to relate to wholesaler, retailer or the grower. He said: "The track was fine, especially for mud horses;" "attendance poor;" "odds good;" "dope correct;" "talent off" and much other technical phraseology which was all Sanscrit to me. W. S.

WHEN a man's advertising shows that he is thoroughly interested in his business, his business is sure to become interesting to others.

GARDENING UNDER GLASS

HENRY MILLER, at Lincoln and Balmoral avenues, Chicago, has built five connected houses 23x150 and planted them all to lettuce. It is a fine range.

LETTUCE.

Lettuce seed should be sown at regular intervals, according to requirements. We usually begin sowing for the first indoor crop about the middle of September, so that we can have them ready to succeed those grown in frames, which we depend on to supply us until around the holidays. Though we have had lettuce in eight weeks from time of sowing, it is better to allow them about ten weeks, as progress so much depends on the brightness of the weather. Suitability of the house and situation must also have considerable influence on the length of time required to mature, and the grower can only judge for himself what allowance he must make in his individual case.

In sowing we prefer to use flats about two inches in depth. This depth gives the water a chance of quickly draining off and obviates the danger of the soil becoming sour. We prefer to use a light, free soil rather than one that is too retentive; the little plants not only do better in this, but they are easier taken out without damaging the roots when pricking off. It is poor policy when sowing the seeds to sow too thickly; rather sow a flat or two more and sow thinly, so that there will be no danger of the plants crowding one another until they are large enough to prick off. Pricking off should not be neglected, but should be done just as soon as the plants are large enough to handle, so that their progress will receive as little check as possible. One of the secrets of lettuce forcing is to keep the plants growing steadily from start to finish.

A night temperature of from 45 to 50 degrees is quite high enough for young plants, allowing a rise of about 15 degrees by sun heat. A light, airy situation will keep the plants stocky and guard against thinness of texture in the leaves. The most troublesome insect enemy that the lettuce grower has to fight is greenfly. This sometimes attacks the plants in a small stage, and as prevention is better than cure, it is a good plan to have tobacco stems freely distributed in the vicinity of the young plants. W. S. CROYDON.

HEATING LETTUCE HOUSES.

I have two houses 28x125 feet, twelve feet to ridge, glass on one end only and three feet in the south wall. Have a tubular boiler with forty-three 3-inch flues fourteen feet long. I would like to use hot water without using 4-inch pipes and the returns would better be on the side walls as we want to use the houses for lettuce. What size of chimney is required? Can it be arranged to use steam in severe weather? R. Z.

Each house will require fourteen lines of 2-inch pipes to maintain 45 degrees to 50 degrees on the coldest nights, with water circulation, open system, or if with a pressure system, the tank being at least ten or twelve feet above the coils, twelve lines would answer. The arrangement of pipes would be two flows and two returns on each side wall, two flows on top of center column, with two returns well up on each of the two side columns. The smoke stack should be eighteen or twenty inches in diameter and about thirty to thirty-five feet high above the top of the boiler. A combination steam and water system can be arranged, but it is better to stick to either one or the other and have it perfectly planned.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

NEW ORLEANS.

Horticultural Society Meets.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society met September 18, President Joseph Steckler occupying the chair. A communication was received from the National Nut Growers' Association, which is to meet in this city, at Audubon park, October 28-31, requesting the New Orleans horticulturists to take part in the proceedings. It was decided to have the association represented at the convention, and the sum of $25 was voted for entertainment purposes.

Mr. Newsham, who has charge of the preparations for the exhibit at the St. Louis exposition, reported that he is getting along in a very satisfactory manner. Among the plants already on hand he has twenty-four varieties of large-sized palms, and he expects to have altogether thirty-five to forty varieties. Mrs. Anna S. Kouns, of No. 1218 St. Andrew street, was the first non-member of the association to send specimens for the exhibit. She sent two splendid Boston ferns.

Messrs. Valdejo, Chopin and Papworth, of those who represented the association at the recent convention of the national association of florists held in Milwaukee, each gave an account of his observations and experiences, the gist of which was that the florists of New Orleans have much to learn in regard to the profitable raising of flowers. The men of the north know how to grow flowers, even if at considerable expense, and they know just what kinds to grow for the market, and they get big prices. New Orleans ought to control the market for palms, ferns and even rubber plants, gardenias and carnations. The only essentials are proper houses, proper men and proper ground. The florists here could, by finding a débouché for their products, make a fortune, because they can grow flowers, palms and ferns fifty per cent cheaper than the florists in the north.

LAURELBRANCH, N. C.

The trade in galax leaves this season promises to be of considerable importance, as the demand is always good and the season's crop is above an average in quality in this locality. But bronze leaves are likely to be from two to three weeks later than usual owing to the absence of frost, which usually reaches here by September 15. Were it not for this trade many of the poorer classes would suffer, as they depend on the galax trade largely for a living.

M. L. Henderson has gone out of business.

Woodruff & Miles, of Cherry Lane, are preparing for the trade.

Mrs. Alice Bryan has removed to Trap Hill, where a new branch railroad will soon be built.

It now looks as if 2,000 cases will go from this locality during the season. Vegetation is still as green as in midsummer. B.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres. F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

WM. T. TERRELL, Bloomfield, Ind., died September 22, of typhoid fever. He was 51 years of age, a native of Virginia and had built up a large nursery business. He leaves a wife and eight children.

NURSERY STOCK AT ST. LOUIS.

A large area is set aside at the St. Louis exposition for the reception of the distinctly American trees, shrubs and evergreens. Information as to new or desirable things which ought to be included in such a collection will be cordially appreciated, and growers are requested to participate, in order that a complete showing may be brought out. It may be added that full credit will be given all who join in this exhibit. A general acceptance of this invitation will certainly bring out an astonishing number of little-known things, having decorative value and possessing merits of hardiness and adaptability fitting them for general or special uses.

Plans have been arranged for an exhibit of all classes of fruit trees and plants that are offered for sale by nurserymen in all parts of the world. A sufficient area of desirable land comprising about ten acres has been assigned to the department of horticulture for this purpose. It is believed that these exhibits will be of interest to fruit growers, nurserymen and all interested in horticulture, for they will be made of nursery stock that is grown under unlike conditions in widely separated localities.

The leading nurserymen have generally signified their willingness to co-operate in making this exhibit an interesting as well as an instructive one. The different methods employed in propagating fruit trees will be shown, including a comparison of grafting and budding apple trees, spring and fall budding of the peach, top working the apple, etc. A collective exhibit of the nursery stock of all different fruits of the sizes usually offered for sale in the nurseries would afford a splendid opportunity to study the characteristics of the different varieties and types.

The outside strawberry plant exhibit is an interesting feature of the outdoor planting. A number of the exhibits are on the ground now. This exhibit will not only contain the standard varieties, but also new varieties that have been produced during recent years by plant breeding.

The exposition will, of course, assume no risk whatever as to the stock sent for exhibition in the department of horticulture. Every care will be taken to so place and cultivate it as to bring about the best results, but no guarantee is given or implied. Experienced gardeners will be employed, good soil and fertilizers furnished, plenty of water pipes laid within reach of every tree, shrub and plant, and every known precaution taken to secure the best conditions in each individual case.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O. Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 23d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis Mo., June, 1904.

It is reported that the autumnal weather has thus far been unusually favorable in the seed growing district at Erfurt, Germany.

THOMAS S. PRINE and Edson Potter, of Greensburg, Ind., have started in the field seed business at Toledo, the firm name being Prine & Potter.

THE steamship Gallia, due at New York September 21, broke a shaft in mid ocean and put into Halifax September 28. Among other consignments were three earloads of French and Dutch bulbs, consigned to Chicago houses, and representing a total value of about $10,000.

LATE reports from one of the principal seed corn growing sections of Ohio are not very assuring on the principal varieties used in the seed trade, late Mammoth and Evergreen. These are put down at a possible yield of from twenty-five to fifty per cent., the late sorts from forty to sixty per cent., the early varieties from sixty to ninety per cent. and about all the varieties of fall corn at from seventy-five to 100 per cent.

THE United States General Appraisers have sustained the protest of the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., in the matter of an importation of Phalaris arundinacea, deciding that it should be admitted duty free as a grass seed, but the act of the collector in assessing 30 per cent duty on Russian winter vetch and giant spurry seed is upheld. The giant spurry is Spergula maxima, not S. arvensis. The goods were entered at Newport News, Va., September 19, 1900, and decision reached September 18, 1903.

A CONFLICT has arisen over the adjustment of the loss on the seed warehouse of H. W. Buckbee, at Rockford, Ill. The majority of the companies interested say that they should be held only for the cost of the seeds rather than for the market value at the time of the fire. They have demanded an appraisal. Western Manager Sheldon, of the American, of Newark, and Security of New Haven, with headquarters in Rockford, has settled the loss for those companies on the basis of the market price at the time of the fire.

THERE was a session of the directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League at Chicago, September 25, at which seed crops and prices were discussed at length. Among those present were President F. W. Bruggerhof, New York; Secretary Burnet Landreth and W. Atlee Burpee, Philadelphia; S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; Albert McCullough, Cincinnati; L. L. May, St. Paul; F. W. Barteldes, Lawrence, Kan.; J. B. Rice, Jr., Cambridge, N. Y., and others. The Western Seedsmen's League discussed the same subjects at Chicago the day before.

VISITED PHILADELPHIA: James Comont, of Carter, Dunnett & Beal, London, England.

BARTEDES & Co., Lawrence, Kan., are erecting a three-story seed warehouse 50x140 at Oklahoma City, Okla., the investment to be $25,000.

THE Columbus Citizen recently printed an interesting illustrated account of the seed farm of the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus. It is stated that they have 250 acres in tomatoes this year.

ROSS E. LANGDON has bought the John Bachelor seed store at Utica, N. Y. Chas. Soder, for fourteen years with the house, will continue, carrying a full line of seeds, garden implements and supplies.

J. LELAND FOGG, an old and well known seedsman, died September 28 at his home at 481 Fullerton avenue, Chicago. He was 58 years of age and for the past six years had traveled for the Leonard Seed Co. Prior to that he was in business for himself. The funeral services were held at the chapel at Rose Hill cemetery September 30, Dr. Jenkin Lloyd Jones officiating.

C. P. COY & SON, Waterloo, Neb., write that "as yet there has been no frost in this section to do any damage, though it was a narrow escape for several nights and the weather yet remains cool. The light frost that we have had was rather a benefit to corn than otherwise, as it will start it to ripening up. Vine seed crops are very poor indeed, and there is now no chance for any improvement over present conditions. Owing to the long continued rains and cold weather the vines have died out without maturing fruit, and returns will be very light. Early sweet corn promises well and we do not look for any shortages on such varieties. The latter kinds require a continuance of the present good weather for two weeks or so yet."

THE Cox Seed Co., of San Francisco, is now sacking and shipping the crop of seeds, and Thos. Cox says orders are being generally filled in full. There is some shortage in onions and lettuce and sweet peas are the shortest in years, but on the whole it is the best all-round delivery for many seasons. Culinary peas were damaged by dry weather, the early varieties suffering particularly. Mr. Cox notes no falling off in the demand for sweet peas, in fact the call seems larger than ever. The labor problem is the most serious one the Pacific coast seed grower has to solve. "Chinese cheap labor" is now a myth. The Cox Co. is paying its Chinamen $1.50 a day. The cost of seed production is constantly increasing while the general trend of seed prices seems to be downward. It would seem as though the time had come for the seed growers to "get together." The growers are specializing more and more as to locality and soil for various seed crops as experience teaches, and the grower of a general line has his fields pretty well scattered.

THE ALLAN FIRE.

The following is a later account of the Allan Seed Co. fire at Sturgeon Bay, Wis.:

The large warehouse of the John H. Allan Seed Company was totally destroyed by fire about 3 o'clock on the morning of September 22. The loss will reach nearly $25,000. The fire started in the second story, which is used for a picking room, and when discovered the upper floor was a mass of flames. The Goodrich and Goodwin-Harries Companies' warehouses were also scorched, the burned structure being directly in the center of a large number of warehouses.

There were 7,000 bushels of seed peas destroyed, valued at $15,000; machinery, $1,500, and building, $5,000. The building is owned by Falk & Buchan and this is the second time in two years that the firms have been burned out.

RANDOM NOTES.

GENEVA, N. Y.—W. & T. Cass report a big planting season. They have a grand lot of Dracaena indivisa planted out.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y.—J. O. Graham is looking for a site of about ten acres on which to build a modern range of glass. Business demands it, he says.

AUBURN, N. Y.—Alfred Patrick is busy putting the finishing touches upon new rose houses. He has gone back to solid beds entirely. Archie, the oldest son and right-hand man, has taken a life partner and is receiving congratulations.

SCRANTON, PA.—George R. Clark has given up his greenhouses and can be found at the handsome store downtown. Marvin & Muir have a fine stand and do a business equal to the flourishing plant owned and run at Wilkesbarre by Mr. Marvin.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y.—J. C. Hatcher intended adding to his plant, but was prevented by labor troubles. George H. Hatcher is making improvements in the store, and returned from the convention filled with ideas. These gatherings are profitable to the boys.

ALLENTOWN, PA.—Ernest Ashley was a heavy prize winner at the annual fair held last week. He has made rapid strides since he located here about a year ago and has a large share of out-of-town trade. Horn & Co. are adding to their extensive plant and intend growing more roses.

ELMIRA, N. Y.—Parties here have received a letter from Harry Millatt, who is now located in the flourishing city of Portland, Ore., together with his picture, showing him walking the ties. Mr. Durand, who is the artist in Rawson's store, and with whom Harry labored for some time, believes there is a great future in the great west for such young men who adorn our profession.

BATAVIA, N. Y.—Paul Liebsch won the majority of first prizes at the county fair, closed this week. It is as good as a circus, attending some of these affairs, but I think the florist who stays out, either through indifference or other reasons, sometimes makes a mistake, owing to the large number of country folk who attend and who remember the florist as well as the stockman.

UTICA, N. Y.—“Doc” Rowland returned from a western trip convinced that Peter Crowe's fern, Brant's roses, Frank Baker's small ferns and his own carnations cannot be beaten, and have made the Grecian city famous. William Mathews is in the lead with orchids and chrysanthemums. Utica can boast of having well grown carnations, but just take a trip to Syracuse, which is close by, and see Marquisee's new sorts.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Fred Schlegel takes the palm for a house of Marie Louise violets. I have not seen anything to beat it. J. B. Keller's Sons are rushed with decorative work. The asters being grown by George Arnold cannot be excelled. F. Albert has opened a fine store here. He graduated from Riverton and Chicago and will no doubt find success in his venture. Colin Ogston has a splendid lot of Cattleya Bowringiana in flower, or rather a much improved type of that variety, being minus the dark tips. It is a beautiful flower. Some immense specimens of Platycerium grande can be seen here. The Kimball conservatories were made famous by our old friend, George Savage, and are well maintained by his successor. M.

The usual slump the latter part of last week and stock deteriorated as prices declined. The cooler weather Monday gave promise of some improvement in both respects, and it is likely that a steady market may from now on be dependent upon unless a flood of new roses, carnations and the chrysanthemums should all arrive together.

PHILADELPHIA DAHLIA SHOW.

The first annual dahlia show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, held September 15 and 16, in Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, was the greatest dahlia exhibition ever held in this country. It had been talked of for some years among dahlia lovers of the society, but the trouble had always been the expense of the prize list, as liberal premiums had to be offered in order to get out competition from the best growers all over the country. It looked as if the matter would have to fall through when the leading Philadelphia seedsmen came to the rescue by guaranteeing the prize list, which amounted to $217.50. This was subscribed by Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Henry F. Michell Co., William Henry Maule, W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Johnson & Stokes and W. P. Peacock.

These firms in arranging to furnish the cash for the prizes stipulated that it must be a free exhibition, in order to see just how the dahlia took with the people. The result was more than satisfactory, as the first evening the large hall was packed. Hundreds of people turned away because they could not get in, while many waited until others came out before they went in. It was difficult to pass along the aisles and it was a case, the great part of the evening, of "going with the crowd."

The popularity of the dahlia as an exhibition flower was assured and on every hand could be heard exclamations of surprise and astonishment at the wondrous diversity of forms, sizes and colors. Dahlias were everywhere, from the large, graceful, decorative exquisitely beautiful cactus, through the noble show, the striking fancy, the little pompon, and especially in the singles. The latter class, headed by the gorgeous Twentieth Century on three foot stems, in large vases, seemed to attract the most attention. It was surprising to see what attention was given to the various singles. This class now embraces as great a diversity of form as any of the double classes, as we now have single cactus, single fancy, single show and even singles dressed up with collars (Collarette).

The writer has attended hundreds of exhibitions at various times, and he has never seen as much diversity between all kinds of cut flowers combined at a show as was seen at this exhibition among the dahlias itself. On a side table running around the wall was a display arranged on a plateau of sphagnum moss, covered with fern leaves, on which were arranged specimen blooms of the different classes of double dahlias, making a fine study of the different varieties. Back of this plateau were vases of the various single varieties, making a suitable and pleasing border. Following the dahlias were various perennials which were shown to good advantage.

Another table was devoted to show, fancy and decorative dahlias in competition. Here was another study of varieties, as the blooms were arranged in hyacinth glasses, simply showing the face of the dahlias, a very crude way of exhibiting flowers, but yet considered the only way in Boston and England, but now obsolete in the greater part of this country. This was arranged for at this show, however, in order to show as great diversity as possible, also to allow the study of the individual flower. At another table were the arrangements of the cactus. One exhibitor placed his blooms in tumblers, while another had them arranged on long, graceful stems in vases, and it was instructive to notice the remarks of the various visitors. Many of them admired the arrangement of the flowers, face up, but the consensus of opinion was most in favor of those arranged gracefully in vases.

In the classes entered for vases of blooms, the dahlia was seen to best advantage, as the back of the flower as well as the face could be seen, and only varieties with good stems and good carrying qualities would hold up. The singles and pompons were shown in vases only, and a fine effect was the result.

One of the most striking features of this exhibition was the high-class flowers exhibited by the amateur growers. There were at least a half dozen entries for the vase of fifty blooms, 50 varieties, in which the quality was fine, and the arrangement was striking. In fact, this is one of the merits of the dahlia. In many flowers, a mixed assortment shows to very poor effect, but in the dahlia the colors are so gorgeous that a bouquet of varieties seems perfectly natural. An interesting feature of this exhibition was that in spite of the storm on Wednesday, many people were in the hall, and in the afternoon it was quite well filled.

A matter which this exhibition brings up, is the need of a national system of judging. At this show it was a case of size, regardless of quality, and a full, deep, well-formed flower, with a perfect center was passed by for a large flower, regardless of the color or form or the condition of the center. This matter should be taken up by the Society of American Florists and the writer believes a dahlia committee composed of representatives of all branches, as well as dahlia growers, should be appointed by the society to take charge of the dahlia question. Arrange for a system of judging by points, the same as any other flower, with sub-committees on nomenclature, certifying of new varieties, etc. It is a burning question in dahlia culture and must be taken up sooner or later.

The dahlia is now past the stage where the individual flower only is used. It is now a factor as a cut flower in its season, as much as the chrysanthemum or any other flower. Its commercial value being assured, it should be judged as such. One peculiar thing we find everywhere; that is, whereas the up-to-date dahlia grower is willing to concede a great many points, the old time growers still claim there is nothing but the flower. We believe that at every dahlia exhibition it is to the benefit of the dahlia, of the show, and every one concerned to have the exhibits as varied as possible, and not only to show it in every class of flower, but the different classes in as many forms as possible. This makes more of a diversity and makes it more interesting. We believe that some flowers should be shown without their stems in order to have a variety study; but we believe the greatest interest is to show also for decorative work and effect, where varieties can be studied not only as to formation and color but as to lasting qualities, stems, etc.

We sincerely trust that the dahlia subject will be taken up and acted upon at the next meeting of the Society of American Florists and as a result the second annual exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society will be as great an advance over the first, as this year's was over any other ever held in the country.

AURORA, ILL.

W. L. Smith has taken his greenhouses down and gone out of business. As yet he has made no plans for the future.

J. M. Smely has built a new office and store and rebuilt some old glass, giving him about 4,500 feet of additional room.

The C. B. & Q. railroad's greenhouses here are planted, nearly all to carnations, and Lawson has much the largest space. The flowers are grown for the dining cars.

Stock looks well with all here. Some carnations are undersized but healthy. Trade is good. Less bulbous stock than usual will be grown this season.

QUEENS, N. Y.—Alfred H. Walker has a nice crop of chrysanthemums which will be ready for market about October 15.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.

A. J. Schmutz has improved his houses by the addition of asphalt walks. His plant is in fine shape for the winter season. A house of single-stem chrysanthemums with stems from four to six feet long will be a fine sight. Carnations are in extra fine shape. A house of roses is in nice condition. Mr. Schmutz and wife spent their vacation with Louis Schmutz, of Brooklyn.

Mrs. F. H. Pratt has returned from a visit to Hartford, Conn., and vicinity. Frank was too busy to accompany her. Carnations are in fine shape. Some plants housed in July are producing fine flowers. A house of chrysanthemums is coming finely.

Geo. H. Phelps, of Blackinton, has housed his usual amount of plants and they are in extra fine shape, notwithstanding they have been flooded twice during the season. Some Lawsons are throwing good flowers with stems of fair length. George has a bench of violets and he says he is going to show the boys how to grow violets this winter.

The business has been very quiet during the summer; only an occasional funeral order helps to keep things moving.

D.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

Owing to increasing business and finding it necessary to secure more commodious quarters, A. Washburn & Sons have purchased the lot at No. 318 N. Main street and will next season erect a modern three-story building, entirely for their own use.

F. A. Baller has removed his greenhouses and rebuilt them on less valuable ground, the land formerly occupied by his plant having become very valuable for residence purposes.

The season's building here consisted of 15,000 feet by Washburn & Sons, 2,000 feet by W. T. Hempstead and 1,000 feet by A. R. Knowles.

Our florists are all through planting up and stock is in a most excellent condition, never better at this season. UNO.

GROWERS WATCH FOR FRAUD.

THE H. A. STOOHOFF CO.,

GENTLEMEN:— 116 West St., New York City.

I procured through a New York seedsman 200 lbs. of your FUMIGATING KIND TOBACCO POWDER and it was not the kind you ship; it is more like clay and will not burn at all; their agent assured me that his firm sold yours. As I am entirely out please send at once 200 lbs. FUMIGATING KIND. It is superseding tobacco stems in this neighborhood.

Very truly,

EDWARD W. CLARK.

The above is one of many letters we receive, and we wish to advise all that THE FUMIGATING KIND TOBACCO POWDER is not genuine if our "guarantee tag of satisfaction or money back" is not attached to every bag. In every case similar to Mr. Clark's no tags were attached, this alone showing fraud. Buy direct from us.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are all waiting for chrysanthemums to appear in fair quantities and then our trouble will be over for a few weeks. We have finished with asters and as roses and carnations are almost off crop at the present time there is nothing to do except fall back on our usual autumn flower. I passed through the chrysanthemum belt about a week ago and, although I think the flowers will be somewhat later than usual this season, the prospects for a big crop are very good and will, I think, come up to expectations.

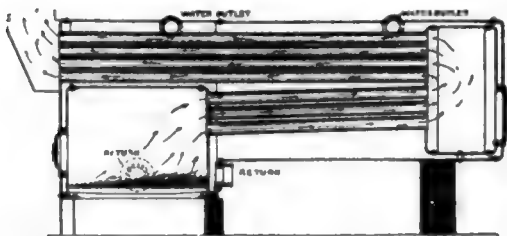

Notes.

J. A. Carbone, the well known Berkeley carnation grower, had the misfortune to have his residence burned to the ground on Wednesday morning, but the flames did not travel to his carnation houses, situated in the rear, and Mr. Carbone feels very thankful for that. His loss will be about $5,000.

San Francisco was treated to a novel show in the exhibition of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society's display of dahlias at the Palace hotel last week, and its success was due largely to the efforts of J. W. Bagge. G.

Testimonial

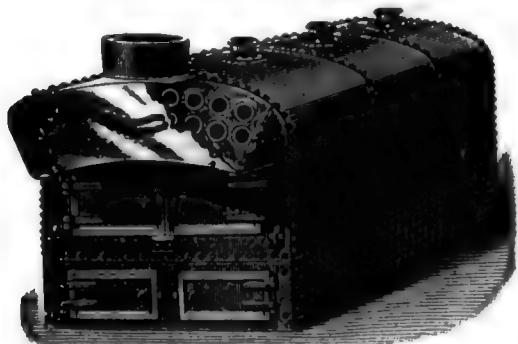

TOUGHKEMAMON, Chester Co., Pa., Dec. 29, 1902.
MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.

Yours very truly, ROBERT C. BANCROFT.

DRAPERY STUDIES.

I—Drooping.

"Any old way" is applicable to no phase of decorative work. A worker in greens may form his plan long beforehand, or upon the last rung of the ladder, with material in hand, but whenever he does, there must be a plan in mind of what will be soon growing from his hands, else the product will be a meaningless jumble. On the spur of the moment is all right for details, but the general plan can scarcely be an off hand product.

According to the circumstances and surroundings, choose some definite type of design and let that style be the dominant one of the whole decoration. This does not mean that every drape shall be like every other one in the whole plan, but let most of the material be used in harmony with this one idea, and the few variations will serve to emphasize the main theme. An instance of this is seen in the illustration herewith, of a simple wedding decoration in the drooping style of drapery.

In nature we find this style in straight festoons like those of the Florida moss which grows in the live oak forests of the south, and this same festoon interrupted or caught is the festoon so largely adopted in conventional design, as in the upper foreground of our study illustration.

In the analysis of this decoration observe that the lines of drapery do not come from nowhere. They have definite centers and terminations. This particular decoration was chosen for this example on account of the distinctness of the lines. It is not an elaborate arrangement, hence the lines of drapery can be traced easily. There are three centers or sources of drapery lines. One is the upper right hand corner of the mirror. Here are placed about six or nine strings of separated smilax tied together at the heavy ends. From this place as a center the sprays of smilax form drapery lines extending down and out in all directions, catching here and there on another festoon or any inviting projection, nowhere obscuring any great portion of the mirror. Another cluster of about as many strings is started from the upper corner of the door frame partly visible on the left. A knot of drapery belonging to this center falls to the top of the seat below and reaches in a slender spray to the floor, thus balancing the effect of the long garland that extends to the base of the pillar on the right. Another part from this center is draped along the ceiling toward this pillar. A third bunch of strings festoons the pillar, joins the chandelier several feet behind, and completes the line of festoons to the extreme right. The heavy parts of the drapery are at the center, and the terminals are never abrupt. The light, delicate ends naturally belong there.

As should be the case, the bulk of the decorations are kept well up to be more easily seen. The lines of the graduated drapery are distinct and all the centers of drapery are connected. No matter how heavy or elaborate these same draperies might be made, these two principles should obtain; namely, heavy lines at the center, gradually becoming lighter toward the vanishing point, and the whole scheme connected either in fact or in attempt.

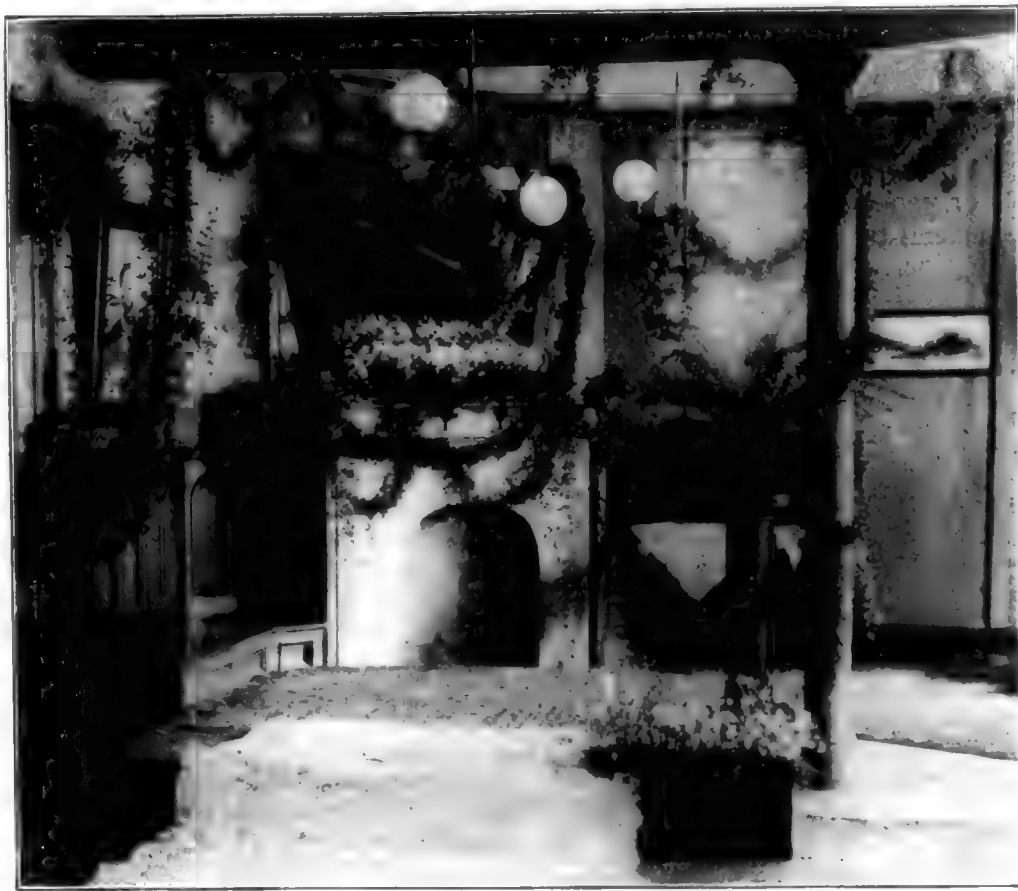

Were this same corner to be decorated in autumn colors, a very different procedure would be followed. Panels and masses of rich coloring would be used, both with foliage and flowers. This style of drapery is the most commonly used and easiest of execution.

A long line of festoons like that of the upper foreground serves to lengthen the space in which it is used. That was one of the purposes of its use here. The

with this variety, that I am forced to believe there is some truth in the claim that it is running out. The trouble most commonly noted is a softening of the foliage, which gradually increases, even under the best conditions, until the leaves begin to drop. There is little doubt but that the high temperature to which we are forced to expose it in order to make it productive during the winter months must after a time have a baneful effect on its constitution.

When a variety refuses to do well under the same conditions and treatment in which it formerly flourished, and when it shows itself much more susceptible to all and every trouble there is evidence to lead to the conclusion that its constitution is being undermined. So far as I can learn every Meteor grower has contented himself with wood from stock forced in this manner, for propagating purposes, and of course has to use it at the time when it is nearly the height of the forcing season, when the wood and foliage must necessarily be at their softest stage. Under such circumstances it is astonishing that the symptoms of deterioration have not become apparent before now.

A brother grower made a suggestion to me recently, that the best way to overcome this difficulty would be to grow as many plants as would be required for space between the pillar and door seemed almost too contracted for the purpose until this line of festoons, aided by the narrowing of the space behind, relieved that appearance. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

ROSES.

Difficulties with Meteor.

I have recently had so many complaints about Meteors failing to do so well as in former years, and these in many instances coming from growers who used to be noted for their success stock raising at a lower temperature in order to regain the vitality lost by overforcing. There might be some value in this and those who are afflicted and have the room to spare might find it profitable to give it a trial.

In some notably heavy loam soil the conditions are the reverse of this. The plants seem to be increasing in vigor from year to year and the blooms getting larger and deeper in color. Where such soils are available and its culture carefully studied there is no doubt but that it is one of the most profitable varieties, and that there is a demand for roses of that color is evidenced by the fact that where this rose fails growers are manfully battling with that cranky variety, Liberty, to fill the vacancy, some having even requisitioned the old Wootton to take its place.

From my own experience with it this season so far I am entirely satisfied, it being more vigorous and productive than in any former year. RIBES.

CHRYSANTHEMUM COMMITTEES.

President Arthur Herrington has announced the following committees to examine chrysanthemum seedlings and sports in their respective cities, October 10, 17, 24 and 31 and November 7, 14, 21 and 28, 1903:

Boston, Mass.—E. A. Wood, chairman, Boston Flower Market, care of John Walsh; Wm. Nicholson and James Wheeler.

New York, N. Y.—Eugene Dailedouze, chairman, care New York Cut Flower

Co., Twenty-sixth street and Sixth avenue; Wm. H. Duckham and Wm. Plumb.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A. B. Cartledge, chairman, 1514 Chestnut street; Wm. K. Harris and John Westcott.

Chicago, Ill.—James S. Wilson, chairman, care J. B. Deamud, 51 Wabash avenue; Edwin A. Kanst and E. Wienhoeber.

Cincinnati, O.—Richard Witterstaetter, chairman, to Jabez Elliott Flower Market, care of Janitor; James B. Allan and Wm. Jackson.

Exhibits to receive attention from the committees must in all cases be prepaid to destination and the entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week preceding examination. Attention of the exhibitors is called to the action taken at the last meeting of the C. S. the Christmas plants than with the Easter lot.

Acacias.

Along now will also come the Acacia armata and metrosideros (bottle brush). These are usually from pots and don't want any root pruning. See that the ball of roots is wet before you pot them, and keep them for the next three months, at least, in a night temperature of 40 degrees. The acacias are very apt to be too early for Easter unless you keep them very cool.

Rhododendrons.

The rhododendrons seemed to be in rather better demand last spring than any previous year, but that was perhaps only local. A large price should be obtained for them, as they are bulky plants, but they need not occupy the greenhouse all winter, as do the Indian azaleas. Those who are blessed with a root house and can plunge the ball of roots of these plants in soil and keep the soil moderately moist have an ideal place to winter them, better than a greenhouse, for these evergreen shrubs, as we all know, are nearly or quite hardy in our northern states. If you have not the convenience of a root house, then a damp frame will do, and keep out what frost you can. Some varieties force in less time than others. Two months before selling time will be early enough to pot up any of them. Don't make the mistake of letting the soil they are plunged in get dry. That would be entirely contrary to their natural winter condition out of doors.

Shrubs for Forcing.

Hardy shrubs will be forced this winter, perhaps more than ever. Some are grown here, but the majority are grown and prepared for forcing in Europe—lilac, deutzia, viburnum, cydonia, wistaria and perhaps others. As these are all hardy shrubs, a cold frame is all that is needed for them when received, and pot them up when you bring them in to force. If you had the convenience to pot them now I don't believe it would be the slightest advantage. They are deciduous and would make no roots until you started them in heat. There is, however, occasion to be careful of these shrubs, even if they are hardy under natural conditions. Remember they are most likely packed and shipped before any hard frost occurs on the other side and they have been in boxes in the hold of a vessel for ten days, perhaps more. Now that is not at all a cold place and when these shrubs are unpacked they are in poor order to withstand a sudden severe freeze. Get the roots plunged and watered as soon as possible and let frost approach them only gradually. I mention this because a few years ago I saw 200 fine plants of Deutzia gracilis exposed the first night after unpacking to 20 degrees of frost. It left them useless and they were never exposed for sale.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

ROOT PRUNING PALMS.

I have large latanias and phoenix in half barrels that were formerly used for kerosene. The roots are lifting the palms out of the tubs. The plants are in fine healthy condition. Can anything be done to keep them in the same-sized barrels or must they have larger tubs? These plants have about nine feet spread, but my employer tells me that in some way northern florists grow plants very large

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Handling the Azaleas.

Very soon the Indian azaleas and other shrubby plants that we import from Europe will be here. Sometimes the ball of earth will be quite dry by the time they reach you. It is well known that the ball of roots and soil, if left entire, would need a pot larger than is necessary for the growth of the plants and too large for appearance sake. Take a sharp carving knife and cut cleanly off an inch or two all around. If you want to put the plant in a 6, 7 or 8-inch pot, then cut off the roots until the ball is just a trifle less than those sizes. It is no advantage to have an inch of fresh soil all around the ball. They won't occupy it with roots in three years and it would be an actual detriment to the health of the azalea. You hope to sell the plant in six months and with 90 per cent of all the azaleas imported that is the end of them. After you have the roots trimmed dip the ball in a tub of water for a few moments, or long enough to thoroughly wet it through. If the ball of earth is dry all the watering you can give it in the ordinary way will not wet it sufficiently.

You don't see the potting stick used much nowadays, but here is an operation where a blunt stick, say an inch broad and one-fourth of an inch thick, is almost a necessity, for you want to get the new soil down firmly in the space between the sides of the pot and the ball. The soil in which these azaleas are grown, in Belgium at least, seems to be a dark, decomposed sandy peat, such soil as few of us have here; and although the azaleas will often remain in the best of health two or three years with us without making much, if any, roots in the soil we give them, yet I do not think that the peat is the only soil that will grow azaleas well. We have seen them root vigorously in a good, yellow loam. Two-thirds of yellow loam and one-third of leaf mold would do very well, and the comparatively small shift you give them on arriving will, if not sold, carry them over the second winter in good shape.

These newly imported plants, after being potted, should be stood in a cool, shaded house. A spraying every bright morning for two weeks will help them to get over their sea voyage, after which they want neither shade nor spraying. Large importers of these plants place them in frames, where they have the means of keeping them above the freezing point, and a good place it is.

For Early and Late Forcing.

Azaleas that you have summered over, if properly managed, make better Easter plants than those imported the previous October, particularly some of the finest varieties. The flowers may not be so large individually, but there will be more of them. In some varieties, notably the well-known Bernard Andre and B. Andre alba, and others, the recently imported will come largely blind, which they never do on plants summered over in pots.

Contrary to what might be expected, the plants you have grown all summer and which are full of buds, with roots undisturbed, are not the plants to force for Christmas. The newly imported plants are the ones for that purpose. By the first of November you can select those you want in flower at the holidays. How many varieties are useful for this purpose I don't pretend to know; there may be some new ones. Three reliable stand-bys that can easily be had in flower by Christmas in a night temperature of 65 degrees are the unequalled Deutsche Perle, which is all you want in white, Simon Mardner, dark pink, and the beautiful Vervaeana, white and pink, variegated or mottled. Give your forcing plants a daily spraying and plenty of water. You have perhaps noticed that if you let an azalea wilt its flowers, they will remain wilted and the sale of your plant is gone. This more readily occurs and is more hurtful with in very small tubs. But having been as far north as Maine, all plants seem to me to grow equally well with the same care, either north or south. A. B.

Such a condition frequently arises where these strong-growing palms are kept in the same tubs for a number of years, and growers sometimes resort to root pruning in order to keep such plants within bounds. But it would be better to defer such an operation until early next summer, the season of active growth being so nearly over, and in the meantime the edges of the tubs could be built up an inch or so with a strip of wood to allow more space for watering. The root pruning simply consists of cutting away the mass of coarse roots that have accumulated in the bottom of the tub, a strong and sharp knife being the handiest tool for this purpose. Then dig out as much soil as can be readily removed without injury to the remaining roots, and repot the plant in the same tub.

W. H. TAPLIN.

VIOLETS FROM THE FIELD.

Circumstances are frequently such that you cannot do things in the order that you prefer and think best, and then "the next best thing" is to do the very best possible. This is what we have been doing. One of our violet houses has been overhauled this season and we thought to have it in shape to plant early, but, alas, the wet weather and various other matters delayed us so that we have only just finished planting it with clumps from the field, while we much prefer to have them grown in the house.

This is the first time in a number of years that we have left a house to be planted from the field in the fall; however, they are looking up nicely, despite the warm, pleasant weather which we are having now and which we should have had during the summer.

But the planting now should not be delayed, as it is getting where we are liable to have storms that will make it mussy and bad for lifting the plants and then, too, if it gets wet and cold the plants are so brittle that you will lose much more of the foliage than is good, and there will be considerable loss at the best. We consider it best to clean the pin runners, etc., off thoroughly before planting them, for two reasons; it is much better for the plants as there is not so much to exhaust the roots while they are taking new hold, and, again, it saves much back-aching work a little later. Of course the weather and other circumstances may compel you to house them in a hurry, so that you cannot do this, but if not, clean them by all means.

After planting them we find a "Boston rose" the best spray for the hose as this does not scatter the water and you get it right where you want it on the plant, washing it clean of the soil that will get on it more or less, and settling the soil nicely about the roots.

We keep the temperature as low as possible with plenty of ventilation; in fact, all that we can get without draughts and currents. The house will also need a light shading for a few days until the plants get their new start, when it should be removed unless it should be an unseasonable, warm sunny season, when it would be well to hold it till the end of same.

We have not yet marketed any flowers from the other houses, as we prefer to hold them back till later and they are better. Go over them often and keep a sharp lookout for everything, keeping them in the best of shape, remembering that the most trying part of the violet season is near at hand. Be sure and keep them cool. R. E. SHUPHELT.

ST. LOUIS WORLD'S FAIR.

The accompanying illustration shows a portion of the rose garden at the St. Louis World's Fair, photographed September 17. This section of the rose plantation is on the east front of the Agriculture building. The roses in the foreground are Magna Charta, planted May 26, 1903. They average four feet in height. The bed in the rear is Clio, 756 plants put in the ground May 19, 1903. They have made a good growth, the shoot held by the man in the photograph measuring four feet six inches in length. The bed in the distance, at the right, are the first roses planted, April 22, 1903, and there the growth is over six feet on some of the plants. The terrace back of the roses was being seeded the day the photograph was taken and at the date of writing, September 30, the new grass quite covers the ground. The beds on the terrace are to be planted with bulbs this fall, to be followed by bedding stock next spring. In the background is a short section of the Agriculture building, 100 feet from door to door, just one-fifteenth of the entire length of the building.

The other illustration shows the Horticulture building as it appeared September 17, 1903.

THE HARDY PHLOXES.

Given reasonable treatment, phloxes are grand subjects, either in a bed or border, alone or among other plants. Nowadays they are so dwarf in habit as compared to what they used to be that many varieties may be planted close to the front of the border, and in this way they are useful to fill up gaps and give brightness when many of the regular occupants have passed their best. Some say that not more than half a dozen growths should be allowed to a root or stool. Perhaps so, if extra large blooms are needed, but for ordinary border decoration double that number is not too many. Two, three and four-year-old plants make the best display, especially if the weakly shoots are cut away early, allowing more space for the stronger to develop fully. An annual mulching of half-decayed stable manure in June will be advantageous if the weather is dry for any length of time. Copious supplies of liquid manure when growth is in full flush will induce luxuriance of leafage, which is a precursor of fine flower heads. A top-dressing, too, in April of half-decayed manure, wood ashes, road grit, or decayed vegetable refuse will aid growth at a time when the succulent shoots are showing well above the soil, says E. Molyneux, the well known writer in the Gardeners' Magazine.

Deeply-dug and well-manured soil is the first essential to success. Where the soil is heavy, therefore cold and retentive of moisture, planting in spring is preferable to any other time. In such a soil slugs are too troublesome when autumn planting is practiced. The succulent crowns seem too tempting to be passed over. When dividing old roots a common mistake is that of selecting the portion nearest the center for planting, whereas this is weakened by exhaustion. The stocky, vigorous growths at the outside are much more preferable, as they quickly grow into plants calculated to give extra strong flower spikes.

Mr. Molyneux advises everyone to propagate a few plants annually, as he finds single-stemmed stock most useful for filling up gaps in the fronts of herbaceous borders. Such plants grow shorter than established plants, give one good truss, and are quite effective in every respect. Such plants, too, are available for taking the place of those worn out in the middle or the back of the border, as the case may be.

This grower has about 100 varieties but the average man can use but a few. He places Tapis Blanc at the head of the white-flowered varieties. The habit of growth is dwarf—eighteen inches; the blooms measure quite two inches in diameter, forming a compact, solid spike. Amazone, three feet, is a charming variety; the flowers are of good form, and of the purest white. Josephine Gerbaux, four feet six inches, has a deep crimson eye, surrounded with white, and is a striking variety. Pantheon, three feet, is rosy-salmon, extra large blooms. Eclair, two feet six inches, has enormous flowers, compact spike, carmine, suffused with primrose, the center salmon-rose, veined carmine. L'Aiglon is rosy-carmine, with carmine eye. Miss Pemberton, one foot six inches, salmon-pink, crimson eye, he says, is quite the best of dwarf-growing kinds. Flambeau, two feet, orange-scarlet, has a deeper eye. Gourdan, three feet, rose, lighter eye, makes a good spike. Etna, three feet six inches, orange-scarlet, maroon center, quite one of the best of bright-colored varieties, better than Coquelicot. Edouard Lockroy is velvety violet, extra large blooms fully one and three-quarter inches in diameter.

tage, as later, when pressure of business demands all attention, important details are apt to be left out.

First of all prepare a sufficient quantity of soil to be used expressly for potting the cuttings as they come from the sand. Use entirely new soil, discarding that which has at any time been used in the houses for any crop or upon which carnations have ever been grown. Rotted sod, from good grass land, that has lain in a pile for a year or more and to which no animal or chemical manure has been added is the ideal soil for the purpose.

The cutting as it comes from the sand should be put on the plainest kind of diet, the object being to obtain a slow, sturdy growth, the effect of which will be to produce a season of partial rest. Temperature will, of course, play an important part, but this subject of rest will be enlarged upon in due season.

Locate the pile outside within convenient reach of the hose in case the soil should become dry. If you have an unheated soil shed, so much the better; if not, cover with straw, as soon as the frost forms a crust on the surface, to prevent further freezing. Later add a covering of boards, tar paper or other material to shield from rain or melting snow. Left in this state it is an easy matter to get in a supply of perfectly sweet soil when needed.

The propagating sand should be gotten on the ground and if necessary screened to remove gravel, stones or other objectionable matter. It will be best to leave it exposed to the action of several frosts before putting in the bench.

Last year I described the construction of a brick-bottomed propagating bench which we have used with great success and, while not absolutely necessary, brick give a great advantage over boards. Besides being indestructible, the drainage is perfect, preventing the sand from becoming in the least soggy. The heat from the pipes underneath is absorbed by the brick and imparted to the sand in a uniform gentle manner very desirable.

Before filling with sand the brick should be coated with lime wash to which pulverized sulphur was added before boiling ceased, and applied hot. The action of hot lime on sulphur is about the only means by which a sulphurous solution can be obtained and when applied to a porous surface like brick, its fungus-destroying qualities are increased or made more available.

By the way, paint some of your heating pipes with this same lime and sulphur wash as soon as regular firing begins. With steam heat less surface need be coated than if hot water is used. Cover enough surface to give a faint odor of sulphur through the house when the pipes are well warmed.

Prices.

The question of prices on carnation blooms is a matter which I believe the average grower has not given the amount of thought it deserves. Considering the rapid improvement made in the divine flower during the past few years, the increased cost of building materials and fuel, also the extra amount of labor involved in the production of the grade of stock now demanded, let us see if the horny-handed grower has come in for his share.

The latest wholesale New York quotation on roses ranges from $1 for low grade to $8 for fancy Brides. Carna-

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Disbudding and Feeding.

I hope it is not necessary for me to urge you to look after the disbudding from now on, as common sense will tell you its necessity. Not only will it enlarge the bloom, but it will also help to stiffen the stems and on such varieties as Lawson it will help to lengthen them if it is done as soon as the buds can be handled. If disbudding is ever needed it is needed at this time of the season, when the carnation is naturally not at its best, as a result of transplanting, etc. You will also notice that varieties which come a trifle single in the fall will fill out considerably if disbudded when the buds are quite small. Remove the side shoots as low down as where you want to cut the stem, as it is yet too early to begin striking cuttings for general planting out. You should also get the second tier of wire and string supports on your beds, so the stems will grow straight and upright. Some of the taller ones will also soon need the third support to keep them straight. You can put it on just as easily now as later and it is not in the way, so put it in place as soon as convenient.

Pretty soon the fall shows will be held and perhaps you will want to show some of your carnations. Good stems are as essential to a fine carnation as a fine bloom. If your soil is too light or if some of your varieties lack a trifle in stiffness in the stem, give them a light sprinkling of air-slaked lime or wood ashes every two weeks, watering it in well. Spraying the plants overhead with salt water will also help to stiffen the stems a little. About a two and one-fourth inch pot full of table salt to three gallons of water will do. Be sure you pick all the blooms first. If the plants were housed early in August or in July and you mulched them last month a dose of bone flour will do them no harm at this time. We mix it with soil, about one to eight, and let it lie a couple of days, turning it over two or three times to keep it from heating. A good handful to a row across a five-foot bench is enough, and water it in well. We prefer the fine bone flour, as it dissolves much quicker than the coarse brands do. We also find Clay's fertilizer valuable to use in the same way. Don't do any of this feeding, though, unless your plants are in good growing condition and the roots active and strong. First get your plants well established and then you can push the growth by extra feeding.

tions are quoted from 75 cents for low grade to $4 for novelties. If the difference in price is but one-quarter of a cent between the lowest grade of rose and carnation, why the wide difference (100 per cent) between the highest grade of the same flowers?

From the time a carnation cutting is rooted to the time salable blooms can be cut, I venture the statement that more labor has been expended than in the period required to bring roses to the productive point, while the earlier use of fuel required for roses is offset by earlier returns.

Since it takes the same amount of space, soil, coal and practically the same time to grow inferior stock as it does high grade, there is no good reason why such quantities of inferior carnations should appear on the market, only to lower the flower in the estimation of the public, and herein lies the solution of the problem. Grow the highest grade possible and those who strive to see how low a grade can be produced will soon alter their methods.

Had the wages of greenhouse help increased in proportion to those in other lines of trade, much less low grade stock would have reached the market. However, this is a matter which will present itself for solution in the near future as the demand for more experienced help is on the increase, which must result in higher wages, higher grade of production and prices consistent with increased cost of the same.

NEW CARNATIONS.

The accompanying illustration shows a carnation house at the establishment of Fred Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind. The varieties are their new whites, described in our issue of July 30, 1903. On the first bench is Lady Bountiful, on the further bench The Belle. The house was planted July 28, 1903, and photographed September 14. Both varieties are to be distributed this winter.

TROUBLE WITH FERNS.

In the REVIEW of September 24 I note Mr. Altoona's trouble with ferns. We had the same difficulty for years. It is the thrips that make the leaves look as though burned or scalded. They are the little black bugs that crawl on the under side of the leaves. They like ferns and rubbers better than palms or any other plant we know. We now use Thripscide once a week and our ferns are in fine condition. This was the only remedy we found to be successful and it is so easy to use that we now keep our stock clean and nice. If you will give Mr. Altoona this advice he will soon be over his trouble.

R. HOFFMAN.

PACIFIC COAST.

MENLO PARK, CAL.—A trip through Sidney Clack's establishment shows he has lost none of his skill as a rose and carnation grower. The stock all looks well and so does Mr. Clack himself. At Mr. Lynch's establishment a field of 60,000 chrysanthemums, of which about half are Bonnaillon, is an interesting sight, as is also his field of smilax. Both 'mums and smilax are in the open, except for some spreading old oak trees.

PLANT NOTES.

September has been, this year as well as last, one of our brightest months. We had considerable cool, cloudy weather in mid-summer and, although the days are getting shorter and the nights longer, everything in the greenhouses is still growing in good shape. Outside our asters are about gone and chrysanthemums are about beginning to make themselves known. Dahlias are just a little past their prime, but we will have good blossoms, although on somewhat shorter stems, until the frost comes. Roman hyacinths have arrived this week. The bulbs are a little above the average in size and give promise of doing all that is required of them.

Violets of the Princess of Wales variety are beginning to show blooms, but the weather is too warm at present and they are weak and flabby and until we get our first showers, generally about the first of November, we will not have much assistance from our violets. By the way, I do not think that in the neighborhood of San Francisco there were over half a dozen growers last season that had really first class violets. Of course, they are grown entirely out of doors here and cultivated much the same as any vegetable. The fault seemed to be that growers used the same ground for several seasons, but experience has taught us that violets want new soil every year to be up to the mark. A great many more acres have been planted this year than ever and we hope to see plenty of good flowers later on.

Sweet peas are getting short of stem as the nights get longer and we will not see much of them after a couple of weeks. There are a few sheltered localities where sweet peas can be grown successfully the year around by systematic planting, but they are not in much demand out of season and are only used because flowers happen to be scarce.

Our fall crop of outside roses was not up to the usual standard this season, and but little use was made of them by the florists. Between the very dry season and an unusual supply of green ladybirds we did not cut many perfect flowers.

CALIFORNIA CARNATIONS.

Hanna Hobart, the remarkable deep pink carnation that originated with John H. Sievers & Co., San Francisco, may be disseminated next year. It has so far been retained by Messrs. Sievers & Co., who have felt it was too important to them to have exclusive sale of the flowers at their store to allow the stock to go out. But there is a probability that a change in the program is imminent.

Hanna Hobart, as seen growing at their establishment, is a gem. The flowers are immense in size, color somewhat similar to Lawson and the growth strong and vigorous. It will be a great acquisition if disseminated. For years Sievers & Co. have received regularly the year around double the price obtained for any other carnation blooms. By the way, they now have a red sport from Hobart which gives them a new color in this type of carnation.

A. B. Spreckels, their new scarlet, has much the same habit as Hobart, very erect and spikey foliage, and evidently belongs in the same class. Both varieties are now a sea of buds and show their superiority to the standard sorts also grown on the place.

Tuberous begonias are grown here and the cut flowers are largely used in design work. They find them very useful, the flowers coming at a time of the year when other blooms are not plentiful. The plants are now passing out of bloom.

Ferns are largely grown here and a considerable number of Adiantum Williamsii was noted. He likes it better than Farleyense associated with orchids. And the writer agrees with him that it is more graceful and better adapted to the purpose. The orchids, by the way, are in prime condition and promise a splendid crop of flowers later. Cattleyas predominate in the stock, though other genera are grown.

BURLINGAME, CAL.

Quite a large new cut flower growing establishment is being built here by the Glenwood Nursery Co., of which Philip C. Meyer is the head. Thomas W. Breen is the manager in charge and he has been making things move. Though building operations were not begun until July, ten houses, each 25x150, are almost completed. Two have been planted some time to chrysanthemums and the stock looks remarkably well considering the amount of building that has demanded the manager's constant attention. Six of the houses are being planted to roses and three to carnations. The roses are mainly Beauty, Edgely, Liberty, Bride and Maid, and 500 Mrs. Oliver Ames. The carnations are mainly Lawson, Prosperity, Estelle, Hill, Queen Louise, Gov. Wolcott and Roosevelt. Some orchids will also be grown.

The houses are all three-quarter span, long span facing a little west of south. Each has five benches, the three center ones being five feet wide and those against the walls being two feet nine inches. The provision for filling and emptying the houses is especially interesting. There is a double door at each end and the center bench is made in sections so it can be easily removed and set up again. A double team can then be driven right through the house and soil for all the benches thrown into those on each side of the driveway. It seems to be an excellent solution of the problem of how to most economically empty and refill benches.

Two thousand Brunners are getting ready to take the place of the chrysanthemums when the latter are cut out, and a batch of lilies will help in the same direction.

All the houses have front and back as well as overhead ventilation. There is about three feet of glass ventilation in front and a foot board at the back. Field-grown roses are being planted in some houses and burlap shading is used on these houses till the roses take hold of the soil.

A huge water tank is in place and the space underneath is being closed in and neatly ceiled, to be used as a dining room for the men. Barns and other accessories are being constructed and the big gang of carpenters and other workmen are pushing the work at a rapid gait. Crude oil will be used for fuel and steam will be the heating medium.

The stock in the large establishment of E. W. McLellan, located here, is in its usual fine condition. The replanting of the carnation houses is now being finished. Some of the roses were carried over from last season and are starting strong new growth in good shape.

Henri De Coulon started in the cut flower-growing line here last year and has three houses, which are placed in a rather novel way. They form almost an exact triangle. The stock looks well and results are what count, so maybe a triangular arrangement is a good thing.

BOILER CAPACITY.

I want to put in a boiler to heat a greenhouse 26x75, with about 2,800 square feet of glass surface. A manufacturer tells me that a 16x30 boiler will do, and I see in a catalogue that this is just the size for 5,000 cubic feet, only a small part of the cubic contents of my greenhouse. How will it work? The ground is shallow and a deep pit cannot be dug because of water. How will it do to put the boiler on the level of the greenhouse floor and hang the whole pipe business in the air? J. L.

A boiler having a rated capacity for heating 5,000 cubic feet, presumably a rating used for dwelling heating, would not be capable of heating a greenhouse 26x75, containing about 2,800 square feet of glass exposure. For the heating of such a greenhouse a boiler having a dwelling heating capacity of at least 30,000 cubic feet should be used. Regarding the shallowness of the boiler cellar referred to, it will pay to make a watertight pit of concrete, sufficiently large to accommodate the boiler and deep enough to bring the top of the boiler level with or below the greenhouse floor, otherwise he will have to do as he says, "hang the whole pipe business in the air." When he has purchased his boiler, if he will state the exact measurements of same and give greatest depth he can make his pit, also some particulars as to bench arrangement of greenhouse, I will be pleased to give him some points in laying out his "pipe business."

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

ASPARAGUS MYRIOCLADUS.

One of the interesting plant novelties certificated at the Milwaukee convention was Asparagus myriocladus, in the display of H. A. Dreer. In this connection the following from the pen of a British writer should be of interest:

"Attention has been called to the decorative species of asparagus on several occasions, but it apparently takes a long time to establish a plant firmly in the affection of cultivators, and especially those who grow for market purposes. The now well-known Asparagus Sprengeri was growing luxuriantly in the French and Belgian nurseries several years before the British growers would take it up. Even when one or two tried it, it did not catch on quickly, but gradually its beauty and usefulness became more apparent and were at last generally recognized.

"A. myriocladus, the species now under notice, will probably go through the same process before it becomes thoroughly well-known. It is a distinct and ornamental species, and, like many others, a native of South Africa. It grows three to five feet high, and even more, perhaps, the stems becoming woody, and of a soft, pale brown hue, with sturdy spines at the base of the branches. These latter are wiry-looking, and from them arise other wiry-looking, but more slender branchlets, from the joints of which spring dense whorls of feathery, slender leaves or cladodes. In a young state they are of a soft, bright green and very attractive, but become of a deeper and more sombre hue with age. Small plants, in 5-inch pots, are decidedly ornamental and should prove useful for the table or conservatory.

"The cultivation of Asparagus myriocladus presents no particular difficulty. It flourishes in a greenhouse temperature and likes abundance of air when well established. Sandy loam and leaf soil, with good drainage, seems to suit it well. Propagation is effected by cuttings of the fairly well ripened side shoots with a heel of the old wood, inserted in a bell glass or under a close frame. As numerous shoots spring up from the root-stock, this species apparently can also be increased by careful division just as the season's growth is about to begin."

THE CYPRESS MARKET.

Chicago dealers in cypress lumber report the demand about as good as it has been throughout the season. Lately numerous orders have been received from boat builders, while other consumers, such as tank manufacturers, the manufacturers of interior finish, greenhouse men and others, are calling for lumber in reasonable quantities. Prices remain about stationary. In fact says the American Lumberman, there is no motive for making any concessions on Louisiana stock, because the mill operators are selling their product as fast as it is fit to ship. One feature of demand commented on by a local dealer is the call for low grade common stock for box manufacture. Consumers are trying all kinds of lumber to make up for the lack of soft pine, and in some instances they are turning to cypress as a substitute. Aside from greenhouse requirements a good deal of cypress is used in car building and an occasional sizable order for such material has been received this season. In all respects the cypress trade is in good condition, demand and distribution being well adjusted to the amount and condition of supplies at the mills.

TROUBLE WITH CYPERUS.

I send a stem of an umbrella plant which is affected by some kind of disease unknown to me. Please tell me what it is and the cure for it.

P. J. K.

The specimen of Cyperus alternifolius forwarded with this letter is evidently suffering from a severe attack of insects rather than from disease, there being decided evidence of a plentiful crop of both mealy bugs and red spiders. The tips of the leaflets have probably turned brown from the plant having been dry at some time, though they were also weakened to some extent by the red spider. It would be best to cut back the old growths and allow the plants to come up again from the bottom, giving an abundance of water at all times. This plant is a semi-aquatic, and consequently grows better in mud than in dry soil, the latter condition also favoring the attacks of red spider.

W. H. TAPLIN.

A LOW PRESSURE TRAP.

Two winters ago I only used one pump to force the water back to the steam boilers. Something went wrong and we were about to be frozen up when luckily I went about the work myself and found out what an expert could not and just saved my place from frost. It was only then that I began to realize the risk I was running by having only one steam pump. So I began to study the matter and found that the pump I was using required at least ten pounds of steam to work it, and that often in fall and spring we did not require this amount of steam pressure to heat our place. Why not get a pump to work with as little pressure as I required? So it occurred to my mind that if I reduced the water plungers one half on the new pump, I would increase the power of the pump one half. So this we had done and the result is that we can get all the water pumped into the boilers at less than three pounds pressure and nothing could give greater satisfaction. As my fireman said last winter, "She works like a watch," and the return water very hot at that. The pump is a Northey, but I am satisfied that any pump can be made to do the same by simply reducing the water plungers one half. S. S. BAIN.

THE "YELLOW" OF ASTERS.

Under this heading a bulletin of the Hatch Experiment Station discusses one of the most peculiarly obscure diseases with which any plant is affected. Caused by no fungus, insect or other organism, not due to any apparent effect of treatment or environment, it is notwithstanding a sharply defined, widespread and destructive disease of this plant. Its general effect is a bright yellow "spindling" growth. Affected parts do not die or wilt, but show simply the peculiar growth which prevents their proper development. This trouble begins to appear after the plants have become well established in the permanent bed. Affected specimens show at the summit, or growing tip, a light, greenish yellow color instead of the normal dark green. Leaves previously formed do not change their color, but from the point where the trouble began the succeeding stem and leaves have the yellow color. There is no dying or any such effect, simply the "spindling" yellow growth. The effect is curious and unmistakable. At the same time similar yellow shoots begin to appear from the axils of the leaves on the main stem. In the worst cases growth is checked at this point and the plant remains through the summer a stunted stem, yellow at the top, with numerous short, unhealthy looking yellow branches along the sides. From this the intensity of the trouble varies to the other extreme, where only in a few of the last flowers of the season is the abnormal color and growth apparent. Microscopic examination of the affected stem and leaves shows nothing abnormal except a lack of green coloring matter. The roots, even of the worst diseased specimens, are abundant, sound and healthy looking. Absolutely nothing has been found in any part of the plant to account for the effect. After the disease once appears it keeps cropping out, here and there, all through the season, the latest plants to show it being the least affected.

In plants badly affected with the "yellows" no flowers develop upon the yellow, sickly looking shoots, or only rudiments of them. In numerous cases, however, blossoms appear upon normal branches, which are peculiarly affected by the disease. Some show it in the whole flower, others only upon one side or in a small portion. The first noticeable peculiarity is in the color, which is of the same greenish yellow as that of affected leaves, without regard to the natural color of the variety. Where the whole flower-head is affected it has a peculiar, unnatural appearance, while often one side is perfectly normal while the other is yellow and diseased. Closer examination of affected florets shows a remarkable and characteristic change. This is the greatly increased size and length of each floret. A further peculiarity is shown in the sharp turn upward which the affected pistils take, just as the stem of a plant takes when bent over.

It is natural in a plant disease to look for some parasitic organism as the cause. In many respects the appearance and nature of this disease lead one to suspect some such origin, but it may be said at once that the most careful search in all parts of the plant has failed to reveal anything of the sort. That the trouble is purely of a physiological nature, due to some perversion of the normal functions of the plant, can scarcely be doubted. The trouble is equally prevalent upon all varieties of asters. Besides the large amount of evidence on this point obtained incidentally in the course of this work from our own plants and those of many other growers, this matter was especially tested in the summer of 1900. Seed was obtained of all the varieties of any importance obtainable in the country, over 300 separate lots in all, and the plants of each kind set out in one long bed for comparison. The result was that while naturally some variation in the amount of disease occurred, no important difference could be seen in favor of or against any variety. It is interesting to note that the alleged "original" aster obtained of Heinemann, of Erfurt, Germany, was one of the worst affected varieties.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The big city has maintained its reputation during the last ten days as a purveyor of the most charming fall weather manufactured on this continent. The schools and theaters are in full blast and, best of all, the crop of October weddings gives abundant promise, and already every prominent retailer has made many bookings, one of the leading firms showing eight splendid engagements, and the month is only in its infancy. Then, too, the "400" are rapidly occupying their city palaces, the Newport and Lenox and other great summer centers of society's gaiety are slowly becoming depopulated and the Wall street outlook, as we predicted a week ago, has brightened, reassuring the pessimistic as to the business prospect and creating new hope and ambition where the clouds seemed heavy. A good winter's business is about as good as guaranteed for the florists and there is nothing now to merit alarm, excuse, timidity, distrust or lack of enterprise. The plantmen are decidedly busy at present and as a consequence, every retail store is a scene of tropical beauty. Great banks of palms and ferns already ornament the shelves and windows and a profusion of bloom from the outdoor gardens gives brilliancy and interest to the florid decorations. Every day adds to the size, beauty and variety of the chrysanthemums and the autumn queen will soon be regally enthroned.

Various Notes.

The club meeting of the New York florists Monday night opens the season and should have a big send off, as matters of great interest, looking to added entertainment and numbers, will be discussed, and among other features there is a fair prospect that the new Breitmeyer rose may be on exhibition. Bowlers also are requested to report to Captain Lang, so that there may be no delay in the formation of a representative club for the winter season.

Alfred Zeller has assumed all the responsibilities and obligations of the firm of Chas. Zeller & Son, and the old name of the house will be continued.

Warrendorff's fine store at the Ansonia has a handsome novelty in Pompeian jardinières manufactured on the premises. An interesting lieutenant here is an artist who has spent many years in St. Petersburg and whose work is most unique. The system of maintaining several stores in the same city by the one firm, which begins to prevail here, is not unusual in that far off capital, where every day is a saint's day and where one florist maintains no less than seven establishments.

Clarke's Sons' huge store on the boulevard is none too roomy for the many banks of plants which the closing of the greenhouses makes necessary here. The firm is rejoicing in the completion of the Rapid Transit road in their neighborhood, and, in fact, all of upper Broadway has been handicapped beyond endurance for a year while the "big ditch" has been in process of construction. A score of florists will breathe more easily all along the route from Sixtieth street to Harlem, and the boulevard when restored to its former condition and its wide avenues beautified by shrubbery and trees will again become one of the finest streets of the city. No wonder Broadway from Fourteenth street to Forty-second made a vigorous protest against the contemplated opening of the street and by concerted action prevented the ruinous project.

Herrmann, on East Thirty-fourth street, reports a great season. Their machine-made immortelle bells are going fast at one-third of last year's prices. They have new styles of stars in crape paper and crape and immortelles. Mr. Herrmann is back from his European trip with many new ideas and novelties. Importations are double those of last season. The demand for immortelles is constant, their third shipment being already sold. This firm made a big shipment of goods to Johannesburg, South Africa, a few weeks ago.

Fritz Dressel's place in Weehawken might safely be termed a fern and rubber factory. Enormous quantities of these staples are in evidence. Among the ferns are some fine specimens of Piersoni and of Anna Foster. Four new houses have been added to this plant this summer and a new office built. A coffee tree in fruit is an interesting novelty.

F. R. Pierson Company has purchased from Chas. H. Allen, of Floral Park, the entire stock of his grand carnation, White Lawson.

Another immense greenhouse has been completed at Briarcliff by the Pierson-Sefton Company, similar to the one described a year ago, which Paul M. Pierson says is "the finest greenhouse in the world." Eight thousand American Beauty plants in this one house, in grand condition, will endeavor to pay for it this winter. In Mr. Pierson's ranges of glass are benched altogether over 100,000 Beauties. The growth everywhere is exceptionally fine this season and the output promises to be enormous.

A part of the estate of the late Chas. Knick, including the property where Mr. Knick's retail establishment stands, has been sold for $85,000. Mr. Knick will devote his entire attention to his wholesale business after May 1.

The first of the monthly fall meetings of the directors of the Cut Flower Exchange was held in the office of the board in the Coogan building on Saturday, October 3.

Kreshover has an excellent novelty and a great seller in his solid, indestructible Christmas bells for decorations.

Langjahr's new store, of West Twenty-eighth street, opened Monday with Arthur Hunt in charge as managing foreman. The store is handsomely fitted up.

R. S. Williams, of the New York Botanical Garden, has gone to Manila on a plant-collecting expedition, which he expects to continue until the end of 1904.

The Newport season ends about the 20th of the month, the Goetel-ducal wedding probably closing the brilliant series of decorations. "Sic transit gloria mundi," or words to that effect. But everything goes if it will bring a reasonable amount of grist to the florists' mill!

Congratulations are in evidence in behalf of U. G. Scollay, of Brooklyn, of the firm of John A. Scollay, who was married last week to Dr. Marie V. Maxwell, and who is now enjoying his honeymoon in Canada.

C. W. Ward is on a business trip south.

Albert W. Wadley, son of Mr. Wadley, of Wadley & Smythe, and Miss Mary Gorton, of Newport, R. I., will be married October 12. They will reside at 15 Park Place, New Rochelle.

Wm. Cooley, gardener at the Birdseye estate, Orient, L. I., is said to have disappeared. He is reported to have recently inherited a fortune.

Wm. H. Donohoe has just recovered from a three weeks' attack of congestion of the lungs, a condition caused by exposure to a storm when on his 3,000 mile outing trip on the Great Lakes from Buffalo to Duluth.

William Arthur Saltford, of Poughkeepsie, and Miss Belle B. Wetherbee, of North Adams, Mass., were married Wednesday, October 7.

Alex. Guttman, of West Twenty-ninth street, spent several days last week among his growers up the Hudson and in New Jersey.

Charles Millang finds his conservatory very convenient these days for his overflow of dahlias. He is handling some superb carnations.

Among the ferns of all kinds displayed by Bradshaw & Hartman are some fine, bushy Pieroni in 8-inch pans, the product of that expert plantsman, John Scott, of the Keap Street Greenhouses, Brooklyn.

A. Warrendorff, of Broadway, had a unique window Monday evening, in which was a handsome design for the opening night of the opera The Fisher Maiden, also an immense star of red and white dahlias, the emblem of the White Rats, a theatrical organization.

A good deal of autumn foliage is being used by the retailers in their windows, especially branches of the oak, which seems to have displayed the first effects of the fall painting of Dame Nature. The parks begin to put on their "coats of many colors" and the first signs of Indian summer are with us. After such a summer as we have endured there is only justice and fair play in the charming temperature which now envelops the east. The consequences, however, to the cut flower market are disastrous. Roses, 'mums and carnations are running a race for supremacy that will end in a flood of shipments of every one of these at about the same time and the consequences to values can easily be foretold. The end of the week promises the beginning of the avalanche and it looks as if no power can prevent the break. Even on Monday prices declined from Saturday's quotations and the tendency was decidedly bearish when the market closed. Looks as though some of the dividends on cut flower stock would have to be "passed" in October.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business in cut flowers is active; more stock is being sold at fair prices. White is in brisk demand, carnations of that color being higher in price than pink or red. Valley on some days has been scarce despite increased supply. Beauties are going well. The call for early chrysanthemums is fitful, but so far it has equaled the supply, prices ruling firm. A few days will find a great many more in the market. Cattleyas are to be had in some quantity, also a few cypripediums and other orchids. Dahlias are fine and very plentiful. Roses of all sorts are more plentiful than a week ago. Tritoma, the red hot poker, is a novelty, useful for decorations. Violets, both single and double, are improving.

Auction Sales.

There have been two auction sales of especial interest in this city lately. The first took place on Tuesday of last week at the Flower Market, when the delinquent stock of the company was sold to satisfy the second assessment of 25 per cent due August 1. Only eight shares were sold in three lots, the prices were 100, 100 and 105, a pretty good showing. Fred Halunan, Edwin Lonsdale and C. E. Meehan were the successful bidders. Most of the buyers had to go home jingling their money in their pockets. The second was a great plant sale held at Forty-ninth and Market streets on Wednesday and Thursday of this week, the stock comprising a great variety of palms, ferns, crotons, ficus, cyclamens, pandanus and many other things in all sizes from 3-inch pots up to 24-inch tubs, offered by William K. Harris and Robert Craig & Son. John P. Cleary, who has a reputation as a clever plant auctioneer, was brought over from New York for the occasion. This is the first auction sale of its kind held in this city since the very successful sale held by the same auctioneer at Pitcher & Manda's some years ago, when that firm went out of business. A number of New York growers have held fall plant auctions on their places to make room for winter. The leading auctioneers in New York have also held frequent sales at their rooms. To these sales both Messrs. Craig and Harris have occasionally contributed by sending over a carload of such fine stock that the Philadelphia palms became noted for their excellence and were eagerly looked for by the buyers. This year Mr. Craig wanted space so badly that he felt the time had come for this city to try a plant auction, so he and Mr. Harris combined and the result is a large sale, lots of stuff and lots of buyers.

The St. Louis World's Fair.

Messrs. Eisele and Clark, of the firm of Henry A. Dreer, returned some time ago from a flying trip to St. Louis.

Their objective point was the World's Fair, where, after carefully going over the grounds and plans, they decided to take a space, 275x220 feet, or about one and a third acres, stretching from the Horticulture to the Agriculture building. Also they will fill two lakes with aquatics, aggregating about one and a half acres. This will give a rough idea of the size of this firm's exhibit at St. Louis next year. Mr. Eisele was much impressed with the immense scale on which everything is being carried out at the coming exposition.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Florists' Club was held last Tuesday evening. The election of officers resulted in the unanimous choice of President John Westcott, Vice President David Rust, Secretary Ed. Lonsdale, and Treasurer J. William Colflesh. Edward Reid read an interesting paper, giving ideas of the west. Walter H. Whetstone gave a practical talk on vacuum heating, which he illustrated with air valves, showing how fuel may be economized. Both speakers were listened to with close attention.

Notes.

At a meeting on Monday, October 5, J. D. Eisele was elected vice president of the H. A. Dreer corporation.

The Philadelphia Carnation Co., Dumont & Crawford, of Secane, have their houses filled with a fine lot of stock. Enchantress is looking particularly well. Stem-rot gave them some trouble this season. They are growing mushrooms extensively this season and have built a large shed for that purpose.

The William Graham Co. had a large fall opening decoration on Monday for Blum Bros. Tritomas and hydrangeas were extensively used.

F. R. Hancock, Burlington, N. J., is sending in some pretty flowers of Chrysanthemum Polly Rose to Leo Niessen.

H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., are sending in a variety of fine early chrysanthemums to S. S. Pennock.

George Barnett, of Oxford, Pa., devotes his place almost entirely to carnations. He does Flora Hill and Joost very well.

Mrs. R. C. Smith, Secane, Pa., is cutting some of the finest violets that come into the market.

Edward Reid had a large order on Monday for 1,500 each of white carnations and roses and 1,100 valley.

William J. Baker finds the sale of white carnations exceptionally heavy lately.

Joseph Kift & Son, West Chester, have actively pushed their repairs, and, weather permitting, will have all their glazing done this week. The roses were not much injured, but some of the other plants were badly cut up. Mr. Kift was able to make a very advantageous glass purchase.

S. S. Pennock's place is made gorgeous by the quantities of showy dahlias displayed there each morning.

Miss Alice E. Tiernan, for many years bookkeeper at Hugh Graham's, has resigned her position and was married on October 7.

John McCleary, gardener to William Wrightman, flowered a house of asters, which were all cut on his employer's ninetieth birthday, September 30.

The H. A. Dreer Co. is very busy with the importations of azaleas. Two carloads arrived Saturday; more are coming.

in this week. There are 53,000 of all sizes, an increase over last season.

Bowling.

The following very interesting account and score of the match played on the home alleys last week shows a spirited contest from start to finish. The names, Wholesaler and Retailer, gave way to those of Grower and Dealer.

The first games of the series between the Growers and Dealers, as expected, proved close and exciting. The first game went to the former, with a margin of twenty-seven pins. In the second game the Dealers braced up and won by forty-seven pins, leaving them in the lead by twenty. The third game proved equally exciting until the finish, when the Growers showed their superiority by winning the contest by eighty pins. Second meeting October 9. Following are the scores:

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Since a week ago supplies have increased all along the line and qualities have improved, but there is warm weather all around us, north, west and south, and it looks as if we shall have a few warm days to take the crispness out of the roses and fill the market with soft stock. Trade is fair but it is largely out-of-town demand and somewhat erratic.

Beauties are in large supply, but the call for them has improved with the quality, and several times late orders could not be filled. Brides and Maids are showing good length of stem, and with autumn weather would soon supply all that could be asked for quality. Meteors seem to not have developed so rapidly, and are still small and short. Liberty is doing better. Chatenay and Sunrise are plentiful and good. A few good Kaiserin are still seen. There are plenty of carnations, all the way from very poor to remarkably good. Prices are fair on good stock, for the demand is such that the best material goes quickly, and it is frequently impossible to fill late orders for special colors. Violets are better and very good chrysanthemums are seen in liberal quantity, rather earlier than usual this year. Dahlias are more numerous than ever before in this market, and selling pretty well the last week or two. It looks as though the supply of greens this year will break all records.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Fred Hills was taken suddenly ill with appendicitis last Friday night, and on Saturday was operated on at the Passavant hospital. She has passed the critical period, and is thought to be well on the road to recovery.

Brant & Noe are now selling their cut at the Growers' market, Mr. Brant taking personal charge.

Miss Justine Evert, daughter of Matt Evert, was married yesterday to John Boesen, a prosperous young contractor.

The Hilmers' greenhouses at Blue Island have been leased by Fisher & Poppe. Frank Fisher has been with James Hartshorne for some years, and Carl Poppe is an expert plantsman, having been in the west side parks for years.

Kennicott Bros. Co. receive some first-class dahlias from E. S. Thompson, of South Haven, Mich.

John Muno returned Monday from a very successful two weeks' hunting trip to Morgan, Minn. Peter Reinberg and Matt Evert were with him, but returned a few days before. On the way home Mr. Muno passed through St. Charles, Minn., a few hours after the big cyclone.

John Sterrett is now with Weiland & Risch, who are beginning to cut heavily from their new range. They are also getting in a big cut of green goods.

The first regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, for this season, was called for last evening, at Handel Hall. The election of officers will be held October 21.

August Jurgens has finished putting a new roof on his valley house and is now marketing some particularly good stock, easily bringing 5 cents.

They have some very fine plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine at Lincoln park, also some good chrysanthemums.

Bert Budlong is putting in his spare time acquiring the management of a steam automobile purchased last week.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting chrysanthemums in quantity. Monday they had 500 in.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

The trade in this city is anxiously waiting for a killing frost to get rid of outdoor flowers, to make trade pick up again as it should by this time. No very early chrysanthemums are grown in this vicinity, as past experience has proven that there is no sale for them until real fall weather sets in and we cannot depend on that until the middle of October or later. The first ones are ready to cut and these will soon be followed up by the early midseason varieties, etc. The varieties ready now are Mrs. George Kalb, Willowbrook and Monrovia. Lady Fitzwygram has lost favor here and is not grown any more. Carnations are improving rapidly and as soon as cool weather sets in there will be fine blooms in quantity. John Hartje's Moonlight and Baur & Smith's Indianapolis are both in grand shape and both are worth going to see. Roses are good on some places and poor on others. There is much mildew around.

Notes.

We are to have a flower show again this fall and indications point toward a great show. About $2,000 is to be divided up in premiums and some very liberal ones are offered. Ours is to be about the only large show in this part of the country and there should be plenty of competition to make things lively. The more the merrier, you know. The premium list has been revised and is ready for distribution. Drop I. Bertermann a postal and he will send you one.

Sidney Smith, of the firm of Baur & Smith, has returned from a three weeks' trip to Texas, his former home. He says Indianapolis is good enough for him, both the carnation and the town. Charley Wheatecraft also took a run into the sunny south, visiting relatives down in Georgia.

The coal situation promises to be as interesting to some of our boys this winter as it was last. Those who pushed the coal company early have their supplies, but those who allowed them to choose their own time for delivery are now beginning to feel uneasy. Some have a few tons, while others have none, and winter almost here. The railroads are already unable to transport the coal fast enough, and what will it be when actual freezing weather sets in? With so much to lose in a single night without coal, surely the florist should make doubly sure of his fuel supply early in the summer by getting it into his place.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Cloudy weather has been the rule for the past week and indoor flowers have not been plentiful. Carnations are off crop with most of the growers at present, as everyone is in the midst of re-planting. Outside 'mums are not yet offered in quantity, but the prospects are for a very bountiful crop. Roses are really scarce and cannot be had in quantity at any price. A few fair Brides and Maids are seen, also some Testout and Kaiserin, but American Beauty is entirely off crop with all the growers. Business is beginning again and bids fair to continue good for some time to come. We have had a few good wedding decorations during the past week and funerals have been frequent enough to give all the retailers a slice of business. Outside flowers are beginning to get shabby and we cannot count on much of anything else in that line except chrysanthemums. Smilax is to be had anywhere and is of good quality. Maiden-hair fern is getting somewhat scarce. Valley is good and in demand. Japanese lilies are about over. Indoor chrysanthemums bring from $1.50 to $2 per dozen for Ivory. Pacific and Louise Sievers are in their glory at present.

Notes.

F. Pelicano says business is much better than at this time last year. His show windows are one of the sights of the city.

J. P. Meyer, of Burlingame, is at present in the midst of his rose planting and he expects to fill about five houses. He has secured a large quantity of fine stock and as his houses are new and up to date he will undoubtedly have a good harvest later on.

G.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Alfred Ostermann has started in the retail florist business. The season has been even better than seemed possible. Chrysanthemums will follow our asters and be fine. No frost to do serious damage yet. Roses coming on good, carnations backward but promising, violets fair.

ADAMS, MASS.—T. D. Brown has housed a fine lot of carnations in spite of the very poor season we have had. He is growing more roses and chrysanthemums than in past seasons. Funeral work is about all the business done just at present. Mr. Brown has secured four fine lots upon which he intends to increase his plant in the future.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade in the cut flower line was somewhat dull the past week, owing to a spell of warm weather. The outlook for the month of October is very encouraging, as several of the florists have orders booked for large decorations. As one of the West End florists said, just as soon as the cooler weather sets in, then "society" will resume its entertainments and we will all be busy. The Veiled Prophet ball this week will no doubt make a big demand for Beauties and other roses of the fancy grades and cause prices to advance somewhat.

Stock of all kinds has been very plentiful and will no doubt continue so if the warm weather keeps up. In roses some extra fine grades of Brides, Meteors and Carnots are seen. Bridesmaids are still off color and are poor sellers. The best of these are now $7 per 100, and as low as $3 for shorts. In Beauties selects are somewhat limited at $3 per dozen; seconds and shorts are somewhat more plentiful, and the demand fair. Violets are beginning to come in more plentifully, but are pale and imperfect as yet and there is little sale for them. They bring only 25 cents per 100. Carnations have improved in quality and some very fine stock has been coming in of all varieties except Daybreak. A big lot of field-grown flowers is coming in, but sales on them are small compared with indoor stock. Fancies bring $2, but the bulk is sold at from $1 to $1.50 per 100. Field-grown are 50 cents. White has the best demand. Valley is good in quality and demand, but is not overplentiful at present. The best brings $4 per 100. All outdoor flowers are selling slowly except tuberosa stalks, which have a good demand at $4. Smilax and other greens are in fairly good demand.

Various Notes.

Paul Berkowitz, better known as "Colonel," of Bayersdorfer's, Philadelphia, spent a day with us last week. The colonel reports trade good and the REVIEW everywhere.

J. E. Jensen, of the Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., spent Saturday in St. Louis, calling on the trade.

Charlie Ford, of A. Herrmann, New York, after spending ten days in the city, left Wednesday, reporting an excellent trade in florists' supplies and plants.

Will Heinl, son of Joseph Heinl, of Jacksonville, Ill., was a recent visitor and enjoyed his stay very much.

The forty-third annual fair of the St. Louis Agricultural and Mechanical Association opened October 5, to continue one week. It is offering the usual $500 in premiums on plants, cut flowers and floral designs. The list of entries by local florists is very satisfactory to the management.

F. M. Ellis is off for a short trip, calling on his many consignors. He is receiving some very fine stock of all kinds daily.

Charlie Kuehn's place is looking at its best, some excellent improvements having been made on it during the summer. His stock is large and of the best.

H. G. Berning is now in his new place at 1402 Pine street, which is much larger than the old store. The stock at this place is large and of good quality.

Park Commissioner Aull reports that the band concerts at the different parks during the summer months were a big success. Sixty-six concerts were given at nine of the parks, which drew an attendance of 290,000. Next year, during the World's Fair, more of these concerts will be given for the benefit of the many visitors attending the fair.

Vincent Gorley's place, on Fifteenth street and Cass avenue, is neat and attractive. His new show house is filled with choice plants. He has a good location, is popular with his neighbors and reports business very good for this time of the year.

The decorations which are being made at this writing at the Merchants' Exchange for the Veiled Prophet ball will excel all former efforts in this line at the hall. Plants and wild smilax are being used by the carload and the electrical effects are grand. The Riessen Floral Company is doing the job, and E. C. Buechel, who is superintending the work, deserves great credit for the way he handles the big job.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club, which will be held Thursday afternoon, October 15, will be of great importance to all its members. The meeting will open promptly at 2 o'clock, as the program will be lengthy, and the members are requested to come on time. All committees and their chairmen will be announced at this meeting and it is necessary for all chairmen to be present for instructions. Postals will be sent to all members in time, so no excuse for not attending will be accepted.

Fred Weber, Jr., is off on a pleasure trip to New York, Boston and Philadelphia.

Rudolph J. Mohr is now employed with T. W. Brown, the English landscape gardener at the World's Fair, who has a big force of men at work and has accomplished a great deal in the short time he has been here.

J. C. Craig, Jr., Chicago, is visiting the trade in St. Louis.

Bowling.

Eight of the bowling members rolled three games on Monday night and from the scores below it will be seen that four of its members are still in the 500 class.

SOUTH HAVEN, MICH.

M. D. Merrill has his greenhouses again in running order, having discontinued for a year.

E. A. Hartman is filling up his houses for winter work, and stock looks well. His season's work has been satisfactory. He has four 100-foot houses and all full of good stock.

E. S. Thompson has returned from a ten days' trip among the gladiolus and dahlia fields of Long Island and New Jersey. John Lewis Childs has 110 acres in gladiolus, and large crops of other bulbs. W. P. Peacock, Atco, N. J., has about eighty acres of dahlias and in good shape. Mr. Thompson expects to have the cream of the dahlias and "glads" another season.

The Michigan Seed Company has a fine display of dahlias now in bloom.

GARDENING UNDER GLASS

For a reliable, free growing and free setting variety for general use there is no forcing tomato to surpass the old Lorillard.

TOMATO forcing is a considerable industry in Bucks county, Pennsylvania. W. W. Allabaugh, of Silverdale, has just completed a span of three new houses each 15x120 and has his whole place full of tomatoes. Herbert S. Nace, of Sellersville, has added two houses, 16x120, trebling his capacity, all in tomatoes. At Perkasio there are three who make this vegetable a specialty. Of these J. H. Werst has built a large shed to protect his fertilizer and D. H. Werst has built a large brick chimney.

CAULIFLOWER.

This is a very satisfactory crop to grow, as it is less subject to disease or insect enemies than any vegetable generally used for forcing. If this crop is intended to take the place of chrysanthemums when these are cleared from the benches, seed should be got in without delay, as about seven weeks is required to get the plants large enough for planting in the benches. Snowball or Dwarf Erfurt are the best varieties we have tried for forcing. They are both dwarf growers and sure headers. The seeds should be sown rather thinly in flats and transplanted into other flats after the first rough leaf has formed, setting them about two inches apart each way. They should be shaded for a few days after handling, but afterwards kept well exposed to light and freely aired. If raised benches are used for this crop ample provision should be made for drainage and the benches should be deep enough to allow of about six inches of soil. The soil, good sod earth, moderately enriched with well rotted manure, should have been got together a few months before it is intended to be used and should be turned over two or three times so as to get it well broken up and thoroughly mixed. At the last turning a sprinkling of lime should be worked in to help destroy worms and insects.

The distance apart for the plants in the bench may vary, according to the size of head required. In some markets it has of late been quite a fad to get small heads, about the size of a tennis ball being considered best, but other markets demand larger heads.

To procure small heads one foot apart would be about the right distance, but if larger heads are desired fourteen inches had better be allowed. Water should be applied sparingly just after planting and only around the plants until the roots have taken a good hold of the soil, after which a more plentiful supply can be given, but overwatering should be guarded against, as the plants are sure to become inactive should the soil become in any way soured. A night temperature of from 50 to 55 degrees, and a day temperature of 70 degrees is about what ought to be maintained. Air should be freely admitted on all favorable occasions and the atmosphere of the house is better to be kept moderately dry rather than moisture laden, as the latter condition would be apt to cause soft growth and be productive of leaves rather than heads.

From eight to ten weeks is required

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres., F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. C. Senger, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

MORE fall planting than ever before will be done this season, particularly in ornamentals.

E. R. BEEBE, proprietor of the Pomona Nursery, Ada, Mich., is developing a very satisfactory business.

FRANK H. HARTMAN, the nurseryman, of Danville, N. Y., was married October 1 to Miss Hortense Armstrong, at Allenhurst, N. J.

THE Pittsburg, McKeesport & Greensburg Street Railway Company will build a park of twenty-five acres south of Greensburg, Pa.

SCHWEDLER'S maple is a fine street tree, where local conditions are not too severe, but it is not in large supply, and therefore higher priced than other maples.

THE F. W. Mally Orchard Co., of Quincy, Ill., has been incorporated with $100,000 capital stock by Herbert L. Lonsdale, Alfred G. Roger and Charles H. Williams.

F. A. WAUGH, professor of horticulture at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, who is widely known for his work with fruits, has just published "Systematic Pomology," a book of 288 pages which should be carefully read by every nurseryman. We can supply it postpaid on receipt of $1.

ALBANY, N. Y.

Fred A. Danker is one of our successful craftsmen who manages a busy store and is in addition a practical grower. It was a profitable trip the writer made to the range of glass originally put up for the purpose of storing stock, but by making additions both cut flowers and plants are grown under direct supervision. I noted a pretty lot of chrysanthemums, both for cutting and pot sales, chiefly early kinds such as Bergmann, Ivory and Willowbrook. Dahlias are being grown in large numbers. This flower is very popular, both pompon and cactus are favorites. A yellow named Golden Glow is a good seller. Mr. Danker intends forcing a number for winter sales, believing it can be done successfully and profitably. Orchids are in evidence, including some fine plants of Celogyne cristata alba, which is not common. Cyclamen are very promising. The soil is a heavy, rich loam and is equally suited for pot or bench purposes. The business has grown rapidly and by the time the youngest member of the firm (a fine boy a week old) becomes of age, Dankerville will be an important suburb of the capital city.

H. G. Eyres is having his store decorated in green and gold. When finished it will, with the addition of mirrors, be one of the handsomest in the state.

John Dingwall is growing extensively for the trade and has a well-grown stock of early chrysanthemums, a specialty with him.

Fred Goldring is cutting fine roses.

Violets are a failure. This was the last place in this vicinity where disease took hold and out went the plants. Local wholesale trade takes all the cut, which is large. Rebuilding will be in order next season.

Sambrook & Son report brisk demand and have an excellent stock for the coming season. M.

ANONYMOUS queries cannot receive attention. Names and addresses are necessary.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—The Carolina Floral Co. has been incorporated with $2,000 capital stock, by J. Henry Siuhrs and George J. L. Metz.

WYNCOTE, PA.—Joseph Heacock reports this year's the best September business he has ever experienced. He has sold out completely on some of the larger sizes of palms.

DAVENPORT, IA.—Last spring Charles Dannacher repurchased his old greenhouses and on October 1 he opened a retail store at 110 E. Third street, where Mrs. Dannacher is in charge.

PORTSMOUTH, O.—C. H. Knost has a seedling dahlia now in its third year which is quite distinct in color, a rich maroon with a light band close to the outer rows of petals. He says it is a first-class seller.

WEST SUPERIOR, WIS.—Everybody reports trade as fair, all planting and repairing finished and stock looking fine. Eischen Bros. are getting very good violets. The Superior and Duluth Floral Club met September 30 with a very good attendance. Misses O'Sullivan and Eischen, who attended the Milwaukee convention, gave a glowing account of their trip.

THE good weather of the past week has added many bushels to the coming sweet corn crop. Late sorts that need an especially long fall for maturing properly are getting about what they want.

THE latest advices from Denmark on cabbage and cauliflower are to the effect that the 1903 crop of both of these items will be very fine. The seed will be well filled out, plump and will yield fully 100 per cent.

THE bouquet green prospects may be materially affected by the recent heavy rains. The crop promised well, but now the swamps are full of water and the supply of good green may be considerably shortened; at least, ear-picking is not likely to be easy.

REPORTS in general from the growing sections the past week indicate little change from a week ago. The continued favorable weather is helping the vine seeds where the crop still remains in the open fields. It is likely that the cucumber seed will fill out better than it would have done had frosty temperature prevailed. This is a very important factor in the making of a crop. Some of the finest looking specimens of cucumber yield very light seed if the frost nips the vine before all the juices get into the fruits. The question of the cucumber crop is probably the hardest of all to determine, but the weather conditions prevailing at present are certainly making things no worse.

J. LELAND FOGG.

We reproduce herewith a photograph of the late J. Leland Fogg, notice of whose death appeared in our issue of last week. Mr. Fogg was born March 25, 1845, at Rochester, N. Y. His father was James Perry Fogg, a seedsman at that place. At the age of 17 J. Leland started to work for his father at Rochester and got his early training there. The family removed to Chicago

In 1890 Mr. Fogg moved the business to Cedar Rapids, Iowa, conducting it under the name of Leland Fogg. He discontinued business at that place in 1894 and was given charge of the Illinois interests of the Sioux City Seed Co., with headquarters at Peoria, Ills., where he operated a retail store during the spring months, in addition to looking after its Illinois territory as a traveling salesman. This connection was severed in 1896, at which time he engaged as a traveling salesman for S. F. Leonard, continuing with S. F. Leonard and the Leonard Seed Co. until the time of his death. Mr. Fogg had a cheerful and winning personality. Always hopeful, he possessed the knack of bringing others less optimistic toward his view. This faculty in a measure accounts for his splendid success as a salesman. His special work during the past six years was canvassing the general stores in the lesser cities throughout Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. In this capacity few in the seed line have met as great a measure of success. His methods were straightforward, his work thorough; in all things a gentleman he was an ornament to his craft. In business dealings he was upright and conscientious, fair to his customer, and loyal to his house. In his death the seed trade loses a representative that did it credit.

CLEVELAND.The Market.

The past week has shown a decided improvement in all lines of demand, and the supply has kept even with it, excepting good carnations, which are very hard to get, as very few of our growers are cutting any from indoor plants. Asters are almost done for this season, but will not be missed, as dahlias are coming in freely, and the best this market has ever seen. The demand for them is very strong and at good prices.

Notes.

On October 1 the Citizens' Savings and Trust Company opened its new skyscraper and banking office on Euclid avenue. This caused a big demand for fine flowers and gave the downtown stores a nice lot of work. A person visiting the bank might easily have mistaken it for a flower show.

Henry P. Piggott has opened a retail store at the corner of Pearl street and Clark avenue, where he will do a general retail business. The store is in a good location and Mr. Piggott has shown good taste in his fixtures and the general arrangement. He will continue to run the greenhouses at South Brooklyn as before.

Kate Cranz, of Ira, Ohio, has been shipping some very fine dahlias to the F. R. Williams Co. E.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

We have had a couple of quite hard frosts during the past week, but there are still plenty of dahlias, zinnias and other garden flowers. Chrysanthemums and violets have made their appearance, E. Y. Pierce being the first to cut violets and H. A. Jahn to cut 'mums.

The Florists' Club had a special meeting, clam bake and entertainment in Castle Hall, Wednesday evening, September 30, and had a red-hot time. The clams were just right and the "fixins" were "out of sight." C. B. Knickman, of the Ozone Park Nurseries, was present and did justice to everything. E. Y. Pierce came to the bake with two canes to help him along, but when the music started up rheumatism was forgotten and the way he danced an Irish jig put us young fellows out of the business. A. B. Hathaway also surprised us with a few steps. The Pierce brothers sang a duet and W. P. Pierce sang and danced. S. S. Peckham was down for a violin solo, but Sam had a $500 wedding decoration that day and was so busy he forgot his fiddle. We also had a couple of colored singers that were immense. The club voted in two new members, one active and one honorary. It was voted to hold the next meeting at the store of R. E. Nofftz.

John Driscoll, head gardener at the W. J. Rotch estate, died suddenly Sunday, September 27, from heart disease. He leaves a widow, having been married for the second time about four months ago. Mr. Driscoll was a man well liked among the florists. In the time of the old New Bedford Florists' and Gardeners' Club he was a very active member and has taken a number of prizes for specimen plants exhibited at its shows.

CINCINNATI.The Market.

Chrysanthemums have failed to make their appearance in this market, and with the present high temperature it is just as well that they have not. Trade holds up remarkably well. Fall openings have not been very profitable to the florists, as but few flowers have been used. There is a fair lot of funeral work being done right along, which helps to use up the large quantities of short-stemmed roses that are coming in. The supply of really good roses is very limited and not many that bring over 4 cents are seen. Liberty is in good demand, with a very limited supply. Beauties are more plentiful and of very good quality. A few Sunrise now and then go well. There are very few carnations being cut at present by growers about this city. The market is being supplied by out-of-town growers. Carnations as a whole are bringing a higher price this year than last, especially short-stemmed and field-grown stock. Other outdoor stock is virtually out of the market.

Notes.

J. W. Rodgers has just finished planting carnations. He is growing a great many 'mums this year, but reports a discoloration of the leaves, caused by a small worm, which works in the interior of the leaf, causing it to turn black. It does not seem to affect the growth of the plant, but will undoubtedly affect its value as a cut flower.

L. H. Kyrk is back again after a week's illness.

J. T. Conger designed a neat wedding decoration at Hartwell, Ohio, for the wedding of Miss Huddleson to Mr. Nash, son of the governor of Ohio.

Al. Forder has about finished a greenhouse, 20x100, for Stuart Shillito. Wm. Fluck is the gardener.

Chas. L. Baum, of Knoxville, Tenn., is busy building two modern houses, 24x110.

Wm. Murphy is at home again after a very pleasant vacation at the lakes.

J. D. Eisele and G. D. Clark, Philadelphia; John Evans, of Richmond, Ind.; John Lodder, Hamilton, O., and Herbert Heller, New Castle, Ind., were callers.

C. J. OHMER.

OWENSBORO, KY.

The Market.

Trade is on the up grade. Bright, sunny weather has succeeded the dull, rainy days, and stock has improved in quality and increased in quantity. A week ago there was a surfeit of good stock, but most roses are off crop and the supply is normal again. Stock is fine, roses especially so. Carnations are becoming more plentiful and improving in size of bloom and length of stem. In chrysanthemums we have had Fitzwygram, while Bergman is just coming in and Yellow Queen will be ready in a week. Violets have made their appearance, but are rather small.

Notes.

French bulbs are just arriving and are being quickly planted by the growers.

E. F. Lemke was taken very ill suddenly and removed to the hospital and operated on. He is recovering rapidly and has passed the danger point.

PITTSBURG.The Market.

Business was good the past week, with prices a little better but with a little more surplus stock. The demand for good stock exceeded the supply, but the medium grades and inferior flowers sold slowly. We have had no frost to hurt gladioli, dahlias and asters, of which quantities are still to be had. Beauties are fine and lots of them. Chrysanthemums are more plentiful. Montmort, Bermann and Fitzwygram are the varieties. The supply of carnations is steadily increasing. In greens, asparagus, Sprengeri and smilax are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The demand for decorative stock, such as palms, ferns and rubbers, is fair.

A new flower shop will be opened in the down-town district next month, by two enterprising young florists.

Tom Ulam was busy with funeral work last week.

John Foss had a large decoration at Crafton on Monday.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Company is receiving consignments of chrysanthemums, of which the quality is quite good.

P. Peterman, of Evergreen, is cutting some very fine double pink dahlias.

The store and home of J. J. Joliff, Monessen, Pa., were totally destroyed by fire last week. The loss aggregates $600 and no insurance.

Ernest Fisher, of Castle Shannon, certainly knows how to grow carnations. He is cutting quantities of blooms, of which the size of flower and length of stem is as good as ones grown in mid-season.

Patrick Maier is sending in some good Kaiserin roses.

A large number of friends and florists were present at a stag card party, which John Bader gave at his home last Tuesday evening. A very enjoyable evening was spent.

J. J. Fuchs is passing around the perfectos on account of a newcomer, a fine baby boy.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ludwig are visiting friends in Rochester, N. Y.

Recent visitors were S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, and W. S. Steele, Uniontown, Pa.
Hoo-Hoo.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting and exhibition of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held at the rooms in Orange, where A. Herrington, of Madison, gave an informal talk upon hardy perennials. A vase of Grand Duke Alexis dahlia, grown by Peter Duff, Mr. Herrington declared alone repaid a trip from Madison, while the whole show denoted skill of a high order. Among the evening's exhibits were a cyripedium and collection of dahlias by D. Kindsgrab, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine by Malcolm MacRorie, roses and fruit by George Smith, vegetables by Peter Duff and Chas. Ashmead, a large vase of named dahlias by Wm. Bennett and Lawson carnations by John Hayes.

After a pressing invitation from Mr. Herrington to attend the finest chrysanthemum show yet held, in New York next month, the society decided to make the November meeting a special chrysanthemum night.

Among the visitors was W. Duckham, of Madison.

RANDOM NOTES.

WARREN, PA.—W. M. Lott has retired from business for the present, being unable to secure a renewal of lease for greenhouses. Dan Offerle is making many improvements, including the erection of a handsome store with living room above for his son, who has just returned from his wedding trip, which included a visit to his craftsmen across the line. He reports stock at Dunlop's and Dale's in splendid shape. Says all eyes are being turned towards Elmira. Gammage is the coming grower of Canada.

OIL CITY, PA.—Oakwood Rose Gardens supplied the bulk of the roses used in the decoration of the club house for the reception of Governor Pennypacker at Franklin last week. B. Stahl, of Philadelphia, had charge and did splendidly. A large quantity of outdoor flowers were used. I noticed a big shipment of hardy cut flowers from Henry A. Dreer. They made a grand show and were much admired. W. T. Bell & Sons were very busy with their regular trade during the week and had all they could well attend to. Their new plant, situated at Belleville, a short distance from town, is the nucleus of what promises to be a large range. Land and location is well suited for this. R. C. Reynders has no kick coming either, business being the best in several years past. He has made several improvements during the summer, including a fine storage shed for hardy stock. Being located close to the principal cemeteries, such work is large. He finds hardy lilies very useful during the summer for designs. M.

NILES, MICH.—J. D. Schnoor is building a large addition to his greenhouse on Fifth street.

A black and white photograph of a potted palm plant. The plant has several long, feathery fronds that fan out in different directions. It is growing out of a dark, rounded pot. The background is a light-colored, textured surface, possibly a wall or a backdrop, with some mottling and shadows. The lighting creates strong contrasts between the dark fronds and the lighter background.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

I see that your wandering correspondent has been around here again, picking up chunks of wisdom and items of interest and spreading them broadcast through your paper. He was a little "off" in stating that the Dale Estate, of Brampton, was to locate a large greenhouse plant here. It is the U. S. Cut Flower Co., a New York concern, but it is to be managed by Mr. Algie, the man who is responsible for the great success of the Dale Estate greenhouses. We local growers hope and expect it will be a great success. The site chosen is an admirable one, high and dry, with good circulation of air and yet protected from the heaviest storms, also convenient to the railroads. In regard to the sun shining "but one day in seven" here, as your correspondent cynically remarks, I will say that within the last four weeks there has not been a day on which the sun did not shine at least part of the time. There have been just as good flowers grown in Elmira, by Mr. Rawson and others, as are to be found anywhere and we expect that this reputation will be improved by the new concern. The only point that does not look favorable to some of us is that they intend to build with butted glass. (I can almost hear Brother Scott crow.)

The other growers here are making the usual additions and repairs. Eugene Lewis has added another house to his establishment. He confines his efforts to carnations, chrysanthemums and bedding plants.

H. N. Hoffman completed early in the summer, a rose house, 32x160, even span, walls concrete two and one-half feet and glass two and one-half feet; solid beds with 4-inch concrete walls for sides; angle iron purlins and pipe posts. The heating is done with hot water, flow pipes overhead and returns against the side walls and along the walks.

A new firm, J. E. Higgins & Son, has purchased the greenhouses run for so many years by Mrs. Moore and is planning to do a general retail flower business.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business is slowly improving. Outdoor goods are getting sadly out of form, but indoor stock is rapidly rounding into shape. Roses are both good and plentiful. Chrysanthemums are all right, white ones plentiful enough, but the colored sorts a bit shy yet. There are single violets enough to give a blue tinge to the background. Asters are about gone, but J. E. Long, of Holliston, is cutting what he calls his winter crop, which he will continue until he gets tired cutting with his mittens on. Price, $1 per 100. Carnations continue a little on the off side, but there are some good ones.

Notes.

Two new places are announced to help us distribute our goods. J. J. McCormack will open at 37 Arch street, in the store recently vacated by T. Waters, and S. Hoffman is to open a fine place at 925 Boylston street, a couple of blocks beyond Galvin's Back Bay store.

"Bill" Anderson cannot go to Norumbega park without being bitten by a bear, but he has just returned without a mark from a run all over Nova Scotia.

James Denning has transferred his allegiance from W. S. Wilson to the Budlong Company.

Davis, the transfer florist, of Cambridge, has annexed an outdoor space and fenced and roofed it, so that he can now do big business.

M. E. Tuohy, of South Boston, has arrived home from his trip to Ireland. He was closely pursued by the Ancient and Honourable Artillery Company, of London, who have been the guests of Boston's venerable organization this week.

GROWERS WATCH FOR FRAUD.

GENTLEMEN:—

116 West St., New York City.

I procured through a New York seedsman 200 lbs. of your FUMIGATING KIND TOBACCO POWDER and it was not the kind you ship; it is more like clay and will not burn at all; their agent assured me that his firm sold yours. As I am entirely out please send at once 200 lbs. FUMIGATING KIND. It is superseding tobacco stems in this neighborhood.

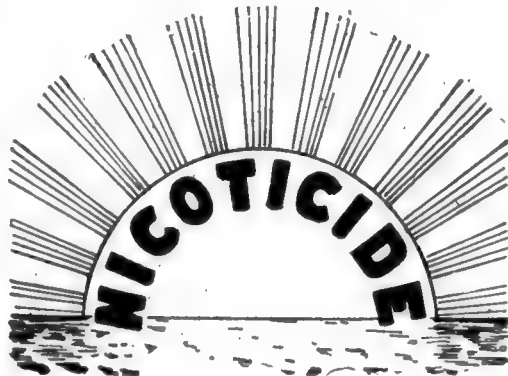

Very truly,

EDWARD W. CLARK.

The above is one of many letters we receive, and we wish to advise all that THE FUMIGATING KIND TOBACCO POWDER is not genuine if our "guarantee tag of satisfaction or money back" is not attached to every bag. In every case similar to Mr. Clark's no tags were attached, this alone showing fraud. Buy direct from us.

Florists' Review

When Writing Advertisers

GRAND RAPIDS.

Through varying weather, business has kept up briskly; funeral orders have been frequent and have served to keep the greenhouse men as well as the stores, busy putting up work. While carnations and roses were scarce, the bright days have recently brought them on fast. Violets are beginning to bloom, though as yet quality is poor. There are also a few Harrisii to be seen.

Henry Smith is not yet in shape to turn on steam, but will be in a few days.

Bruinslot has his houses now planted and everything looking fine.

Cunningham has his steamfitting on his new place about done.

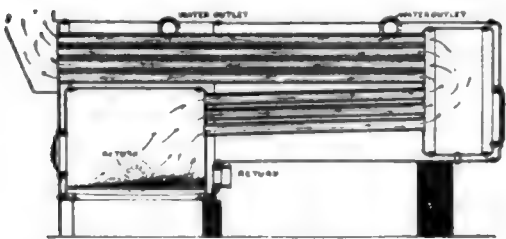

Crabb & Hunter did not get their smoke stack raised until October 6, and have only two runs of pipe in each house, just so steam can be turned on to take the chill off. They are beginning to cut some fine La France and Kaiserin.

The West Michigan fair was a financial success in spite of the bad week. The plant exhibit was poor. In floral designs Henry Smith was first with a large panel on an easel. The Grand Rapids Floral Co. took second with a large wreath of roses on a stand. On table the Grand Rapids Floral Co. was first, Henry Smith second, and Bruinslot & Sons third. William Cunningham was also an exhibitor and came in for a share of the premiums. It is to be hoped that next year, the management will get a hustle on and get the premium list out early and in the hands of the florists, so they will know what to grow and have time to get ready. G. F. C.

THE Chicago Tribune of October 4 used Nephrolepis Piersoni for the subject of its full page picture for the front of the color section. It is seldom that a new plant gets so good an advertisement and it is publicity of great value, also, to the trade at large.

MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.

Roses for the Garden.

There is nothing you are more frequently asked for in the spring, and more rarely well supplied with, than bedding roses. Our people very properly want roses in their garden. This is especially the case with those who have a summer home by the lake or riverside, somewhere "far from the maddening crowd." The desire and liking for a summer home of a few acres is most properly pervading all classes, from the multi-millionaire who has his 1,000 acres and castle cottage, to the city doctor, who has a pleasant cottage a few miles out of town. The very rich, even if their tastes do not run to flowers, will have them for appearance sake, and the dwellers in less pretentious homes will be sure, by their environment, to imbibe a love for cultivating plants and flowers. They will find that many things they could not get to grow at all in the little, worn-out gardens of the city will thrive and grow in the pure air and new soil of the country. I can call to mind a dozen of our own citizens who have within a few years acquired summer homes and are now floricultural enthusiasts, who before that barely knew the distinction between a tea rose and a hollyhock.

These rural residents seldom go in for formal flower gardening. Beds of geraniums, carpet bedding, or long lines of coleus they don't care for. They want beds of roses, borders of herbaceous plants, clumps of grasses, flowering shrubs, etc., and that is a taste that is most essentially proper. Hybrid perpetual roses, the noblest of all the universal favorites, are sure to hold a prominent place in all such gardens. If you are asked to supply them now, don't do it unless you badly want to make a sale. I usually say: "Yes, they can be planted at the end of October or early in November, but you would have no pleasure from them this winter and would run the risk of losing many. Better wait until spring, when, if properly planted, there is no risk." This advice is invariably accepted. I am aware this is not the way a tree peddler would talk, but he belongs to a section of humanity utterly apart from the responsible nurseryman or florist.

Reliable Varieties.

In passing I will just say to any of you who have a few hundred good plants of hybrid perpetual roses in the field that you intend to lift and force for Easter, don't touch them yet; let a good frost ripen the wood. The second week in November is early enough to lift the Ramblers and within a week or two I will have something to say about the treatment of these roses from the time of lifting until they are brought into heat that I think is a very valuable hint to many. It was very valuable to me, which is why I think so. Fragrant, large, rich in color, as are the H. P. roses, it is a misnomer to call them perpetual, and when the middle of July is here their burst of bloom is over. Not so with the tea or Bourbon roses, and that is the class we are so constantly asked for and, to repeat, too often poorly able to supply and, worse than that, unable to buy. I am not competent to give a list of all the everblooming summer roses. A man like E. G. Hill knows perhaps fifty varieties that would be very satisfactory and bloom constantly from June until hard frost puts them to sleep.

A few I do know from having grown them, and these belong to several classes. Ahead of all we must put the pink and white Mme. Cochet, and then comes Souv. du President Carnot, Duchess de Brabant, Admiral Schley, Perle des Jardins, Comtesse Breteuil, Eloile de Lyon, Marie Van Houtte, Mme. Joseph Schwartz, Marie Guillot, Papa Gontier and Sunset. Years ago we grew out of doors and cut by the armful those good old true tea roses that are so little heard of now, Bon Silene, Safrano and Isabella Sprunt. One hardly knows how beautiful is a bud of Safrano unless he has seen them growing in the cool month of October. Then there is the grand La France, which I suppose is a true hybrid tea, but is usually treated as a hardy hybrid perpetual.

A much longer list of summer blooming roses could be made, but even if you had but half a dozen of the best, you could satisfy a great majority of your customers; and if you want to grow for your own cutting, then by all means have a well-cared-for bed of the pink and white Cochet and a good lot of President Carnot. It is worth adding, for a few may not know it, that the grandest of our indoor roses, Catherine Mermet, and its still more valuable sports, Bridesmaid and Bride, are no success out of doors.

To Get Good Plants.

Now, there are more ways than one of having good plants of these garden roses to offer in April and May. They cannot be sold cheap; it takes time and space to produce them. There is a great distinction between the tea roses and the H. P. class. The latter lose their foliage in winter and completely rest, the same as our hardy deciduous shrubs. The tea roses may naturally rest partially in winter, where they are hardy, but they are evergreen and won't stand to be dug up and heeled in all winter in a cold frame or root house. They want light and, although their roots may not be very active in winter, some growth is going on. The cuttings of any of the roses mentioned above, taken from plants outside, will root readily now, in sand, with or without bottom heat. When rooted they should have a house that is from 50 to 55 degrees until the roots are active in the pot. After that they can be put into a cool house, no matter how cool. A few degrees of frost will do no harm. But remember that these tea roses are not hardy in our northern states. They will stand 15 or even 20 degrees of frost without harm, but you don't want to freeze them. Keep at from 35 to 40 degrees on cool nights. Now, from the time you put them into the cool house until the middle of next February or the first of March they are partially resting. Then shift them into 4-inch pots and give them a light bench and a little higher night temperature, pinching off shoots where they want to send up a bud, and by the first of May you have a splendid bedding plant that will quickly start to grow and flower. Don't force them while under glass. Don't give them your rose house temperature of 56 to 58 degrees, or you will have a tender plant and mildew. Also try not to let them be over 50 degrees at night at any time before planting out. Now, this is no more labor than we put on zonale geraniums, and, although you may not sell one-tenth as many as you do of geraniums, you can get fifty per cent more for the roses and, I think, get more to the square foot. And the reason you don't sell more is because you don't have them and people who buy their geraniums and coleus of you send away to some catalogue man for their roses.

Lifting Plants in Autumn.

I was told three years ago that Mme. Cochet did not do so well, that is, flower so well from plants that had been lifted in the fall and wintered over as on young plants treated as I have tried to explain. This has not been convincing with me and I have seen two-year-old plants of Cochet and Carnot do splendidly. Your customers, ninety-nine out of 100, are taken with size and therefore if you have any roses of the varieties mentioned, lift them before a hard frost. Now they can be lifted, and with proper treatment they will be most captivating plants by next May. Here is just my experience with a few hundred Cochet and Carnot last winter, and all the other desirable summer blooming tea roses want just the same treatment. They were plants that had been put out the end of the previous May. They were microscopically small, not quite so small as the bacillus of generosity, nor yet the size of the germ of prevarication; that is, 500 would go into a cigar box. They were bought of a firm that raises 14,000,000 roses in the space where one-half a million might be, but they grew and flowered some. Their start was their handicap.

About the middle of October they were lifted, cut back to within four to six inches of the ground and potted firmly in 4-inch pots. You see they were small; larger plants would need a 5-inch. They were placed in a violet house where the night temperature was little, if any, above 40 degrees and sometimes lower. They did not wilt a leaf and soon had roots growing. There they remained with no shift until the following May, being given one or two moves to spread them out for more room. The warmth of spring brought them along, and by the first of May they were full of strong shoots and flower buds and we could have sold ten times the quantity. Everyone who saw them wanted some. Withal, it is a very simple but sure operation. Those who can not give them a bench in a very cool house can do just about as well with a good, tight cold frame, and those who don't happen to have any of these roses in the ground would do well to buy of some nurseryman a few hundred plants now and treat them as I have described.

In conclusion, I would like to hear from Mr. Gurney Hill as to what he would recommend as the best ten summer blooming tea hybrid, Bourbon or China roses.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Those who contemplate using grafted stock for next season's planting should now make arrangements for the requisite supply of Manetti stocks, as it will soon be time to begin preparing these for work. If the stocks are home-grown they should be lifted and potted before hard frost sets in. The imported dormant stocks should be potted as soon as they arrive, so as to give them ample time to form good roots without having to resort to forcing, as they are very impatient of heat when they are first potted.

They should be put into 2½-inch pots, and where the roots are too large a little judicious root pruning will do them no harm. They should then be thoroughly watered and placed in a temperature of from 35 to 40 degrees. They will require very little watering between the time of potting and the time they are wanted for use, just as much as will keep the bark in a fresh condition. By this method they will form nice, fibrous roots, which will be ready to go to work on the first application of heat, while the eyes will yet remain unbroken.

To the manner in which they are cared for during this period can be attributed a good deal of the success or failure of the grafting operation. But as few growers care to begin grafting till after New Year's, I will reserve my remarks on this class of work till that season.

Now that the days are getting shorter and the afternoon sun dips so quickly, great care should be taken with the ventilation. The ventilators should be raised with every 5 degrees of raise in the temperature of the house during the forenoon, until the maximum is reached, and they should be lowered with the same care and patience in the afternoon. Many a nice house of plants is brought to the verge of ruin by allowing the temperature to jump from 60 degrees in the morning to 75 or 80 degrees by neglecting this seemingly trivial detail, and then allowing them to drop from noon-day temperature to 60 degrees or below without any gradation.

Extra care in this matter and in properly gauging the supply of water necessary during the next few months will, or should, be one of the most important duties of the grower, as carelessness, ignorance or neglect will most surely lead to disaster. Exercising sound judgment in regard to syringing will save us from many mental worries. This is part of the work which in many places is considered part of the daily routine and which could be in a great measure curtailed. If the houses have been carefully attended to and the spider kept out during the summer months, there will be much less use for the syringe till the days begin to lengthen.

A careful examination of each bench two or three times a week will reveal the spots where spider has got a foothold and by paying attention to these spots spider can be kept from spreading. When it is necessary to syringe a whole house, or houses, always select a bright, clear morning and do the work thoroughly, keeping the temperature 10 degrees higher than the normal during the operation to prevent chilling, and giving plenty of ventilation till the foliage is again dry, even at the expense of an all-day fire.

standard pink for either commercial or exhibition purposes. I hope presently to get a photograph of this variety so that readers can form their own conclusions. I know of no pink that begins to compare with this in size and finish and the original owner of its name may well be proud to have such a variety called after him.

Wm. Duckham is a fitting mate for Thirkell, Lord Salisbury and other Australian varieties that were first brought to the notice of chrysanthemum lovers in America through these columns.

BRIAN BORU.

CHRYSANTHEMUM RUST.

I send herewith some blooms of Timothy Eaton chrysanthemum which are infested with a disease which I call rust. On the under side of the leaf you will see a spot which will appear on one leaf and quickly spread all over the bench. I tried to stop it by pulling off the leaves that were affected, but it did no good. I have not fired at night. Have been very careful in watering, in fact running them on the dry side. What is the cause and remedy?

F. H. M.

The correspondent is correct in assuming that the spots noticed on the under side of the leaves submitted, are the spores of the disease known as rust. The question as to what causes the rust is not so easy to answer. I first saw this disease about six years ago, and I believe it was imported from Europe on some varieties about that time. Since then it has cropped up more or less every year, but never assumed the seriousness here that it did in Europe. It seems to be more in evidence this year than usual, owing no doubt to the wet summer, as it spreads very rapidly in a moisture laden atmosphere.

The best remedy is to keep the atmosphere and the foliage of the plants as dry as possible. Pick off any foliage that can be easily spared and then spray with sulphide of potassium, proportions one ounce to two gallons of water. This will prevent the rust from spreading if the spraying is faithfully performed; that is to say, if every portion of the under side of the leaf is wet with the moisture. The sulphide can be obtained in any good drug store. Be sure to get the name right, as the sulphate of potassium is a different article.

The rust has often been spoken of in these notes, and how to keep it in check, as your correspondent will find if he looks up his back numbers. After the crop of flowers has been cut, look very carefully over the plants retained for stock and any time during the winter that a spot of rust appears spray the plants over, as now advised. By this means the rust can be cleaned out before another growing season.

BRIAN BORU.

CARNATIONS FROM POTS.

What advice would you give as to the benching of carnations out of 2½-inch pots?

S. W. C.

Just what course of procedure the correspondent has in mind is not altogether clear to me. His letter does not state clearly just what he wishes to know. Surely he does not intend to plant carnations on his benches taken from 2½-inch pots at this time of the year, for winter flowering, at least. That would be wasting room and labor most foolishly, as he could not possibly expect a decent

TWO STERLING NOVELTIES.

There are several of the novelties showing wonderful promise and two of these that are at this date, October 11, fully developed from early buds, are Cheltoni and William Duckham. I have in the past ten years seen many novelties come and go, but never have I seen a variety that showed more promise than do these. Cheltoni is the yellow sport of Nellie Pockett, having the same ideal habit of growth, and will be largely grown when it becomes generally distributed.

Nellie Pockett is a great favorite in the east and its large size and artistically curled petals always command attention. This yellow sport is a wonderful color. As a general thing when a white variety sports yellow the color is very pale and undecided, but Cheltoni is a clear, shining yellow as deep or deeper in color than Halliday. When Mrs. T. W. Pockett came out last year I thought it the most beautiful variety I had ever seen. Placed alongside of Cheltoni, Mrs. Pockett is poor by comparison and those who are growing this latter variety this year will appreciate the fact that this is a strong statement to make.

If any other growers have Cheltoni I hope they will give their experience with it to the public. One cannot hear too much about a new variety. Like its parent, Cheltoni should be taken on the crown bud. The terminal bud is deficient in petalage. One bud this year was taken August 3 and it developed perfectly. Later crowns are showing just as well, but will be somewhat later to finish. A bud taken before August 20 is apt to be finished and gone before the exhibitions.

The other variety, William Duckham, is of Australian birth and is the most striking advance in its color since the days of Viviani-Morel. It is an incurving pink, showing deeper color inside the petal and under artificial light has a finish like the finest satin ribbon. I was prepared for a fine novelty in this variety, as it took the silver medal in Edinburgh last year, for the best novelty not in commerce, but it has gone away ahead of all expectations.

Imagine a flower eight inches across, perfectly shaped, with broad, massive petals, some of them almost an inch across, and withal a finish as fine as Merza at its best. The habit of the plant is ideal, a clean, strong grower, perfectly healthy and not a fault so far as I can see. One bud was taken early in August to test it on all kinds of buds and this bud is now developed. Later buds are showing up grandly and doubtless many who read these notes will see this variety at some of the eastern exhibitions. I predict for it in the future a place as the cut of blooms before spring and as prices then would be on the decline he would not be able to realize enough from them to pay for his winter's work. If you want to plant carnations and you have only these young plants it will pay you to buy good field-grown plants from some reliable grower, of whom there are several advertising in the REVIEW. Lose no time in getting them planted, as it is getting very late and it will take skillful handling to get a fair crop of good blooms by Christmas. You need not throw those young plants away, however. Set them in a cool house or in a pit where they will live over winter and in the early spring plant them out for summer blooming. Repot into 3-inch if necessary, but keep them growing slowly and top them close right along to keep the plants compact. If S. W. C. wants directions regarding planting his carnations on the benches from pots in the spring, he will likely find them in these articles towards spring. I would advise him to propagate and grow his stock along much the same, at the beginning at least, as he would for planting in the field. The most up-to-date method (except for one or two varieties) is to plant out in open as early as possible and lift early in July. This gives the plants that strong, sturdy growth as a base to work on, while all the blooming shoots are grown inside and there is no check to the growth after the rapid fall growth commences.

A. F. J. BAUR.

PROFITABLE BUSINESS.

Do your customers know that you can execute orders for the prompt delivery of cut flowers or floral designs for any occasion, anywhere in the United States? Why not let them know? Such business is easily handled and affords a fair profit.

Many leading retailers display neat signs in their windows announcing that they can deliver flowers in any city in the United States for funerals or any other purpose. Another way would be to print such a sentence on bills and letter heads, or a neatly printed card might be enclosed in each package where the proprietaries would permit, or it might be mailed to your list of customers in the form of an announcement. As soon as it becomes known that you can deliver funeral pieces a thousand miles away at a few hours' notice you will have a steady call for such service.

The page of "Leading Retail Florists" which appears regularly in this paper affords the means of filling orders in every principal city in the United States. This page is open only to firms of known standing and whose equipment is adequate to meet any calls of this character. Most of them already do a considerable amount of business on mail or telegraphic orders.

WORK WITH VIOLETS.

There are several things that are conducive to good violets. In fact, the right conditions are necessary for success with all kinds of flowers, but especially so with violets, as they are more susceptible to poor surroundings than many other plants. One thing that we refer to is cleanliness. You may have heard me mention this before, but there is nothing aside from unfavorable weather conditions that is much worse for violets. A house with more or less weeds, dirt, rubbish and with only an occasional clearing out will surely develop diseased violet plants, and once disease gets a foothold in such a house and atmosphere, it spreads rapidly. In the above category of rubbish we would include all old or decaying woodwork, and this brings us to sow bugs or wood lice, which are always too much in evidence under the best of conditions, and unless you look over your houses with extreme care just about now, you will wonder why it is that the blooms do not come on faster, and why those you do pick are ragged and small. You should commence at one end of the house and go along regularly and systematically in order to find out where they are eating and their nearest refuge, so as to be able to apply your remedies where most needed, and while you will find that they hide in the roots at the crown of the plants, they also congregate more largely about any woodwork which is nearby.

There are a variety of remedies for their destruction, but on the whole, if used with care, we find that Paris green is the best. Take dry, coarse granulated sugar and mix just enough Paris green with it to color it nicely. Then put it in small piles where the bugs run and in little rings about the plants, and along near the woodwork that has to be in the house. Of course, you want to plan this so that you scatter it when the ground is quite dry and when the atmosphere is likely to be dry and clear for some time, for at the best the sugar will gather moisture and dissolve, when you will likely have to renew your treatment, although two or three applications, if made thoroughly, will usually clear them out, so that you will only have to use this occasionally. Do not place this so that it will get on the flowers or leaves and after it is mostly dissolved, wash the residue into the soil with the hose when watering, so that no one may get poisoned.

As the sow bugs do their mischief in the dark, it is wise to put this on in the afternoon, so that it is in order for their supper, and you will generally find a goodly number dead in their tracks the next morning, besides those that are sick or dying but get to cover. You will also capture some of the centipedes, especially the round, hard-shelled ones, which I think also like violets, although I never could quite make up my mind exactly how much damage they do. But the sow bugs are unmistakably voracious eaters and are costly live stock to house and feed on violets.

With the weather that we have had, the violets from the field that I spoke of in my last notes have taken hold in nice shape and need no more shading, and would like to throw some blooms if we would let them. As I have remarked before, keep the houses well aired, night as well as day, no matter if you have quite a heavy frost outside. They will be much better in the long run. I do

Seasonable Hints.

Those who contemplate using grafted stock for next season's planting should now make arrangements for the requisite supply of Manetti stocks, as it will soon be time to begin preparing these for work. If the stocks are long grown they should be lifted and potted before hard frost sets in. The prepared dormant stocks should be potted as soon as they arrive, so as to give them ample time to form good roots without having to resort to forcing, as they are very impatient of heat when they are first potted.

They should be put into lightish pots, and where the roots are too large a little judicious root pruning will do them no harm. They should then be thoroughly watered and put in a temperature of from 35 to 40 degrees. They will require very little water, as the soil in the pot will keep them moist. The temperature should be gradually raised to 45 degrees, and the plants will be ready for work in a few weeks. It is important to keep the plants in a moist atmosphere, and this may be done by covering the pots with a glass or paper cover, and watering the soil frequently.

ut of blooms before spring and as prices then would be on the decline he would not be able to realize enough from them to pay for his winter's work. If you want to plant carnations and you have only these young plants it will pay you to buy good field-grown plants from some reliable grower, of whom there are several advertising in the REVIEW. Lose no time in getting them planted, as it is getting very late and it will take skillful handling to get a fair crop of good blooms by Christmas. You need not throw those young plants away, however, set them in a cool house or in a pit where they will live over winter and in the early spring plant them out for summer blooming. Repot into 3-inch if necessary, but keep them growing slowly and top them close right along to keep the plants compact. If S. W. C. wants directions regarding planting his carnations on the benches from pots in the spring, he will likely find them in these articles towards spring. I would advise him to propagate and grow his stock along much the same, at the beginning at least, as he would for planting in the field. The most up-to-date method (except for one or two varieties) is to plant out in open as early as possible and lift early in July. This gives the plants that strong, sturdy growth as a base to work on, while all the blooming shoots are grown inside and there is no check to the growth after the rapid fall growth commences.

PROFITABLE BUSINESS.

Do your customers know that you can execute orders for the prompt delivery of cut flowers or floral designs for any occasion, anywhere in the United States? Why not let them know? Such business is easily handled and affords a fair profit.

Many leading retailers display neat signs in their windows announcing that they can deliver flowers in any city in the United States for funerals or any other purpose. Another way would be to print such a sentence on bills and letter heads, or a neatly printed card might be enclosed in each package where the proprieties would permit, or it might be mailed to your list of customers in the form of an announcement. As soon as it becomes known that you can deliver funeral pieces a thousand miles away at a few hours' notice you will have a steady call for such service.

The page of "Leading Retail Florists" which appears regularly in this paper affords the means of filling orders in every principal city in the United States. This page is open only to firms of known standing and whose equipment is adequate to meet any calls of this character. Most of them already do a considerable amount of business by mail or telegraphic orders.

WORK WITH VIOLETS.

There are several things that are conducive to good violets. In fact, the right conditions are necessary for success with all kinds of flowers, but especially so with violets, as they are more susceptible to poor surroundings than many other plants. One thing that we refer to is cleanliness. You may have heard me mention this before, but there is nothing aside from unfavorable weather conditions that is much worse for violets. A house with more or less weeds, dirt, rubbish and with only an occasional watering out will surely develop diseased violet plants, and once disease gets a foothold in such a house and atmosphere, it spreads rapidly. In the above category of rubbish we would include all old or decaying woodwork, and this brings us to sow bugs or wood lice, which are always too much in evidence under the best of conditions, and unless you look over your houses with extreme care just about now, you will wonder why it is that the blooms do not come on faster, and why those you do pick are ragged and small. You should commence at one end of the house and go along regularly and systematically in order to find out where they are eating and their nearest refuge, so as to be able to apply your remedies where most needed, and while you will find that they hide in the roots at the crown of the plants, they also congregate more largely about any woodwork which is nearby.

There are a variety of remedies for their destruction, but on the whole, if used with care, we find that Paris green is the best. Take dry, coarse granulated sugar and mix just enough Paris green with it to color it nicely. Then put it in small piles where the bugs run and in little rings about the plants, and along near the woodwork that has to be in the house. Of course, you want to plan this so that you scatter it when the ground is quite dry and when the atmosphere is likely to be dry and clear for some time, for at the best the sugar will gather moisture and dissolve, when you will likely have to renew your treatment, although two or three applications, if made thoroughly, will usually clean them out, so that you will only have to use this occasionally. Do not place this so that it will get on the flowers or leaves and after it is mostly dissolved, wash the residue into the soil with the hose when watering, so that no one may get poisoned.

As the sow bugs do their mischief in the dark, it is wise to put this on in the afternoon, so that it is in order for their supper, and you will generally find a goodly number dead in their tracks the next morning, besides those that are sick or dying but get to cover. Yes.

There are some other counterparts, especially the round, hard-shelled ones, which I think also like violets, although I never could quite make up my mind exactly how much damage they do. But the sow bugs are unmistakably voracious eaters and are costly live stock to house and feed on violets.

With the weather that we have had, the violets from the field that I spoke of in my last notes have taken hold in nice shape and need no more shading, and would like to throw some blooms if we would let them. As I have remarked before, keep the houses well aired, night as well as day, no matter if you have quite a heavy frost outside. They will be much better in the long run. I do not think I should have mentioned this so soon again, as it seems like needless repetition, but my attention was called to this mistake by the lack of ventilation in a neighbor's house that I was in a few days ago. He was closing up tight at night, and leaving the house closed through the day when cloudy, so as to keep things warm, as he had not started up his fires yet. But in my estimation this is a poor way, very poor, to get ahead. I made no comment, as he has been in the business several years and ought to know better, but he will certainly see the effects later, and then if you were to talk with him I presume he would express wonder why he did not have better "luck."

A MUSHROOM INDUSTRY.

The greater portion of St. Paul, Minn., is underlaid with sandstone. This rock readily pulverizes on being exposed to the wind and air, but hid beneath the earth's surface is as enduring as the everlasting hills. Many years ago vast caves were dug out of this rock, mainly for the purpose of storing beer. With modern methods for storing and "aging" beer, these caves fell into disuse, until L. F. Lambert, a few years since, conceived the idea of growing mushrooms in them. He has rented them in several sections of the city and now has over two acres of floor surface devoted to the industry, operating as the Minnesota Mushroom Company.

The caverns for the most part consist of groups of passages ranging in width from eight to twelve feet and in length from fifty to 300 feet, being from six to ten feet in height. Ventilation holes from the side or top are put in at convenient intervals, so that a proper supply of pure air is maintained in all parts of the cave.

While there are several hundred varieties of edible mushrooms found growing wild, but two varieties have yielded to cultivation and only one is generally

The mushroom requires a very even temperature for its development, from 55 to 57 degrees. The other cultivated variety known as Agaricus subrufescens will not thrive under 72 degrees.

The preparation of the beds, the planting of the spawn, the watering, etc., all receive careful attention. Stable manure is used exclusively for making the beds into which, after they heat and become properly decomposed, the spawn is planted at distances of twelve to fifteen inches each way and in four or five weeks after planting the mushrooms appear. At the proper stage of their development they are picked and shipped to market. In shipping light tomato boxes holding about two and a half pounds each are used. These are shipped in refrigerator shipping cases holding 100 pounds each, the most of them going to New York City, some to Chicago and other nearby cities.

Each bed lasts about three months from time of spawning until exhausted so that four crops can be gathered each year. After a bed is worn out the old material is all removed to make way for the new, and the process repeated. By planting at intervals a succession of crops is had throughout the entire year.

Mr. Lambert makes most of the spawn which he uses, and says he finds it superior to the imported article, which mostly comes from England and is annually imported in large quantities by the leading seedsmen.

Mr. Lambert informs me that St. Paul ships more mushrooms than any city in the country and also enjoys the distinction of shipping mushrooms every month in the year, a distinction unknown in any other city. He employs seven men throughout the year and ships one or more cases daily. Prices vary, but the average shipping price is 60 cents per pound. By contract with several of the leading livery stables he secures a constant supply of manure. During the winter were visited last spring by Prof. B. M. Duggar, of Columbia, Mo., who is preparing an exhibit for the mushroom industry as a part of the display of the U. S. Department of Agriculture at the St. Louis World's Fair. Prof. Duggar was particularly impressed with the methods of Paul Swanson, on West Forty-seventh street, who was having good success by the use of wild spawn, gathered on the pastures and manufactured into bricks on the place. Some of this spawn was very prolific, some of it exactly the opposite. Prof. Duggar told Mr. Swanson of his experiments with what he calls pure culture spawn and the result is that Mr. Swanson is using nothing else this season. This spawn is grown direct from the best mushrooms, either from the spores or tissue in glass tubes in sterilized manure. It grows rapidly and is very vigorous. It has not yet been tried on a large scale but Mr. Swanson was so well pleased with his first trial that he decided to stake his season's business on it. One of the accompanying illustrations shows the stages through which the spawn passes, the cultures in the glass tube, the brick and the crop. The other picture show the first bed spawned with this material. The bed was of about 100 square feet and only four or five inches deep and was spawned at a very unfavorable season, June 1, when the weather was very warm. The picture was taken July 18, and in the next three days of cool weather forty-six pounds of mushrooms were picked.

A VIEW OF THE WEST.

BY EDWARD REID.

[The following is a synopsis of a paper read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, October 6, 1903.]

The convention recently held at Milwaukee was without doubt one of the best in all the history of the society. We might say that, geographically speaking, Milwaukee is one of the central cities of the United States, also of horticulture. Situated on the western shore of Lake Michigan, easily reached by railroads and steamboats, its beautiful streets, parks, business and residential buildings could not help but attract large delegations, as it is indeed "a bright spot."

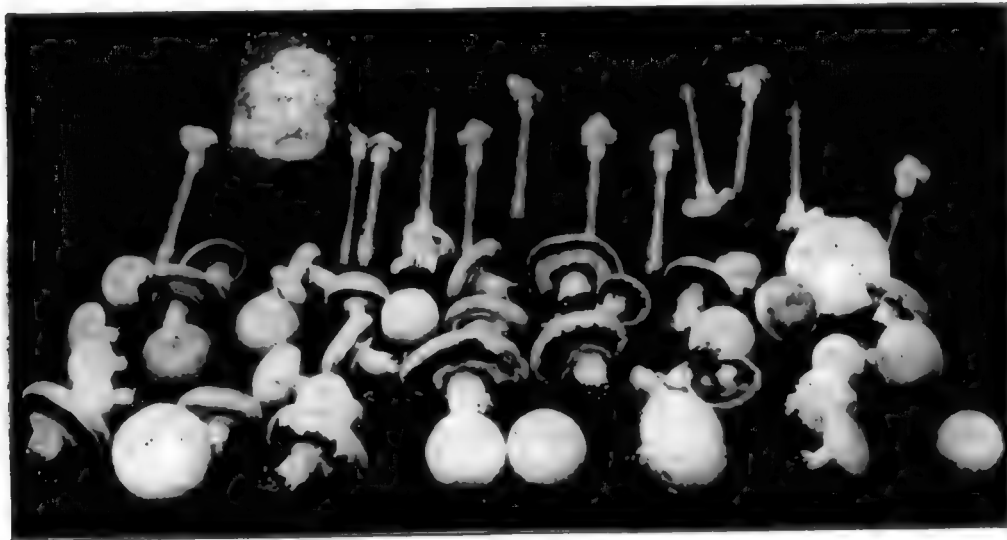

It will not be necessary for me to say anything in reference to the trip of the delegates from this city, for with Westcott in charge we would feel this a sufficient guarantee that every one would be amply cared for. On the arrival of the delegates at Milwaukee, contrary to past experience, everything at the convention hall was in ship-shape; and much credit is due to the committee on arrangements.

The opening session was well patronized and every seat was occupied long before the opening hour. This, in itself, was indicative of the interest taken. The address of Mayor Rose was very appropriate and many of his remarks evoked laughter and applause. Unfortunately his remarks with regards to security of life and property were not fully justified, as some of the delegates realized afterwards. Had they not received such assurance it is possible they would have been on their guard; but, Mr. Mayor, we know your intentions were good.

President Burton's address was brief and to the point. After recounting some of the drawbacks encountered by the trade during the past season, he made some valuable suggestions for the future. To my mind his advice as to conservatism in greenhouse construction, which is growing all over the country, and especially in the west, and his counsel to hold something in reserve for the proverbial rainy day, was a good one.

The trade exhibits seemed to be a special feature and far surpassed all previous efforts both in number and variety. I believe that the trade was represented almost from ocean to ocean and as far south as Georgia. I could not begin to enumerate or define all the exhibits; suffice it to say that there was every requisite for greenhouse construction, heating and ventilating. Every representative was ready and willing to point out the advantages of his special display.

One apparatus which struck me as unique was a pot washer. It was operated by foot-power and was equipped with all sizes of brushes, cylindrical in form and could be easily adjusted for all sizes of pots. Its simplicity ought to commend itself to any one having use for a machine of this kind.

Various Stages in the Use of Prof. Duggar's Pure Culture Mushroom Spawn.

used, this being known as Agaricus campestris. There are, however, several types of this. One, a pure white, is most beautiful and most delicious, but bruises easily and discolors at the slightest touch, so that it is not suited for shipping. Another variety is a terra cotta color, another a brown, both of these sorts having a tougher outer skin than the white sort, and being superior for shipping purposes.

months the caves are heated by stoves to maintain the proper temperature.

SCIENTIFIC SPAWNING.

Chicago has some of the largest mushroom growing establishments in the country. Gray and Jackson each had about 200,000 square feet in beds, and there are many others, several of whom

The exhibition of foliage plants was exceptionally large, but as you will remember I am a cut flower commission man, and cannot be expected to enumerate or designate them by their botanical names, like our friend Mr. Carmody spoke of; however, they presented a very fine appearance, notwithstanding the fact that many of them had been shipped extremely long distances. One very creditable display came from Savannah, Ga.

Every representative seemed very well pleased with the amount of orders received, and I believe most all the plants on exhibition were sold to local florists. Now, this I consider beneficial to both parties. It gives the grower an opportunity to show what he grows, thereby advertising his business in the future; and when he is able to dispose of his plants in this way it saves him the trouble of repacking and paying express or freight charges back. The purchaser is also equally benefited, as it gives him an opportunity to see what he is buying and also saves transportation charges from point of production.

This is one of the strongest arguments why every florist should attend the convention. No matter what branch of the business he is engaged in, he will always find something of interest. He, no doubt, will find it beneficial as well as a pleasure.

The amount and variety of florists' supplies shown surpassed everything of previous years. One firm exhibited enough ribbon and other supplies to apparently stock a wholesale establishment; although one of their representatives told me that it was necessary for them to make such a display in order to fairly represent the stock on hand. Could any of us have contemplated fifteen or twenty years ago such an evolution in the business as we see today? And it is growing steadily on. Every one who does not keep up with the march of progress will sooner or later fall by the wayside.

The rule adopted in closing the exhibition during the business sessions was a good one and gave the sergeant-at-arms an opportunity to display his powers of discipline. Every one will agree that he performed his part well; which was no doubt largely responsible for the large audiences during each session. Matters of vital interest to the trade were discussed and listened to with great interest. Violet culture was very broadly dealt with by G. F. Crabb, of Grand Rapids, Mich., in which he minutely detailed his experience, his mode of treatment and the results derived therefrom. This was done for the benefit of his brother craftsman, which certainly shows a generous and unselfish spirit. Now, can't some one discover the true cause and remedy for stem rot in carnations, and give it to his brother florists in the same way? With the experience of last winter in our minds we were all interested in the paper relative to the substitutes for coal and their relative efficiency and cost, but it all resolved itself into the matter of either burning coal or wood, as most other substitutes are dependent on the former.

To my mind the qualities of the lignite was underestimated. This coal when first introduced was not a success, but in stoves and ranges especially constructed for its use it makes a very satisfactory substitute when hard coal cannot be had or its price is prohibitory.

The remarks of Mr. Altick in reference to the observation of January 29 as carnation day, in memory of the late President McKinley, should receive our individual attention and should appeal to our love and patriotism for one whose gentleness has made him great. Had it been feasible I should liked to have seen the S. A. F. as a national organization go on record as having contributed a substantial amount to the memorial fund, as it is now we must do it individually.

The discussion as to the best methods of keeping cut flowers was omitted in Thursday's programme. This, I think, was a great mistake, as no doubt the proper methods are a vital matter to the majority of the trade, as all our energies should be directed to have our products reach the hands of the consumer in the best possible condition. In many cases this can only be accomplished by open discussion and an exchange of experiences. I would suggest that this and the cutting, packing and shipping of cut flowers should receive attention at future conventions. The selection of St. Louis for the next convention was a good one. With the World's Fair and the horticultural display promised, the meeting should be a record-breaker.

The bowling tournament was one of the most exciting incidents and the most warmly contested since this popular amusement became a feature of the conventions. Much betting and big odds on the results was the order of the day, and not a few were surprised when they learned that the laurels went to the old Quaker city. But, boys, lookout; you are promised a lively time at St. Louis. Possibly these people do not know what they are up against.

The shooting tournament at the South Side Gun Club was one of the most pleasant features of the convention. The arrangements were all that could be wished, and while no records were broken, quite a few targets were disabled, although many of them escaped. Many and useful prizes were given for the contest. The writer is a recipient of two, which he will ever cherish with pleasant recollections of Milwaukee. At the conclusion of the contest Mr. Scott, of Buffalo, in his own inimitable manner, made a few appropriate remarks, thanking Mr. F. S. Schmelling, of the First Bed of Mushrooms Grown from Pure Culture Spawn.

Milwaukee Florists' Club, whose untiring efforts were put forth in making it a success, and contributing to the pleasure of all. Mr. Schmelling responded in a few well chosen remarks, saying that it was one of the greatest pleasures of his life to feel that he had been instrumental in giving pleasure to many. After three hearty cheers were given for him and the Milwaukee Florists' Club, all returned to the city, to be charmed by the witticisms of Mr. Carmody on the humorous side of the florists' business.

During our stay in Milwaukee the weather was all that could be desired. Friday morning at 9:30 the delegates boarded a boat on their way to Chicago. The crisp morning air from the water stimulated our appetites, which were satisfied by a unique lunch, every one being furnished with a small basket containing every requisite that goes to satisfy the inner man, and with the genial good fellowship that prevailed minded us of a basket picnic.

On arriving in the windy city we were taken in charge by the Chicago Florists' Club. Every one is familiar with the hospitality and entertainment extended by this organization. Saturday was devoted to sight-seeing and visits to the different establishments nearby, and the magnitude of the undertakings seen made the hair stand on the heads of some of the more conservative men from other states. Instead of an additional house or two being erected, as is the case in the east, whole ranges of glass are added here. No wonder President Burton counseled moderation along these lines. This about concluded the outing, and no one had any cause to regret their visit to the convention, but, on the other hand, would go home thinking it was money well spent, and be benefited by the knowledge acquired.

The writer, instead of going home, took Horace Greely's advice and turned his face westward, leaving business and cares behind. I have been requested to make a few remarks about the west, but as my stay was entirely in a farming and stock raising locality there is nothing I could say which would be very interesting to a florists' club. I will, however, make a few remarks, and if you get disgusted you will have to hold George Watson responsible.

Leaving Chicago over the Rock Island road our way led through a fertile farming country. We passed through several flourishing towns. For a good part of the way the road ran parallel to the canal that connects Lake Michigan with the Mississippi river, which we crossed at Rock Island, into Davenport, Iowa, the great corn country. Night had overtaken us here, shutting off further observations. Albert Lea, Minn., a flourishing city, was reached early next morning. After passing through several towns we reached Northfield, Minn. This place has gained notoriety, as it was here that the bandit kings, known as the Jesse James' gang, met their final defeat some years ago. The outlaws entered the town about midnight and proceeded to take charge of the deposits of the bank. The ire of the citizens was aroused at the bank being opened out of business hours, and so pronounced was their protest that when the smoke cleared away the street in front was filled with dead men and dollar bills. Almost the entire gang was either killed or captured.

That evening brought us to our destination, Courtenay, N. D. Farming and stock raising are the main industries in this locality. The principal crops grown are wheat, oats, barley and flax; the latter for seed only, which is used to make linseed oil and other products, but of late a tow mill has been erected to manufacture the fiber, which is largely used in upholstery. Harvest is a very interesting season for any one to visit the northwest. I have seen in one field eight binders following each other in rotation. The fields under cultivation vary from a half to four miles long, and differ in widths. Wheat yields according to the season from fifteen to forty bushels per acre; oats and barley from forty to sixty, and flax about fifteen; the latter ranging in price from 90 cents to $1.35 per bushel; oats about 30 cents and wheat from 50 cents to $1; the latter price is exceptional.

Just as soon as the grain is all cut and weather permits, they begin the threshing. This in itself is very interesting. A threshing outfit consists on an engine and tender, a separator, water wagon and dining car, and costs about $3,000. A crew from twenty to thirty men is required to operate it, and will thresh, clean, grade and deliver in the grain wagons which are waiting to receive it, from 1,800 to 3,200 bushels of grain per day. Every thing works automatically. The engines are of the traction type, furnishing their own motive power from place to place, and haul the other itineraries behind. Straw is the fuel used to generate steam. The straw is emitted from the separator from what is called a blower through a long funnel or pipe, which swings in any desired direction. The crew is boarded in the dining car, and the chef is paid from $4 to $5 per day. In most cases the straw is burned where it lies.

Horses and cattle stay outdoors during most of the winter, and the blizzards which we hear so much about are the exception rather than the rule. Wild roses and orange lilies bloom in abundance in the summer, all over the prairies.

Contrary to the general idea, the prairie of North Dakota is rolling, and not a level plain as many picture it. The soil is a rich black loam varying in depth from six to eighteen inches. All kinds of vegetables can be produced in abundance, with the exception of tomatoes, which do not ripen before the early frost. The potato crops, I think, are the finest I have ever seen, and rot is never known there. Field corn grows to the height of fifteen feet, but is not cultivated to any extent on account of the early frost, which comes about September 1. No fertilizer of any kind is ever used. At intervals of, say, four to six years, the land is allowed to lie idle and summer-fallowed for one season. Crops in land treated this way are always good the following year. Some years ago close to the city of Jamestown I saw a notice which read: "All persons are prohibited from dumping manure on this land." The general aspect of the country is an interesting study. It is entirely treeless, except around the streams and lakes, or where they are grown under cultivation. In several places it was intersected by ravines, which are commonly called coolies. These bear unmistakable signs of being immense rivers at one time, but now they are perfectly dry. Along the bottom are found plenty of shells and fossils supposed to have been fish bones at one time. Here and there are large stones or rocks penetrating through the ground, the surfaces of which are smooth as glass, from being used as a rubbing stone by the buffaloes, which inhabited that country in immense numbers some years ago, but are now entirely extinct, through the laxity of the game laws which then existed.

Water is to be had in abundance from wells running twenty to forty feet deep. It is induced to the surface by mills whose propelling power is wind—a local product, which can always be had in any quantity desired. On large ranches, where a great many of these mills are used, they present a picturesque sight when seen from a distance, with their white fans glistening in the sunlight. It reminds one of a field of overgrown Easter lilies. The water is impregnated with alkali, and not suitable for laundry purposes. It is also very disagreeable to the taste, but I was told that I would get used to that. The same thing is said in reference to getting hung, but I think this is a poor argument, because by the time one becomes accustomed to it they are not in the condition to enjoy it. Bain water is used entirely for cleansing purposes.

Land values have increased from 200 to 500 per cent within a few years. All government lands have already been taken up, and none can be secured unless purchased from an individual. The population consists mostly of farmers who have moved from states farther east, principally Michigan, Wisconsin and Iowa. Substantial farm homes with modern conveniences are taking the place of the claim shanties of years ago, and an air of prosperity seems to prevail in the locality. It is very gratifying to see that the people who went out there and suffered the hardships and privations are now reaping the rewards of their labors.

North Dakota abounds in small game, such as prairie chicken, wild ducks of all kinds and jack rabbits. Hunters always drive over the prairies in wagons, but in a few instances I have seen the automobile used as a substitute.

The lakes and streams abound in fine fish and afford rare sport to the angler. The principal fish are the yellow perch, pike and pickerel. The latter is very gamey and would no doubt appeal to the taste of Com. Wescott. Wild geese years ago could be found there by the thousands, but of recent years very few have made their appearance. Foxes, badgers and wolves are numerous. Taking everything into consideration, I would say that North Dakota is a sportsman's paradise (as well as the bread basket of the world, as it is often called). At least this was the writer's experience after a very enjoyable visit.

THE POT WASHER.

One man to whom the grower, or at least the grower's helper, should be grateful is our old-time friend, C. E. Finley, of Joliet, the lawn rake inventor, who has recently come forward with a pot-washing machine which has proven a great labor-saver in practical operation. The machine was shown at the S. A. F. convention at Milwaukee and probably attracted more attention from the growers than any other one exhibit in the hall. The machine is simple in its construction and is built to run either with foot power or a small, inexpensive electric motor.

The pot washer has a hollow brush, carried on a hollow shaft, and is made to revolve rapidly; is provided with a hose connection, the water allowed to pass down through the hollow shaft and out at the end of the brush, while the brush is in motion. The brush and shaft being on an incline, the water flows down to the bottom of the pot, where the brush can pick it up to scrub the inside and bottom of the pot while it is held on the brush by the operator. The outside of the pot is washed by reversing it. The pots having been soaked, a small amount of water is required and there is but little slop. The brush is made of fiber, and is cylindrical in shape to fit the pot. The inventor says in his literature that with the machine one can easily wash 2,000 pots a day; growers who have tried it have been able to wash 10,000 a day with a man at the machine and two boys to bring and carry away the pots.

Another of Mr. Finley's devices is a mulch truck, a three-wheeled deep box built for use in the narrow walks of a greenhouse.

PITTSBURG CLUB EXHIBITION.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Pittsburgh and Allegheny Gardeners' and Florists' Club Tuesday evening, October 6, we had a big attendance of members and a magnificent display of cut flowers. Four new names were proposed for membership. Among our visitors were Prof.

H. W. Fisher, superintendent of the seventeenth ward schools of Pittsburg, an ardent lover of flowers, and Dr. W. R. Hamilton, ex-president of the Botanical Society of Western Pennsylvania.

We had extravagantly generous displays of cut flowers of late-blooming, hardy perennials from Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, of new cannas from Conard & Jones, West Grove, Pa., and of dahlias from F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.; R. Vincent, Jr., & Son, White Marsh, Md., and from W. P. Peacock, Atco, N. J. Among home growers, Gus and Julius Ludwig showed dahlias, John Bader lily of the valley, and Schenley park a miscellaneous assortment of flowers. In fact, so vast was the aggregation of beautiful blossoms that the club determined the proper thing to do on such an occasion would be to get a hall and make a public exhibition, free to everybody, and this is probably what will be done next year.

In the afternoon the flowers had been arranged on long tables around the hall and each exhibit kept by itself. In the evening a long table was set in the center of the room and on it were placed all of the flowers from one exhibitor. Then the flowers were separately examined and thoroughly discussed. When finished, this exhibit was cleared away to one of the side tables and the next exhibitor's flowers set on the center table, and so on until all were seen and considered. Then, after the meeting, each newspaper reporter got a big bunch of fine flowers to carry home to his family; so did each of our visitors, and the remainder were apportioned among the members. And going home along the street and in the cars didn't we make a sensation with our arms full of dahlias and cannas! On the car I had to open my bunch and give a bloom to every man and woman in the car and to the conductor too, and before long we were all acquainted and all talking flowers.

Henry A. Dreer's exhibit came first upon the table and it was an eye-opener to most of us. It contained such subjects as bloom naturally in the late summer and fall months and comprised three colors of Japan anemones, the red, the rosy Queen Charlotte and the white Whirlwind, also rosy purple long wands of the blazing star (Liatris pycnostachya). By the way, some of our florists, at the time of the Milwaukee convention, saw a florist's window in Chicago with a full decoration of one of the liatris and described it at our September meeting as being one of the most striking things in the flower line they had seen on the trip. The ageratum-like Conoclinium coelestinum, one of the tall, blue-flowered veronicas, V. maritima; the narrow-leaved Texas ironweed (Vernonia Lindheimeri), several kinds of rudbeckia, and a fine form of the elegant little cone-flower, Lepachys columnaris, were also shown.

This year Dreer's people made a special seed novelty of Stokesia cyanea, a beautiful thistle-like composite with very large, bluish-purple flowers. Although I have grown this plant for thirty years, I never before saw it in such fine form as it was shown at our meeting. Everybody was in love with the long, branching, wand-like, snow white spikes of Actaea Japonica. Even Mr. Randolph whetted his lips when he thought of the effect of this flower in some decorations. And there were sprays of sea holly, Chinese-blue larkspur, the tall blue lobelia, a bunch of the elegant Pennisetum Ruppelianum, the late blooming exotic Aster Tartaricus, and an exceedingly floriferous form of our Aster cordifolius. Tricyrtis nigra, a Japan perennial with partridge-colored flowers, was extra fine; it is one of our latest blooming plants. And there was a profusion of blue spiraea, Caryopteris Mastacanthus, showing how useful is this plant for September and October work. Although not quite hardy, under a heavy mulching it survives fairly well, and if a few plants are lifted and brought into a cold frame now and kept over winter, they may be brought into heat a little later, when they will start into free growth and then they may be propagated from cuttings almost as readily as coleus. They bloom the first year from seed.

Another of Dreer's flowers was the showy, rose-purple Echinacea purpurea. Henry H. Negley told us that he chewed some ripe seed of this plant once and his tongue became partially paralyzed. He then called the attention of his neighbor, Dr. Shafer, to the fact and the doctor tried it, with the same result. A big bunch of fiery pokers or torch lilies, tritoma, or kniphofia, as they are now called, set the boys agog. They were mostly Pfitzeri and corollina. Some urged that they would be of no use in smoky Pittsburg; the soot in the atmosphere would blacken them to unsightliness; whereupon the president took another bunch that had come from Schenley park, which is in one of the sootiest parts of the city, and at a little distance the members couldn't tell the difference in brightness between the torch lilies of Pittsburg and those of Philadelphia. One of the prettiest Schenley flowers was the perennial scabios, Scabiosa caucasica. It is easily raised from seed and keeps in bloom until hard frost stops it.

On account of wet and stormy weather and the lateness of the season the cannas throughout the country were in poor condition. We didn't expect to have any, but we were most agreeably surprised. Antoine Wintzer, of Conard & Jones, West Grove, Pa., stopped over here on his way to the S. A. F. convention and told us of his success in breeding these indispensable flowers and promised to show them to us at our October meeting, and he did so magnificently—a great bunch of each variety. Mont Blanc is a white-flowered canna and no doubt the whitest known canna. It is very striking. And Buttercup is the purest and brightest yellow canna and of excellent substance. It is also a fine winter bloomer in the greenhouse. We saw it in glorious form in Pierson's greenhouses, at Tarrytown, last winter. Niagara has full, bold spikes of rich crimson flowers, broadly edged with gold. This is an exceptionally fine canna. Brandywine has intense crimson-red flowers. Cherokee was still darker and more vividly glowing. Duke of York has very large, deep crimson petals edged with yellow, throat tinged white. Betsy Ross is a light salmon-pink and so distinct and striking that the learned Prof. Fisher had to get right up in meeting and tell us all about the original Betsy Ross, who she was, the flag she made and where she lived. Among the others were Hiawatha, big rosy pink, and fine bronze foliage; Evolution distinct, yellow, shading pink; West Grove, very large coral pink, and Gladiator, extra large yellow blossoms spotted with crimson.

Schenley park contributed a large showing of its standard varieties, such as Henderson, Bouvier, Yellow Crozy, Kate Gray, Florence Vaughan, J. D. Eisele, Defender, yellow and red, one of John Jones' greatest favorites, and several others.

About a hundred varieties of dahlia were represented in the several collections and these included cactus-flowered, large-flowered show sorts, fancy, pompons, single and crested, and all were surprisingly beautiful. Mr. Pierson's lot was strong in vivid and variegated cactus flowers, the Peacock lot in large show flowers and the strangely crested beauty, President Viger. The Vincent group was the largest and Mr. Vincent came himself all the way from Maryland to tell us how to grow dahlias, held the floor for half an hour and has promised to come back again. Gus and Julius Ludwig had several vases of fine, showy blossoms, especially of their type of A. D. Livoni, which they call Ludwigiana.

Mr. Vincent mentioned the following sorts as being extra good: Patrick Henry and Grand Duke Alexis, white; Mrs. E. V. Hallock and Arabella, yellow; Mrs. Bennett, scarlet; Earl of Pembroke and Eureka, pink; Fern-leaved Beauty, Frank Smith, Maid of Kent, Apple Blossom and Mrs. Langtry as fancy sorts. Among pompons he named Fairy Queen and A. D. Livoni, pink; Elphin, white; Sunshine, scarlet, and Miss Louis Kramer, fancy. Comtess of Lonsdale, salmon pink; John Welsh, crimson, and Austin Cannell, purple, he said, were fine cactus varieties.

WM. FALCONER.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

When I wrote a week ago of October weather and sunshine we were at the close of the ten most charming days of the year. But since last Wednesday we have had the longest and worst storm ever known around New York, as you have seen in the daily papers. The injury to the florists is great and the destruction in the parks is widespread. On Monday night it is still raining. The rivers are all above their banks and the dread of further catastrophe remains.

Many of the growers from Jersey and up the Hudson were in the city on Saturday hours before their shipments arrived. Nyack goods were still on the road at 6 p. m. and Dorrenceton roses were not in at four in the afternoon. These are only samples of the general disappointment, and yet enough stock had arrived to flood the wholesalers and a general air of depression prevailed. Prices were at low ebb and the demand unnoticeable, while on every hand the chrysanthemum was abundant. What will it be when the autumn queen really begins to assert itself? Prices have no stability. Everything shared last week in the general slump, with the possible exception of the highest grade of American Beauties. Dahlias are now relegated to the rear and asters are but a memory. Violets stay at 50 cents for the best in the market and are abundant. Thousands of the second and third rate stock are on the street.

Club Meeting.

The last meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held June 8, so that the first meeting of the new season, October 12, was very much like a reunion. About forty members attended and a more interesting meeting has seldom been held. The next meeting occurs November 9, the day before the opening of the great chrysanthemum exhibition here, and, as tickets to the flower show will be distributed to every member present, timely notice is hereby given, so that none will be disappointed. In addition the entertainment committee announces special features for that evening that should insure an attendance of at least 150 of its membership of 230. The new rooms are perfect and the club has never been so efficiently housed or conveniently located.

The outing committee reported a total expenditure of $888 in providing the splendid success of the summer holiday, a considerable excess of receipts over expenses. General satisfaction was expressed and a commendatory speech by Mr. Sheridan was followed by his own report of the transportation committee, which Mr. Wallace took occasion to also commend. In Mr. Weathered's final report of the flower show of last year it was announced that almost the entire guarantee fund had been collected. Four nominations for membership were made, and President Troy then called upon Alex. Wallace for his impressions of the S. A. F. convention. Mr. Wallace paid a fitting tribute to its benefits and accomplishments, the important committees that were appointed, the large attendance, and the immensity of its trade exhibits, which he characterized as the finest that had ever been seen at any convention in his experience. He dwelt eloquently upon the delights of the boat trip and the generosity of the Milwaukee and the Chicago florists, closing with the assurance that it will "go down in history as the finest convention the S. A. F. has ever enjoyed."

Mr. O'Mara followed in a practical review of the convention from the moment he placed his destiny in the hands of the efficient transportation committee until the draughts and breezes of the Cream city placed him hors du combat and forced him to return home minus the closing ceremonies and festivities. He dwelt humorously on the up-to-date character of Milwaukee and its ability to take "time" by the forelock, as demonstrated in the theft of so many watches from the society's members. His disappointments included the club's bowling record, but he found occasion for comfort in the fact that the three highest scores compared favorably with those of any team in the tournament, and the grand record of 3,041 made by the New York team some years ago, which still stands unbeaten and five pins ahead of all competitors since the society was born. He was delighted with the Milwaukee parks, especially the aquatics and hardy perennials. He gave an interesting criticism of the president's address at Milwaukee, referring to labor unions, the peony committee, and the coal strike. He also dwelt upon the benefits which had developed as a result of the Asheville convention and upon the wonderful success that had been accomplished by the Milwaukee florists.

Mr. Du Rie told of the enjoyment which the convention afforded him, of the beauty of Milwaukee, the pleasure of his visit to Joliet, and his surprise at the changes that had been wrought in Chicago since his last visit before the fire.

Fred Kelsey gave a very interesting address on the inside history of the great coal strike, with which he is thoroughly conversant. The club moved a vote of thanks in recognition of the unexcelled courtesies of the Milwaukee and Chicago florists, which was unanimously applauded.

Messrs. Lenker, Scott and Duckham were appointed a committee to pass upon an exhibit of seedling dahlias by H. Beaulieu, of Woodhaven, and accorded that gentleman a vote of thanks.

Arthur Herrington gave an interesting address concerning the chrysanthemum show to be given jointly by the American Institute of New York and the Chrysanthemum Society of America, November 10, 11 and 12, in the great hall at the top of the immense Macy building. He spoke enthusiastically of the prospects of this, the only flower show in New York this year, and said its success was already assured, as the co-operation of ten regularly organized horticultural societies had been promised, including those of Massachusetts and Pennsylvania and every society of importance near New York city. The premium lists are large, tickets exceeding 25,000 are already printed and in his own words: "It will be an exhibition of chrysanthemums such as the world has never seen before."

Mr. O'Mara spoke favorably of the flower show, the interest which the club would assuredly take, and the desire that it would be continued under such auspices for many years to come.

H. Beernaert, of the Grands Etablissements d'Horticulture, of Belgium, was a visitor, chaperoned by Fred Atkins, and spent at the club his first night in America. Several of the members who had visited Europe during the summer were present, but the modesty of the president, who was one of them, and the lateness of the hour, postponed the foreign impressions until later in the season.

Various Notes.

Sidney Nash, son of J. Nash, of the firm of Moore, Hentz & Nash, and book-keeper for this company, has decided to anticipate a cold winter and has gone into the woolen goods business with his brother-in-law. His brother, Arthur, just home from England, will take his place. Gommersall, of Nyack, is shipping fine begonias to this house.

Leach Bros., of Jersey City, have a good assortment of early 'mums in 6-inch pots at John Young's, including Crema, Polly Rose and Glory of Pacific.

Ernst Asmus is still quite ill, after a rally that led his friends to hope for a speedy and complete convalescence.

R. W. Perkins, son of J. J. Perkins, has had a relapse and is suffering from pleuro pneumonia. His condition is serious.

Edwin Weathered has retired from the firm of Thos. Weathered's Sons, the greenhouse builders, and Chas. B. Weathered will have charge of the business as formerly.

Visitors have been numerous the past week, among them W. P. Craig, of Philadelphia; A. M. Murdoch, of Pittsburg, and F. C. Weber, of St. Louis.

H. H. Berger & Co. report the best business in French and Dutch bulbs for many years. Those who are waiting for low prices, they say, will be disappointed. There is no surplus to draw from this year and the supply of Paper Whites is exhausted. The new crop of kentia seed is on the way from Australia.

Mackintosh has recovered from a hospital experience that involved an operation.

The sympathy of the trade is felt for Chas. Thorley, the Broadway florist, in the loss of his daughter.

Arthur Merritt, of J. H. Small & Sons, has returned from Hot Springs, Va., and Washington, where some notable weddings claimed his attention, especially the Fuller nuptials. A beautiful autumn effect was produced by the decoration of the entire church in oak foliage. Eight bells were hung over the chancel with white satin drapery, Clematis Virginiana as a background adding greatly to the picture. The decorations for the dinner to the Ancient and Honourables of London, at the Waldorf-Astoria on Friday evening was an elaborate affair. The walls were covered with flags intertwined with oak garlands, the tables decorated with oak leaves, American Beauty roses, chrysanthemums and other seasonable flowers. October weddings seem to be numerous and fairly well distributed. Thomas Young, Jr., has three of them this week, and hardly a prominent retailer has been overlooked.

Arthur T. Boddington is rejoicing in his initiation into the mysterious responsibilities of fatherhood. As is the usual custom, the stork's first visit brought a handsome girl baby.

John C. Daly, of Daly Bros., Granton, N. J., and Miss M. McCarty, of New York, were married September 29. It has been a great year for marriages among the florists and "there are others" to follow.

It is rumored that another firm of auctioneers is soon to enter the field now covered so eloquently by Mr. Elliott.

Alex. McConnell, of Fifth avenue, is doing his share in October weddings. On Wednesday he has the church and house decoration for the Iselin-De Neubille event. The Church of the Incarnation will be turned into a bower of 'mums, wild smilax and Kaiserin roses. Everything will be in white and the same scheme will be followed at the house. Asparagus plumosus will be used largely in the drapings. The next event will be the marriage of the Rev. Dr. Williams and the daughter of Congressman Little. Bouquets and baskets of jasmine, violets and cattleyas will be provided, and the bride's bouquet will be lily of the valley. Then comes the Olney wedding, with house and church decoration, and on October 19 the Allen nuptials. Siebrecht & Son, Hodgson, Stumpp, Hauft, and, in fact, every florist of standing in the city has his share of these October festivities.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The heavy storms of last week had a serious effect on business, cutting down the quantity of flowers, injuring their quality and cutting off shipments altogether from Burlington, N. J., and some other places. Brides and Maids suffered severely, many poor flowers coming in. Carnations are more plentiful. Lower prices rule, especially on colored varieties. Chrysanthemums are increasing in numbers. Many fine flowers are seen, chiefly white and pink, both colors very useful in filling the heavy demand for wedding orders this week. Orchids and valley are both of extra fine quality. Sweet peas have made their appearance, E. Bernheimer receiving shipments of both pink and white. Violets need bright sunshine and cool weather to add finish. Tritomas are in fair demand. Greens sell better, though still too plentiful. Great quantities of wild smilax have been used.

London.

Samuel S. Pennock devoted one morning to studying the great Covent Garden market during his recent trip abroad. The quantity of cut flowers offered in this great London mart was astonishing. There was good variety. Both quality and price were below what we are accustomed to. Most of the outdoor roses were excellent, though it was September. He bought at retail one dozen fine Laings for a shilling and one dozen Jacques for sixpence, an average of about one cent and a half apiece. The plants offered in this market were very fine and at low prices. Everyone appeared to buy here without regard to their being florists. A number of wholesale cut flower houses were clustered about this market. These opened at 4 a. m., as early as the market itself. One dealer said that his three sons each had charge of a department, one vegetables, one fruit, and one flowers, and that his business aggregated between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000. There seemed no reason to doubt the accuracy of this statement. The London cut flower stores exhibited no especial features and were hardly equal to our own. In Paris, on the contrary, the shops were very beautiful and full of interest.

Flower Market.

The second annual meeting of the market will be held next Monday, October 19, at 10 a. m., at 1228 Cherry street. Besides the report of the business of the last eleven months, four directors are to be elected, three to serve for three years and one for one year. There are also two proposed changes in the by-laws on which the stockholders are to take action. Half an hour before the meeting Vice President Harris will auction off the stalls.

Notes.

Albert Woltemate delivered an address on "Bulbs and Their Planting" before the Germantown Horticultural Society last Monday evening.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had the fall opening decoration at Strawbridge & Clothier's on Tuesday.

Edward Reid's paper on "The West" read before the Florists' Club last week, will be found in another column.

Samuel S. Pennock is receiving quantities of fine cattleyas, oncidiums and cypripediums, very useful for the October weddings.

Wm. J. Baker is receiving some fine

Glory of Pacific chrysanthemums, both white and pink. They are in brisk demand.

Fred J. Michell has just returned from Washington.

Joseph Beavis & Son are sending in some fine Liberties to Leo Niessen.

Eugene Bernheimer is receiving fancy chrysanthemums, among them William Simpson, rose pink, and a light pink seedling.

The Flower Market is doing a great business in fine Beauties. Their tritomas are in demand, also Willowbrook, a white chrysanthemum with finish.

Bowling.

The REVIEW is indebted to Walter N. Yates for the following interesting account of the doings of our bowlers:

Recently the boys went to Atlantic City to try their hand with the seashore craft at the "only game," but the salt air had a peculiar effect, and after an exciting contest, they lost by eighty pins. A return match was immediately arranged and revenge guaranteed, if they would dare to "enter our back yard." On October 7, our boys emphatically kept their word, when our five-man team buried the salt air combination to the tune of 657 pins in three games. Surely this was vengeance with interest. When the visitors finally came back to terra firma, another trip to the shore was at once arranged, and all parties interested guaranteed the match to be anything but a tame affair. Messrs. Moss, Yates, Gibson, Mooney and Addleburger did the "slaughtering."

The second contest between the Growers and Dealers proved even more exciting than the first. The first game resulted in favor of the former, with a margin of thirty-eight. At the end of the second game the Growers were again on top, with twenty-three more. With a "Milwaukee finish," the Dealers woke up in the third game and won the match with fifty-five pins to spare. Yates made high total of 573, while Moss, with 223, captured high single game. The third and deciding match will be played next week. The following are the scores:

Growers—	1st.	2d.	3d.	Total.

PHIL.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business for the past week was not very encouraging to the cut flower dealers, trade being weak and the supply very much in excess of the demand. The bright, sunny weather has brought about an actual glut in roses and carnations. Chrysanthemums, too, are becoming more plentiful, but not enough good ones as yet to go around. Stock of all kinds was so plentiful that the trade became critical and would buy nothing but the best of stock, refusing all that did not come up to their requirements. In the meantime the price of good stock went down to what short stemmed stock brought the week previous.

In Brides and Maids the supply was greater than in any of the other roses, but still there were plenty of Meteors, Carnots and Perles. The very choicest of stock did not bring over $5 per 100, while good roses sold as low as $2 in 100 lots and $10 in 1,000 lots. The short-stemmed stock had no sale at all. In Beauties fancy grades are not overplentiful, but of medium and short stock there is more than enough. Carnations have also declined in price and really good stock sold at $1.50 per 100, while plenty of good flowers with short stems sold at $8 per 1,000. Marquis, Enchantress, Wolcott, Nelson, Lawson and Crane are among the best that come in. Violets are still very much off color and small, with the market well supplied and sales slow. Owing to the quality of the stock, 25 cents per 100 is all they bring at present. Cosmos is also loading down the wholesale houses, thousands of good quality coming in and selling at 35 cents per 100. 'Mums of first quality seem slow in coming in. A few good white and yellow were seen at $1.50 per dozen. Small stuff does not bring over 60 cents per dozen. A good, killing frost is what is needed in this section to kill off the supply of outdoor stock which is being dumped in this market in big quantities. The end of the week found the market short on fancy ferns, but other greens, such as smilax, asparagus and galax are in good supply at the usual prices.

Various Notes.

Mrs. M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., was a guest of the Misses Meinhardt the past week. She took a hand at bowling on ladies' afternoon and did some excellent work.

Wm. Edlefsen, of Milwaukee, accompanied by his niece, Mrs. H. V. Hunkel, also of Milwaukee, spent a pleasant week with us. Mr. Edlefsen was much pleased with his trip and spoke highly of the progress of the World's Fair, which he said was immense.

George E. Legler, representing S. P. Forest & Co., Chicago, was in town selling pressed flowers from Palestine.

F. M. Ellis returned from his week's trip much pleased with what he saw and with the prospects for the coming season.

James W. Dunford and his father visited Belleville the past week, calling on friends in the trade.

F. Carr, better known as "Pap" Carr, who sold plants for years at the Union Market for Wm. Schray & Sons, died last week. The funeral was held Saturday and many of the trade attended.

The St. Louis Agricultural and Mechanical Association held a very successful fair the past week. On big Thursday the crowd was estimated at 50,000 and the attendance in Floral Hall was large during the day, the visitors seeming to enjoy the display made by the local florists. Wm. Schray & Sons were the largest exhibitors and were awarded $248 in prizes for plants and cut flowers. Richard Frow came in for $30 worth and F. Carr for $3. These men were the only exhibitors this year, and Mr. Schray seemed to have everything his own way as to winning prizes.

The Florists' Bowling Club rolled a three-man match on Monday night. Carl Beyer was in extra good form, making an average of 226. Kuehn was second with an average of 192, and Beneke third with 183.

The scores were as follows:

Roses—	1st.	2d.	3d.	Total.
J. J. Beneke.....	170	175	205	550
F. J. Meinhardt.....	147	163	123	433

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There is a great deal of complaint at the results of last week. The aggregate of the seven days' business was considerably below last year's record and the averages returned to the growers were very unsatisfactory. Along in the middle of the week there was a very large waste on low grade stuff and this, of course, pulled down the price on the better material and made the figuring of average prices of roses and much other stock require a considerable skill in the use of fractions. However, things started off better this week, although there is still little value in the low grade material. City trade seems very quiet, except for a few large orders for store openings, weddings, etc., but shipping demand is brisk.

Beauties are the best seller on the list, but white roses go fairly well and the store decorations have cleaned up a good many small chrysanthemums. In general qualities are showing a steady improvement. This is particularly noticeable in violets and chrysanthemums. Carnations have been good right along, but roses do not seem to gain strength as rapidly as might be expected with the very fine weather. We have as yet had no frost and there are good dahlias, plenty of cosmos, some gladioli, a few asters and other outdoor flowers in the market.

Various Notes.

The committee announces that the first monthly exhibition of the Chicago Florists' Club will be held October 24, devoted to cut chrysanthemums and carnations, prizes to be awarded for the best collection of each. Those having seedling chrysanthemums to be judged can have the same passed upon at this show, as the judges are the ones selected by the Chrysanthemum Society of America and exhibits will be entitled to registration by paying the necessary fee. Blooms intended for exhibition should be sent to E. F. Winterson, 45-49 Wabash avenue, Chicago, charges prepaid, not later than 1 o'clock, October 24. The club will see to the staging of all exhibits.

The E. R. Gray mushroom plant near Hinsdale was totally destroyed by fire one night last week and the report is that it will not be rebuilt.

Sharp, Partridge & Co., say that it looks favorable for fairly cheap glass for next season. Prices are now off about 10 per cent as compared with quotations on greenhouse sizes a year ago, this with stocks well cleaned out, and with the big factories only just starting for the season, certainly the indications would not point to any advance. On small lots of 16x24 double strength A the present quotation is $4.05 a box, but it is doubtful if any considerable quantity of this size could be obtained should need for it arise today.

John Sterrett has the deepest sympathy of every one in the market in the loss of his son, Leonard, who was also well known to the trade. The lad's body was found beside the tracks of the Northwestern railroad on Friday morning, he having evidently fallen from a moving train.

Emil Buettner has recently completed two new houses, one 30x125, the other 30x130, and has them planted to carnations in fine shape.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Friedman are the happy parents of a baby boy.

E. S. Thompson was over from South Haven on Tuesday with exhibits of fifty-seven varieties of dahlias which he put up at Randall's and Budlong's. He has over 100 sorts in his collection, including some very fine things not often seen in this market. Mr. Thompson goes to St. Louis this week to arrange for an exhibit at the World's Fair next year.

O. J. Friedman had the large order for the decoration of the new Schlesinger & Mayer store for the opening this week.

N. J. Wieter's ten-months-old boy is quite seriously ill.

George Scott is now with the E. F. Winterson Company. John Degnan, of that firm, is on the road and sending in nice orders from every town.

A. L. Randall is at home after spending the summer on his farm in Michigan.

P. M. Broadbeck, at Evanston, has a banana plant in one of his rose houses now ripening a bunch of about 200 fruits. The variety is Musa Caven-dishii.

James Hartshorne was in town this week and says that carnation Fiancee is beginning to bloom in fine shape.

Mrs. F. R. Hills is getting along nicely, but will not be about for some time.

BUFFALO.

Current Comment.

We have had up to October 10 a very mild spell, nothing hurt by frost, rather too warm for the rose grower or for business. I can't help saying that a clear, cool night and a few degrees of frost, with a glorious, bright sun today, is most welcome and invigorating. The maple and oak are fast ripening into the glorious tints of yellow, bronze and crimson, and the queen of autumn is here to charm our eyes, if not to fill our pockets. In the dwelling house I noticed the flies bit much more viciously today, knowing their time is short. In the neighboring wood I noticed a grey squirrel working hard storing hickory nuts in a hollow tree. Evidently he did not belong to any union, for he was at work before 8 a. m. and was also doing his best. Ala Baba, the philosopher of East Aurora, N. Y., says: "If a man never does any more than he is paid for, he will never get paid for any more than he does." I pity the man or woman who sees only brick walls and lamp posts such days as this. They miss the elixir of life and real existence. Don't think I was in the country merely for my health and happiness. Oh, no, I was digging potatoes, and while one eye was on the Rural New Yorkers (small yield, but nice sample; some rot in low places) I kept one eye and one ear to nature's sights and sounds, and the last I heard was a meadow lark tell his mate that he was off for Louisiana in the afternoon and if she thought as much of him as she pretended to last May, she had better get ready. We hope she did.

Business has had a decided awakening, nothing very large, but numerous weddings daily, all wanting something. I believe flowers for sadder occasions have also been in very brisk demand, as several well known and popular citizens have passed away. I often think I am guilty of omitting to mention the displays and designs made by our enterprising Main street retailers, but it is never omitted by design. Many conventions of different societies and orders have been held here during the summer, and every time four or five of the leading shops have made handsome and original designs, emblematic of the order. They are past now, but I will be good in future. The last time I passed down Main street I noticed a very handsome show at S. A. Anderson's. It was a lot of extra fine Primula obconica finely trimmed up with a background of 200 or 300 splendid American Beauty roses. I don't know whether this was harmony or contrast. No matter which, it was rich and "taking."

There was a meeting of the club last Wednesday, from which your correspondent had a very substantial reason to be absent, much to his regret. The H. A. Meldrum chrysanthemum show was an important topic and I believe all arrangements are complete. A thousand dollars will be awarded in comparatively very few classes which makes prizes well worth any one's competing for. Schedule of prizes can be obtained of Chas. H. Keitsch, Main street, Buffalo, N. Y. It would be very pleasant to have a large proportion of this sum stay at home, but I hope for the sake of the truly enterprising firm which put up the money that some of the best growers in the country will exhibit.

The bowling section of the club has entered a team in a five-team league, to be bowled this winter by the crack teams of the city, which should get them in trim to discipline John Westcott and his rubber-souled gang. Captain Braik was appointed a committee of one to obtain formula and brew a sufficient quantity of the famous "Westcott bowling punch" for use at St. Louis. Several of the competing clubs think that the Phillie's many victories are largely attributable to that peculiar stimulant.

To take part as pall-bearer at the funeral of Wilson S. Rissell, his postmaster-general during his last term, ex-President Grover Cleveland visited his old home for the first time in twelve years. He was but twelve hours in the city. Many of the social functions would have been tendered him, but very properly he declined all and would say nothing to newspaper men but kind and sympathetic words for his departed friend, Mr. Rissell. On his return home Friday night, via the Erie railroad, G. C. and John G. Carlisle got stalled in the flood at Elmira. I believe he then did whisper to J. G. C. that in very wet weather butted glass was better than lapped, but any glass would do him in their state of staidom.

You will all be pleased to hear that our widely known Wm. F. Kasting has received the nomination of county treasurer on the Democratic ticket. As Erie county includes the city of Buffalo, this is a very important office and one that any citizen may be proud to fill. Mr. Kasting stands high in his party and he received the honor simply because his reputation is clean, energetic and honest, and if elected there is no doubt of his ability and integrity, and I beg to prophesy with much confidence that he will be elected.

PACIFIC COAST.

ROSE NOTES.

About everyone who contemplated changing his rose houses has finished re-planting by this time. The majority of the growers in the vicinity of San Francisco have used the same varieties this season for forcing that they did last year, that is, Kaiserin and Bride for white, Mme. C. Testout and Bridesmaid for pink, Liberty and American Beauty for red and Souvenir du Pres. Carnot for cream. There has been considerable inquiry for stock of the Ivory but there are not as yet any rose growers who have had very much experience with it and no one has had anything to force except small plants on their own roots.

Liberty has superseded Meteor almost entirely, but a few growers still plant Mrs. Laing and Ulrich Brunner. Bridesmaid is still in as great demand as ever and perfect blooms bring top prices. Belle Siebrecht and Duchess of Albany are seen occasionally, but they are not considered good forcers. Perle des Jardins, by far the finest of our yellow roses, either inside or in the garden, is not in much favor with the growers. Most of the florists seem to be able to supply the wants of their patrons without handling any yellow roses, and most of the growers have discarded planting them. Sunset is not in evidence at all, although it is really a splendid variety when properly handled. Niphetos has not been planted for the last six or seven years. It makes a beautiful bud, but a weak and wobbly stem and has been entirely superseded by Bride and Kaiserin. Some growers tried Queen of Edgely last season, but the flower seems to be hardly up to color and inclined to come short stemmed. Cecil Brunner finds considerable favor with some growers and the flowers are always in demand.

There has always been more or less controversy among the growers as to the planting of stock, whether it should be low-budded or grown on its own roots. The majority of the growers are finding out from experience that they have better success from strong, field-grown, budded stock.

THE PACIFIC NURSERY.

A most interesting place is the Pacific Nursery, San Francisco, of which F. Ludemann is proprietor. All sorts of ornamentals are grown and the seedlings of different sorts coming on run into the hundreds of thousands.

The major part of these are from out of door seed beds and the flats in which the seedlings are pricked out are also out of doors, simply placed close together on the ground. Such standard things as the blue gum and Monterey cypress are handled in immense quantities and they are sold by the flat. The choice ornamentals are potted and are grown in these pots plunged in the soil to facilitate planting out at any time of the year.

Camelias, of which Mr. Ludemann carries a large stock in all sizes, and other similar stock are in lath houses that afford some shade from the sun. A new lath house, erected this season, is about eighty feet square, and there are a half dozen others.

In the greenhouses an immense variety of palm seeds are being germinated and there is a full line of the more tender palms and decorative plants. The seedling araucarias are especially numerous, and a bench of young Araucaria excelsa in 2½-inch pots, all perfect in form and of a uniform height of about six inches, is a sight to remember.

To even mention all of the interesting things to be seen here would fill a page of the REVIEW. The trade visitor to San Francisco should not fail to see the Pacific Nursery and its genial and well posted proprietor, Mr. Ludemann.

GARDENING UNDER GLASS

ELGIN, ILL.—Simon Dumser, who formerly grew vegetables under glass, says that the competition of outdoor stuff from the south has taken most of the profit out of the business. He now grows miscellaneous pot plants and enough vegetables for local demand.

RADISHES.

The radish is one of the easiest subjects to force, and one that gives the quickest returns of any crop that can be grown. Though they can be grown in any ordinary soil and are very accommodating for filling in where a space occurs, we find that it pays to make a little special preparation for them when they are depended on for a crop. We grow them in raised benches about six inches deep. In the bottom of the bench we place about three inches of well rotted manure, and cover this over to a depth of about three inches with clean sand in place of soil. We find that they come out of the sand much cleaner and nicer than they do out of any soil. We sow in rows about four inches apart, scattering the seeds thinly and evenly, so as to avoid having to do any thinning.

In sowing thus thinly it is well to make sure that the seed is good or to know just what percentage of it is going to come up. A simple method of testing the seeds is to count out fifty or 100 of them and place them between folds of thick brown paper in a shallow vessel, such as a flower pot saucer, and keep the paper moist but not too wet; keep in a temperature of about 50 degrees, and in about twenty-four hours it can be seen just how many of the seeds have germinated.

Of the many varieties we have tried the one we like best is Non Plus Ultra. This has a very dwarf top, is a round, evenly sized, uniformly well shaped radish of good quality and flavor; color red. Where a long shaped radish is wanted the old French Breakfast is about the best, but it takes rather longer to mature than the first named. Non Plus Ultra will mature in about three weeks from time of sowing.

Regarding temperature, we have had the best success by running the house at 50 degrees by night, allowing a reasonable rise by sunheat. If the temperature is kept much higher than this it induces a rank top growth, and detracts from the quality of the radish, though making very little change in the time of maturing. A large supply of water is unnecessary, as the materials used are rather retentive, but water should of course be given when the sand shows signs of dryness.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—At the recent meeting here at which the Illinois Association of Cemeteries was organized, the following officers were elected: President, W. N. Rudd, Mt. Greenwood; vice-president, Dr. Henry Wohlgemuth, Moline; secretary and treasurer, J. A. Groves, Bloomington.

ONE of Luther Burbank's latest productions in the way of fruits is a stoneless plum, which has been named Miracle. It has a kernel, but the stone is reduced to the merest chips of a shell, and in no way prevents a fruit from being cut right through the center. It is said to be a heavy cropper and good grower. The skin is purple, and the flesh firm.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 23d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

DURING the week 43,000 Dutch bulbs have been received for planting at the St. Louis exposition.

CURRIE BROS., Milwaukee, have been appointed by Gov. Hoard to prepare Wisconsin's exhibit of seeds, etc., for the St. Louis World's Fair.

A PETITION in bankruptcy has been filed against the Cape Vincent Seed Co., wholesale dealers in peas and beans with office at 260 West Broadway, New York City.

THE Gallia, from Marseilles, due at New York September 21, reached port October 6, having been delayed by a broken shaft. The Gallia carried a total of 2,167 cases of French bulbs, including the principal shipment for many of the leading seed houses, delivery being thus delayed fifteen days.

THE onion seed crop report of the J. B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., shows acreage of 12,663 as against 11,350 for 1902. The output is considerably less than for 1902 in the states of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Massachusetts, Connecticut and in New York, Indiana and Illinois. Quality averages seventy-three per cent of perfect. The varieties average about forty per cent red, fifty-seven per cent yellow and three per cent white.

TIME TO "GET TOGETHER."

ED. FLORISTS' REVIEW:—I desire to offer a few suggestions and make a little explanation as to the real situation of the melon and seed grower of the south. I believe that through the columns of the REVIEW it would reach the class that is looking for such information, and I respectfully ask for the publication of these few lines in your valuable journal for florists and seedsmen.

I am aware that the conduct and careless methods of growing practiced by some growers have caused some of the large eastern and northern dealers to go west for their supplies; usually the careful grower has to bear the burden equally with the careless one.

There is no question as to the superiority of the southern grown melon seed, and if the careful grower would supply only seed of his own growth and plant sufficient area to produce, under usual circumstances, the amount desired, have contracts subject to inspection and insist that the crop be inspected, he would in time control the trade of most of the reputable dealers.

I know there are some unscrupulous dealers, and there are also unscrupulous growers, but the careless method practiced by the latter class should not be shifted to the responsibility of the honest, careful grower. Some of the large wholesalers are continually grinding down the growers' prices and are willing to pay only about the cost of producing good seeds. Then the grower must either reject the order or send out inferior

TROUBLE WITH BOSTONS.

In one of my houses of Boston ferns I notice a lot of mealy bugs are doing damage. I found the bugs in the tips of the leaves, and it seems as if they had followed the leaf as it unrolls. How shall I wage war on the pest? I also find some stunted leaves in the same house. It seems as though the plants got a sudden check in growth or the tips were burned. Did the mealy bug cause this? L.

One of the best remedies for mealy bugs on Boston ferns is fumigation with aphid punk. If this preparation is used carefully, so as to avoid any blazing of the paper, no injury will be done to the ferns, but it is probable that the fumigation may need to be repeated two or three evenings before the smoke reaches all the insects. The crippling of the tips of the fronds may have been caused by the mealy bugs if the plants are badly infested, but there are at least two other possible causes for such an injury. If the plants have been allowed to get dry once or twice the young growth would suffer in that way, or if too much fresh manure was used in the compost the ammonia therein might scorch the tender tips of the ferns.

W. H. TAPLIN.

OVERVEEN, HOLLAND.—The Dutch Horticultural Society has awarded a first-class certificate to M. Van Waveren & Son, Hillegom, for Gypsophila paniculata fl. pl. as a new plant, also a certificate of merit to the same for Tritoma Pfizeri, a plant which deserves to be more widely known.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Business has been almost at a standstill during the past week. Flowers of all kinds except roses are very scarce. Very few carnations have as yet started to flower. Growers around here complain of a scarcity of plants this year, a number of them having to send out of town for plants enough to fill their houses. The outlook for chrysanthemums is very promising and the florists should be able to get enough here without sending out of town for them, as they have had to do in past seasons. R. H. Woodhouse and R. E. Nofftz have them planted by the thousands, and fine looking stock, too.

A. H. Jahn is putting the finishing touches on a new greenhouse.

The stores are fixing up for the winter's business, E. H. Chamberlin having put in a new tile window. William Peirce is painting inside and outside, and is also to put in a tile window. C.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums are now beginning to arrive in large numbers and in a few days more there will be enough to fill all orders. White, yellow and pink are to be had and some of the blooms are extra fine. So far the top price has been $2 per dozen and from that down to 75 cents. The demand has been very good, but the day is past when the retailer will give a fancy price for a 'mum just because it is early. At the present time the money is to be made from the later blooming sorts.

In other lines trade is only medium. Roses are coming in very heavily and are slow sale. Even the better quality do not move readily and short-stemmed ones are very near a glut. American Beauties, Liberties and Meteors are the exception. The former seem to be off crop at present and there are not enough to fill orders. Brides, Maids and Gates are showing a great deal of improvement in quality. Carnations are nearer equal to the demand now than at any time this season. Some very good quality blooms are to be had. A great many carnations are being shipped into this city, which has helped greatly to make up the shortage. Gov. Wolcott is showing up in especially good form and it looks as if this variety has come to make its mark. They readily bring $3 per 100, which is high mark for carnations so far. This market is flooded with cosmos and it is exceptionally fine. Violets are plentiful and very good, with brisk sale.

Various Notes.

Saturday was the regular meeting of the Florists' Society and quite a number of the stand-by members were present. The main topic under discussion was the flower shows to be given by the society during the winter. It was finally decided that if a sum sufficient to carry on the shows can be raised they will be continued this season as usual. The first show, devoted to chrysanthemums, is to be held the second Saturday of November. The Cincinnati Florists' Society is now in its fourteenth year and it is the desire of the committee in charge to make this year's shows the best in its history. After the meeting adjourned a lunch was served and Ben George and D. Rusconi, who had charge of this feature, did themselves proud. The bronze medal of the S. A. F., awarded to Henry Weber, of Oakland, Md., for carnation Gov. Lowndes, has been received by the secretary and forwarded to Mr. Weber.

E. G. Gillett and J. A. Peterson spent a few days during the past week in Cleveland, attending the Masonic conclave. C. J. OHMER.

OXFORD, PA.—Derrick Race, one of the old-time florists here, died October 5, after a long illness. He was born in 1821.

TOPEKA, KAN.—Stock is in fine condition, roses and carnations selling well. James Hayes is due home from Europe in a few days.

RICHMOND, IND.—There is talk here that the E. G. Hill Co. may remove to some other city because of the failure to procure land for an addition to the range.

RANDOM NOTES.

AKRON, OHIO.—Salmon & Son have added one range of carnation houses. Stock is in fine shape. Mums will be ready to cut by October 10.

CANTON, OHIO.—Charles J. Lindacher has not yet returned from Europe, but is looked for at any time now business is opening up. Charles Brown is making haste to complete the range of 35,000 square feet of glass built this season. He has a splendid location, a short distance from town, with opportunity to quadruple the size of the plant if necessary. The fine store built recently has proved a most successful drawing card, although situated away from the center of the town.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—This city is becoming quite a distributing center for cut flowers, a number of growers having sprung up quite recently. Chief among these is the J. M. Gasser Co.'s fine plant at Rocky River, under the management of Mr. Bartels, a most able grower. Roses are a specialty. The F. R. Williams Co. also has a large place. At West Park is the new range of Isaac Kennedy, fast getting into shape for the coming season. What struck me is the absence of Beauties, for which friend Isaac was famed in the Quaker City. I understand he is figuring on special houses for this variety. The plant of the Essex greenhouses is located a few miles out of the city, where the atmosphere is clearer and soil easier of access. M. Bloy, who has had charge of this place since spring, showed me a record of figures which makes interesting reading. From March 1 last, from six houses, each 20x100 feet, 111,000 roses were cut and disposed of through one of the commission houses here. Three houses of Beauty grown for successive crops, Queen of Edgely growing in one bench with same treatment, two houses each of Meteor, Brides and Maids and ten houses of carnations is the extent of this flourishing establishment. Enchantress, Bradt, Lillian Pond, Crane, Apollo, Mrs. Potter Palmer are the chief varieties grown, including the up-to-the-present matchless Lawson, loaded with bud and bloom. The divine flower has made excellent growth in this section during the summer, which was a rather dry one. The prospect for good crops was never better. Herman A. Hart, Graham & Son and G. W. Smith have every available foot of space occupied with salable stock. At Glenville August Schmitt has cut Monrovia, his earliest yellow chrysanthemum, a fine crop that finds prompt sale in the market. His whole stock shows high cultivation. James Eadie reports a big demand in connection with the visit of the Knights Templars. Smith & Fetters have also some large orders on hand. Altogether the season promises well. The Grant-Wilson Co. makes a fine display in its large handsome show room. The weekly Monday evening meetings bring together a large number of the craft, when for an hour or two a social time takes the place of business. It interested the writer, listening to the remarks between deals, to hear Herman Hart describing to Adam Graham his experience among the Highlands of Scotland, Kennedy buzzing Bloy how he managed to keep down mildew this fall, Gordon Gray with Fred Aul discussing the appearance of disease in the supposedly perfectly healthy Harrisii. Charlie Schmitt decided to go to Bermuda on a tour of inspection for his wedding trip. The meeting broke up after arranging to pay a visit to Robert George, at Painesville, where the stock of The Storrs & Harrison Company is in prime shape and where everyone is made welcome. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums are here in abundance, both those grown out of doors and forced flowers from the greenhouses. The outdoor blooms are grown entirely by the Chinese in the neighborhood of San Mateo and Burlingame and can be bought as low as 5 cents per dozen, but the better quality brings about 20 to 25 cents per dozen, and they are almost as large as those brought from under glass. They are shorter of stem, of course, and the flowers do not have as fine a texture. In the neighborhood of San Rafael the climate seems to suit the chrysanthemum very well and the yellows, especially Bonaffon, cannot be beaten anywhere. Carnations are somewhat scarce, as most of the growers are throwing out the old stock and the young plants will not be in bloom for several weeks yet. Prices remain about the same as last week. Roses are not plentiful either, although the quality is somewhat improved. Kaisers and Testouts bring from 50 cents to 75 cents wholesale; Brides and Maids about the same price; American Beauties from $1 to $2 per dozen and fancy stock very scarce. Smilax is offered at any price and the summer crop of maidenhair is getting well sold out. Cosmos is now in its prime, and is used in large quantity for decorating. Violets are scarce and of poor quality; they bring from 75 cents to $1 per dozen bunches. Japanese lilies are almost out of business, and in a week or two will have entirely disappeared.

Notes.

H. Ratfisch, of Berkeley, has been very busy for the last two weeks, replanting his carnation houses. He had splendid success last season and will force for the coming year principally Estelle, Cressbrook and Queen Louise.

A visit to the nurseries of Ferrari Brothers shows everything in readiness for another season's hard work. This firm has an enviable record for forcing high-class roses and their reports are that they have been unable to fill half the orders offered them.

F. Ludemann, of the Pacific Nurseries, reports splendid business in Japanese lily bulbs and palm seeds. Although it is somewhat early regarding nursery orders, Mr. Ludemann has splendid prospects for a good season's business.

Sievers & Boland report business far ahead of last year at this time. They are showing some very artistic window decorations that might be copied by some of the other retailers with considerable benefit to themselves. G.

FLUSHING, L. I.—Joseph Zimmer, an employe of H. D. Darlington, died September 28, of lockjaw, as the result of running a splinter of wood into his hand several days before.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Mrs. Stauff, who has been supplying the trade with galax, etc., is now handling carnations, etc., at wholesale, her place being at 814 Rhode Island Ave., N. W.

EAST BRIDGEWATER, MASS.—Walter P. Lothrop has six acres of dahlias, including 393 named varieties. The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, under the leadership of Patrick Norton, recently inspected the fine show.

WASHINGTON.

Business for the last month has been soaring upward and prices for stock of all kinds likewise. Maids and Brides are bringing from 6 to 8 cents, Beauties 12½ to 25 cents. Carnations are scarce and among the local growers they are a partial failure; they are bringing 2 to 3 cents. Outdoor stock of all kinds has been a glut on the market, but on account of the wind and rain a great portion has been destroyed.

Constant Ponnett is about to open a handsome up-town store.

Both brothers of A. Gude & Bro., N. Studer, Henry Pfister, late of the White House, and your scribe attended the sale of R. Craig & Son, at Philadelphia, and came home loaded with bargains.

Notices have been sent to the bowlers to get together for November 15, to meet the Baltimore and Philadelphia teams, to bowl for the Kramer cup.

F. H. KRAMER.

CLEVELAND.

The pleasant weather for the past week has brought lots of good roses and carnations into market, and whole loads of dahlias. We haven't had our usual early frosts, and every one has lots of flowers still blooming outdoors, which holds back the demand, which is bound to come after the first frosts. Prices are still unchanged, and the demand was for good stock the past week on account of the Knights Templar conclave, most of the downtown stores having decorations for the commandery headquarters. Chrysanthemums are more plentiful, and are quoted at $10 to $15 per 100.

Some late asters and early mignonette were seen at the F. R. Williams Co.'s store Saturday.

J. Kirschner was in Chicago on business last week.

SEACLIFF, L. I.—W. H. Waite, formerly gardener to Samuel Untermeyer, is starting in the commercial end of cut flower growing under most favorable auspices.

TONAWANDA, N. Y.—While repairing a broken pane of glass in his greenhouse recently, Julius Schultz cut into an artery in his wrist and was in a precarious condition before assistance arrived.

PAWTUCKET, R. I.—The show of autumn flowers, October 3 and 4, by the Fairlawn Improvement Society was very successful. The judges were E. F. Woods, of Central Falls; H. C. Soule, of Pawtucket, and W. L. King, of Attleboro.

GROWERS ALL OVER THE COUNTRY WRITE SIMILAR LETTERS

OSSINING, N. Y.
I have used your FUMIGATING POWDER for some years and I have always found it first-class; there is no danger of it killing anything except the green fly, which it does with dispatch. I never use anything else for insecticide, nor do I wish anything better.
Yours truly,
C. BARSON.

BATH, ME.
We use your Fumigating Powder and we are never troubled with aphids; it does not harm the blooms in the least, and we find it the cheapest way to fumigate—and we have tried everything that is on the market.
Yours truly,
JOHN H. RAMSEY & CO.

NORTHAMPTON INSANE HOSPITAL, MASS.
After using your Fumigating Powder I must say that in fifteen years' experience with various methods of killing aphids, I find this the most effectual and economical method I have yet tried.
Yours respectfully,
GEORGE W. THORNILY.

BAYSIDE, N. Y.
I have been using your Fumigating Powder for the last three years and find it very effective. It is cheaper than the extracts and does not shrivel the carnation as stems do. Smoking two nights in succession will kill the green fly.
Yours truly,
WM. BELL.

We will mail at your request our booklet telling about the FUMIGATING KIND TOBACCO POWDER. We guarantee satisfaction or money back. Free trial bags for the asking. THE H. A. STOOHOFF CO., Tobacco Powder Hobbyists, 118 West St., New York.

KANSAS CITY.

Business is starting out nicely and we all look forward to a good fall trade. There is plenty of good stock on the market here. The greenhouse men are all cutting good roses and carnations, the best we have had for a long time at this time of the year. American Beauties had the call the past week for our Priest of Pallas ball, but there were lots of them ready to be cut and no complaints were heard about not having enough.

The storemen have all about finished their painting and decorating and their stores look fine.

Geo. M. Kellogg is getting in a few chrysanthemums, but they are small as yet. Everything else looks good.

John H. Vesey has gone back to his old home for a few weeks' rest.

John E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., registers John E. Haines, deep scarlet, size three and one-half inches, free and early bloomer, good strong growth, never bursting calyx, and long stiff stems. Star of Bethlehem, pure yellow, very free, continuous bloomer, a strong grower, with long stiff stems and flowers three to three and one-half inches, with never bursting calyx. No. 77, a pure pink with three and one-half inch flower, a never bursting calyx, long stiff stems and very fragrant, free continual bloomer and very free grower, good for twelve months of the year. All in their fourth year.

LAWTON, MICH.—The heavy rains have about put an end to all hardy flowers. Asters were fine, but sweet peas nearly a failure on account of disease. The North Side Greenhouses shut down last winter, but started again this spring, with early vegetables. Allard's greenhouses have been repaired and repainted.

THE LIGHTNING POT WASHING MACHINE

in operation at
JOSEPH HEACOCK'S

JOSEPH HEACOCK, Rose and Palm Grower.

WYNCOTE, PA., October 7, 1908.

Mr. C. E. FINLEY, Joliet, Ill.

Dear Sir:—Yours of the 3rd was received yesterday. The brushes were received several days ago and being smaller answered our purpose better. I enclose a check to pay for the brushes and a small photograph to show you how we have it arranged. I am very much surprised at the skill and speed which my boys acquire. Three of them washed over 2000 2x3-inch pots in an hour. Yesterday they washed 10,600 2x3 rose pots from 8 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., taking half an hour for noon, put the pots away and refilled the tank in that time. The brush that I had bristles put in washed 10,000 2x3-inch pots, 4000 2-inch pots and 2500 3-inch pots and is not worn out yet. We think that it washes about five times as many as the other kind of brush, as the bristles being soft and yielding, they can make greater speed with it.

The young man using the machine takes a pot in his left hand, holds it on the brush an instant, lets go of it and places a scrubbing brush against the outside with the other hand. By the time he has grasped another pot the outside is washed with the scrubbing brush, and removing it the pot drops off. The operation is so simple and speedy that his left hand is in constant motion reaching for and holding the pot to the machine, while in his right hand is the scrubbing brush, which is placed to the pot the instant his hand is removed. The machine running at a high rate of speed seems to set the pace and the boys work accordingly.

I need not say that I am pleased with it. Pot washing has always been a slow, tedious and, because of the time it has taken, expensive job. Now it is robbed of all its terrors. We have made it a practice to wash all unused pots every summer, while the weather was warm. I now propose putting the tank in a warm place and, as it will be a short job, we can wash our pots at any time of the year.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH HEACOCK.

P. S.—I was afraid that the machine, running at such a rate of speed, would soon wear itself out, but so far the wear is scarcely perceptible.—J. H.

Testimonial

TOUGHKENAMON, Chester Co., Pa., Dec. 29, 1902.
MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.

Yours very truly, ROBERT C. BANCROFT.
